Early Settlers on the Pascagoula

For the first hundred years after the French came to the Mississippi Gulf Coast in 1699, the center of the white settlers in the Pascagoula area was the fort built by the French on Lake Catahoula in 1718. Of the leaders in the Pascagoula settlement, four names stand out, either as having land concessions, or as officials of the French government, or as permanent settlers: The Duchess de Chaumont, Joseph Simon de la Pointe, Jean Claude Dupont, and Hugo Ernestus (Renet) Krebs.

The Duchess of Chaumont had a land concession from Louis XIV which covered the Pascagoula area from the mouth of the river northward some eight miles, the headquarters of which was shown on a map of that time as on the west side of the river at what is now Martin's Bluff. It is doubtful that the Duchess ever visited her "plantations" and there is no evidence that it was ever a profitable holding to her.

Joseph Simon de la Pointe, reputedly an admiral in the French navy, was appointed by the French government about 1717 to build a fort on Lake Catahoula, now Krebs Lake, as a protection against possible Indian depredations. How well this fort was constructed is attested by the fact that over two hundred years later it is still being used as an historical museum. As to de la Pointe himself, Hamilton's Colonial Mobile says, "A land concession on Fish River, Nov. 12, 1715 to Joseph Simon de la Pointe, the father of Madame Krebs. His name occurs often in the church records as the father of Madame Krebs." After a year at the fort, ill health caused him to resign his commission and return to France, but he later returned to the colony to live. A map under date of 1732 shows "Habitation of Sieur de la Pointe" on Lake Catahoula.

Jean Claude Dupont, an officer in the French navy, was named to succeed de la Pointe as commander of the French outpost. In 1763 he is listed as one of the signers of the oath of allegiance to England when that country took over all the French colonies in America. In 1791 he and his wife are named as the grandparents of "Charles Renet Krebs, the legitimate son of Joseph Krebs and Maria Louisa Dupont."

Hugo Ernestus (Renet) Krebs, the first Krebs to come to Pascagoula, has been isolated and identified by his will written in Spanish in New Orleans in 1776. In this will he gives his correct name as Hugo Ernestus Krebs and states that he was from Neumagen on the Moselle, Germany, and that he left fourteen grown children. A Hugo Emestus Krebs is listed as one of the signers of the oath of allegiance mentioned above, evidently a misreading of Hugo Ernestus. The birth certificate of Charles Renet Krebs, found at St. Louis Cathedral in New Orleans, Hugo Renet Krebs and Maria Josepha de la Pointe are named as the paternal grandparents.

Records from the Krebs Cemetery

The Krebs cemetery at the old Fort was neglected for many years and as it stands, many of the oldest mausoleums are just piles of brick with no identifying markers. Tradition has it that the first grave made there was for Marie Josepha de la Pointe, Madame Krebs, but there is no marker to confirm this. The earliest date of record in the cemetery is 1764, the birth date of Maria Louise Krebs, written on the same marker with her daughter, Marie Josephine Delmas. In spite of the dearth of the earliest dates, there is a wealth of historical materials confirming family outlines.

Baptismal Certificate of Carlos Renet Krebs

On May 11, 1791, in the parish church of St. Louis in New Orleans Province of Louisiana, was baptized Carlos Renet Krebs, born on February 6 of last year, legitimate son of Josef Krebs and Maria Luisa Dupont, born in Mobile, living in Pascagoula.

Paternal Grandparents: Hugo Renet Krebs and Maria Josefa de la Puente, born in Rosel, France.

Maternal Grandparents: Juen Claude Dupon and Maria Juana Dione, born in Mobile.

Godparents: Carlos Luis Blacha and Pelagia Lorenza, living in this parish.

(Signed) Father Diego de Carriedo.

Rene Krebs under the same date stated that Paul, Basile, and Hypolite were "the children of the widow of Augustin Krebs."

Sehr geehrte Miss Rapier!

Die Stadtverwaltung Trier hat Ihr Schreiben vom 16.1o.67 an uns zur Erledigung weitergeleitet. Wir haben festgestellt Die Eltern Ihres Vorfahren, Johann Kriebs und Anna Charitas Fritsch, heirateten am 14.2.17o2 in Neumagen. Leider ist der Heiratseintrag ohne Elternangaben. Die Taufe des Johann Kriebs kann ohnehin nicht mehr festgestellt werden, da die frühesten Kirchenbücher von Neumagen 1688 beginnen. Anna Charitas Fritsch ist als Tochter der Eheleute Reiner Fritsch und Catharina .... am 24.3.1682 in Trittenheim /Mosel geboren. Aus der Ehe Johann Kriebs- Anna Charitas Fritsch gingen die nachstehenden Kinder hervor:

22. 1.17o3	Susanna	15. 3.1712	Anna Maria Catharin
18. 3.17o5	Gertrud	15. 5.1713	Hugo Ernst
1. 5.17o6	Johann Reinard	27. 8.1716	Maria Anna
15. 5.17o8	Johann Gerlach	28. 2.1721	Johann Peter
18.1o.17o9	Catharina

Der Vater Johann Kriebs starb am 12.1o.1751 (Ohne Altersangabe
Die Mutter starb erst am 4.3.1773.
Angaben über Erziehung, Ausbildung, Militärzeit von Hugo Ernst sowie über Beruf des Vaters sind aus den Promotionslisten der Universit Trier sowie aus den Kirchenbüchern Neumagen nicht zu ersehen Vielleicht kann man annehmen, dass der Pate von Hugo Ernst, der Canonicus vom Stift St.Paulin in Trier, Hugo Ernst Brau etwas für die Erziehung und Ausbildung seines Patenkindes getan hat.

Regarding Family Investigation, Kriebs, Krebs - Neumagen

The City Officals of Trier sent your writing of Oct. 16, 1967 to us for futher Investigation. We found out the following: The parents of your ancestors JOHANN KRIEBS and ANNA CHARITAS FRITSCH were married on Feb. 14, 1702 in Neumagen. Sorry, the marriage License is intered without . The Baptism of Johann Kriebs therefore can not be testified, because the earliest Church books of Neumagen began in 1688. Anna Charitas Fritsch, daughter of Reiner Fritsch and Catharina ------- is born on March 24, 1682 in Trittenheim / Mosel. From the marriage union of Johann Kriebs and Anna Charitas Fritsch were born the following children:

Jan. 22, 1703 Susanna
Mar. 18, 1705 Gertrud
May 1, 1706 Johann Reinard
May 15, 1708 Johann Gerlach
Oct. 18, 1709 Catharina
March 15, 1712 Anna Maria Catharina
May 15, 1714 Hugo Ernst
Aug. 27, 1716 Maria Anna
Feb. 28, 1721 Johann Peter

The father Johann Kriebs died Oct. 12, 1751 (without his age given). His mother died March 4, 1773.

About the education, studies, and time served in Military Service of Hugo Ernst and the Vocation of his father is list of University of Trier, nor the Church books of Neumagen given. May be we can apprehend, that the Godfather of Hugo Ernst, the Cananicus of Stift St. Paulin in Trier, Hugo Ernst Braun, was responsible for the education and higher studies for his Godchild

Hearty Greetings

IN REPLY, MARK LETTER 9-666-67

Mrs. Regina Rapier
1157 University Drive, N.E.
Atlanta, Ga/USA.

REF: Family research Kriebs/Krebs,Neumagen/bzw.Kues.

Dear Mrs. Rapier:

The earliest entry of Kriebs in the KB from Neumagen-Dhron, starting in 1689, is, as you know, the marriage certificate of Joh. Kriebs and Anna Charitas Frischs dated February 12, 1703. The bridegroom is specifically mentioned to come from Neumagen. It is, therefore, impossible to construct a connection between Kriebs/Krebs from Kues and also not between the Cardinal Nicolaus Cusanus who was born 300 years ago in 1401.

Best regards.

Sehr geehrte Mrs.Rapier!
Der früheste Eintrag „Kriebs" in den 1689 beginnenden KB von Neumagen-Dhron ist der Ihnen bekannte Heiratseintrag des Joh.Kriebs -Anna Charitas Frischs v.12.2.1703.Der Bräutigam wird hier ausdrücklich als aus Neumagen stammend bezeichnet. Es ist daher auf diese Weise nicht möglich,eine Verbindung zu den Namensträgern „Kriebs/Krebs" aus Kues herzustellen, erst recht nicht zu den 300 Jahre vorher (1401) in Kues geborenen Kardinal Nicolaus Cusanus.

THE LAST WILL AND TESTAMENT OF HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS

EXECUTED BEFORE JUAN BAUTISTA GARIC, NOTARY PUBLIC AT NUEVA ORLEANS, PROVINCIA de la LUISIANA, SEPTEMBER 21, 1776

Translated and Commented upon by: George Senac Rapier

FOREWORD

Professor J. Hanno DEILER referred to the will of HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS, and even gave the names of his children by the first and second marriages. However, since his death the will has seemed to be 'lost'. Miss Regina RAPIER had urged me to institute a search for it in public records, but it simply stayed on my cluttered agenda.

A few months ago, Mr. Hewitt L. FORSYTH, Editor of NEW ORLEANS GENESIS, told me that a Dr. (academic, not M.D.) SANDOZ, a lady and a professor at one of our universities, had discovered the will; so, a search for Dr. SANDOZ was added to my list of 'things to do when ---'. Then, out of a clear sky, a facsimile arrived from Miss RAPIER, in Spanish handwriting of the XVIII century.

Casually perusing this quaint document, it was impossible to miss the error in arithmetic when KREBS lists the children of his first marriage who were to receive 200 Pesos each; and to whom he had already given 150 each, leaving a balance of 100! This, then, required more than a translation; it required a thorough and meticulous study, which I undertook myself. This one document could be the subject of a dissertation.

By coincidence, when I had completed my rough draft, Mrs. Dugue BENDERNAGEL (Marcelle JARREAU) visited us, to see what I had on KREBS, because she, too, descends from him. Mrs. B. Frank ESHLEMAN was there also; her daughter married my nephew, so some of her grandchildren also descend from KREBS. When I read aloud (see p. 1 of will following) that the youngest child of the first marriage, named Marie, had married a man named GARDINIJO, Mrs. BENDERNAGEL objected, saying that it was her ancestress, Marguerite, who contracted that marriage; moreover, the man's name is GRADENIGO, not GARDINIJO!! Mrs. BENDERNAGEL went even further. She had with her the coat of arms of this Venetian nobleman and proof of the said marriage.

This accidental but fortunate meeting made me re-evaluate the entire document. It is interesting to note the last line which acknowledges two 'borradas', but there are no erasures or places where words were struck out. After two hundred years, nobody will ever know which parts would have been invalidated, but I strongly suspect that the 'de Bai-' after the name of his oldest child, and the correction of the wife of GRADENIGO may have been them. Furthermore, when he tells how many Pesos he has given his children by the first marriage, he does state that Margarita is the wife of GRADENIGO and says nothing about Maria. Could this daughter have been Margarita Maria?

And the second marriage was contracted with Marianna CHAUVIN, alias Joyeuse, and from this marriage we have the following children:

PASCAGOULA LIBRARY
GENEALOGY COLLECTION

Hugo, aged 20 years
Raphael, aged 19 years
Theresa, aged 16 years
Anna Charite, aged 14 years
Bazilio, aged 12 years
Maria Roza, aged 10 years
Cecilia, aged 9 years

Item: I declare that before contracting the second marriage I had an inventory taken of all the goods that remained at the death of my first wife, including appreciation in value, which amounted to 9,000 Pounds, one-half of which belonged to me and the other half to my children of the said marriage as heirs of their mother, and by agreement reached before the Justice of Mobile I consented to give to each one of my said first children 200 Pesos. I have given to:

Francisco 150 Pesos; to Joseph the same amount; to Augustin the same; to Pedro another 150 Pesos;

so that these do not have to receive on account of their mother but another 100 Pesos each, which amounts shall be paid out of my succession.

I also declare that no accounting has been made of the portion which belongs to Maria Josepha NARBONA, she having been given nothing.

I also declare that I have paid to Margarita, wife of GARDINIJO, the portion above-mentioned (to the sons) and an additional 100 Pesos should be accounted for out of the corpus of my estate at my death.

Item: I declare that the second marriage which I contracted with Marianna CHAUVIN was, as the first one, contracted under the laws and customs of Paris; and that Dona Marianna CHAUVIN brought as her dowry 100 Pesos in conformity with our marriage contract, and that afterwards I received 240 Pesos which she received as her inheritance from her mother, totalling the sum of 340 Pesos in accordance with the terms of the said marriage contract, of all of which one-third belongs to the community. Consequently, my said wife shall not take but 226 Pesos, 5 1/2 Reales before the partition. She will also have to take 300 Pesos which are assured for the Vicar and 100 Pesos for the principle; all of which is contained in said marriage contract.

The balance of my goods shall be divided in two equal parts, one for my said wife and the other for my children; my wife acting as trustee, pending the final partition, for the children of my first marriage. Besides that which belongs to my present wife, she will also have to take 900 Pesos accrued during this marriage of the half which belongs to me out of the first inventory and these present accounts. The balance shall be divided in two equal halves, the one for all my children and the other for my wife. And to the part that belongs to my children shall be added the 900 Pesos that shall be procured out of the corpus of my estate. Then the total shall be divided among all my children of the first and second marriages and partitioned among them in equal parts; thus discharging my conscience and in compliance with the laws under which we have contracted matrimony and to which we have subscribed.

Item: To the extent that my children of my aforementioned second marriage are minors, under twenty-five years of age, and for this reason are incapable of administering their estates, or in the case of their death, I name and appoint as Curator M. CHASTAN, the Major, because of the confidence I have in him, and believing that he will take care of this charge and for this purpose I give to him all the power that I possess and which he may need under the Royal laws.

Item: In all matters that it may be necessary to administer this, my testament, I name and elect my wife, Mariana CHAUVIN, giving her all the power necessary and that may be required.

Item: I desire, and it is my wish, that all my debts be paid, not only those that are secured by public writings, but all others that are debts in conscience. And of the remaining of my goods, rights and actions which belong to me and can be enforced I name as my legitimate and universal heirs my aforementioned children of my first and second marriages so that they may have and inherit equally with the blessing of God, and mine.

This is my last will and testament, which I wish defended and executed. I hope for the mercy of God our Lord and that he will take me to himself. And moreover, I hereby revoke and annul any and all wills and codicils that I may have heretofore made, by word of mouth or in any other manner; so that faith may be had in this (will) which I now sign.

Signed in the City of New Orleans, where I am ill, this the twenty-first day of September, Seventeen Hundred and Seventy-six, the witnesses being Don Joseph Adrien de la PLAZA, Don Luis LIOTEAU and Don Antonio REBOUL, inhabitants of this City, present, and I will sign this document which I understand and sign.

Dear Krebs Relatives:
(Particularly those interested in establishing the correct line for Pierre and Louis Augustin Krebs)

I am making this a joint letter to you all in order to avoid having to repeat the information outlined herein a number of times.

Thanks to the current issue of the New Orleans Genesis, the archivist of the St. Louis Cathedral, and to a letter sent me months ago by Mr. Francis Latady of Birmingham, I am able to state with certainty that the two children listed as Ynes Creps and Estefana Creps in the Baptismal Records in that issue are in fact Agnes Krebs, who married Pierre Senac, and Emerante (or Amie) Krebs, who married Mariano Latady. This can be done because of the actual birth records which are given in the Spanish record of baptism. The two children were brought to New Orleans by their parents, Pedro Creps and Juana Durif, for baptism on the same day (about 1780 -- unfortunately the Xerox copy I have did not go back far enough for the date at the begining of that days baptisms) and the birth date of each child is given: Ynes was born Jan 12, 1778 and Estefana was born Jan 15, 1780.

The latter date is important in establishing that Estefana was later known as Emerante, whom we know from all family records to have been Agnes Krebs' sister.

Mariano Latady, husband of Emerante Krebs, wrote down that very date, Jan. 15, 1780, as his wife's birth date, and Mr. Francis Latady, his great-grandson, wrote several months ago that he has that date written down in Mariano Latady's original handwriting.

Therefore, Emerante Krebs was the child of Pierre Krebs and Jeanne Durif, born 1-15-1780, and Agnes Krebs was the Ynes (Spanish for Agnes) born two years earlier, 1-12-1778, also the child of Pierre Krebs and Jeanne Durif.

Translated, the entry from Baptismal Book I (Entry 544) 1777-1786, reads as follows:

Item, the same day, I baptized solemly Ynes, born the 12 of Jan. 1778 and Estefana, born the 15 of Jan. 1780, legitimate daughters of Pedro Creps and Juana Durif, his wife. Godparents of the first, Augustin Creps and Juana Durif, and of the second, Pedro Creps and Juana Creps.

The next entry, #545, translated: Item, the sam day I solemnly baptised Madalena, born the 26 of October 1779, legitimate daughter of Augustin Creps and Madalena Durif, his wife. Godparents, Pedro Creps and Juana Durif.

Also of interest is the preceding item, # 543: Item, the sam dey I solemnly baptised Jose Creps, born 15 September, 1779, legitimate son of Franco Creps and Elena Moro, his wife. Godparents were (Sr?) Moro and Infrancia Lami.

That child of Francis Krebs and Helene Maurau de Belleisle must have died young, as Francis is known to have left Louis Augustin's children as his heirs.

And just before that, #542, names Hugo Creps (evidently Daniel Hugo) and Maria Anna Chauvin, as godparents for one of the Lebat children.

Incidentally, the birth date for Agnes (Ynes) Krebs is verified closely by her tombstone record, for she died in 1848, and her age is given to be 71. I still have not found any Aline Petit, and unless Pierre Krebs married a second time before he died in 1807 and named her in his estate records, we will have to ascribe her to an erroneous tradition. Best wishes, and hope this will help complete the "tree".

Sincerely, your cousin,
Regina Bauler

WHAT'S THE NAME, PLEASE?
By George Sénac Rapier.
July 17, 1971.

Perhaps the most serious mistake I made in "My Sons: Who Are You?" is that I stated we descend from the first wife of Augustin (or Agostino) Krebs, Aline Petit. After publication, the baptism of her daughter Agnes (Ynez) came to light and it became clear that we descend from his second wife, Madeleine Durif (Duriff, Duriffe). So, in a search of other baptisms, hoping to find maternal grandparents clearly listed, I find myself in quite a quandary!

In 1752, Father Dagobert baptised Charles Durif, and states:

[illegible] fils né en legitime mariage de Dominique Durif nommé habitant [illegible] Cecile Sappé son epouse le parrain a été mr Charles le roy [illegible]

Here the mother's name looks like Cecile Sappé, does it not?

In 1755, the same Father Dagobert, at the baptism of Cecile, repeats the same spelling, though the capital S is clearer:

[illegible] fille née en legitime mariage de Dominique Durif habitant [illegible] Cecille Sappé son epouse le [illegible]

In 1756, however, Father Sebastian, although making the capital S even clearer, and using the same spelling, places an accent-grave rather than accent-aigue over the final letter, è, which gives it a slightly different pronunciation.

[illegible] sept de ce mois en legitime mariage de Dominique Durif et de [illegible] Cecille Sappè son epouse le parrain a été [illegible]

But, the following year, 1757, the same Father Sebastian seems to spell Durif's wife's maiden name S-a-p-e-t (?) :-

[illegible] de l'eglise Dominique honoré [illegible] neuf du mois passés en legitime mariage de [illegible] Dominique Durif et de Cecille Sapet son epouse [illegible]

Finally, a generation later, Father Brady, when baptizing her grandson Hipolito, he writes this lady's maiden name in a manner that can be taken as 'Sarpi' or San Pe (St. Pe)(?).

[illegible] legitimo de Agustino Crespes y de Madalena Duriffes vecinos de Mobila, abuelos paternos Benes Crespes y Maria Josefa [illegible] maternos Dominico Duriffe y Cecilia Sarpi [illegible]

Dear Mrs. Krebs,

I enclose a typewritten report on the Krebs family which was among the possessions of my wife's grandfather Charles Leonce Poché, grandson of Natalie Krebs who in turn was granddaughter of Charles René Krebs. It contains a great deal of information but its form is quite confusing. Note that it repeats much of the same information twice and that this helps to clear up some of the confusion. I am trying to find the original source of the material and when I do I will furnish you with a more accura copy if one exists. Perhaps you already have all of this information. I also enclose a map of the Mosel river showing Neumagen which does not appear on most maps.

I have bought the charts and book you mentioned from Mrs. Gautier and she sent along several interesting leaflets. Mr. Cain's two volumes have also been most helpful.

Thank you very much for the abundant material which you sent. I have copied much of it and I now enclose it in this registered package. Also enclosed is your list of cemetery inscriptions which you sent earlier. I speak Spanish and German and have travelled the Mosel river from Trier to the Rhine by bicycle. I have been in all the little places mentioned in the Krebs history and plan to return there next summer. Your material and that collected by Regina Rapier is fascinating. It was very kind of you to send so much. You have saved me months of research.

My wife and I may be over that way about New Year and will try to stop by to introduce ourselves if you will be there. We will be visiting family in Mobile and would also like to stop to see the fort.

Sincerely yours,

vecino de la puerto de la Mobile, actualmente en esta ciudad" (New Orleans), declared in his last will and testament, made before notary Juan Bautista Garic of New Orleans, in 1776, that he was born the legitimate son of Juan Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritz and was born at Neumagen in the archdiocese of Treves(Trier), Germany.

The time of his arrival in Louisiana is not known. His first wife was Marie Josepha Lapointe of Pascagoula. There were seven children from this marriage whom the father enumerates in his testament, as follows: Joseph Simon, age estimated by father in 1776 33 yrs, christened acc. to Mobile records Jan.11th, 1742
Francois, age estimated by father in 1776, 32 yrs, christened acc. to Mobile records, Jan. 20th, 1743.
Pierre, age estimated by father in 1776, 30 yrs, christened acc. to Mobile records, Dec 29th 1743.
Maria Josepha, age estimated by father in 1776,28 yrs,christened acc. to Mobile records, Dec.28th,1745.
Louis Augustin, age estimated by father in 1776,29yr,christened acc. to Mobile records,1750.
Marguerite, age estimated by father in 1776,26 yrs,christened acc. to Mobile records,1749.
Marie Gredingo, age estimated by father in 1776 26 yrs.

The statements of the testator do not always agree with the church records of Mobile which I examined. Differences in ages may be accounted for by the fact that there was no priest stationed in Pascagoula so that the children had to be brought to Mobile, and that often many months and sometimes even some years passed after the birth of a child before the christening took place. And then a father cannot be expected to remember the exact ages of so large a number of children--it takes a mother's memory to do that.

Instead of "Maria Josepha" the Mobile record has "Marie Jeanne". But it seems that the priest made a mistake in writing down "Jeanne", as this daughter on all other occasions is called "Josephine". It will also be noticed that the mother's name was "Josepha", so that it seems probable that the eldest daughter was named after her mother.

Furthermore there was a son by the name of "Mathias Krebs" christened in Mobile on the 8th of March 1747. This son must have died before the father made his last will amd testament.

And then "Marguerite" Krebs married Gredingo in March 1776. Her full name was "Marie Marguerite", but the notary separated the two names. This does away with "Marie" for whom no baptismal record can be found and leaves six children from the first wife living at the time of the making of the last will and testament.

Marie Josepha Lapointe, the first wife of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, died on the 7th of Nov.,1751. The estate was then appraised at 9000 livres, Therese, in 1778, married Jos. Labbat from the diocese of Bordeaux. In 1797 Marie Therese Krebs, "viuda Don Jose Labat", then a resident of New Orleans, gives notarial consent to the marriage of her daughter Marie Elizabeth Labat, with Bartholoemew Pellerin, a Lt. of Infantry.

Anna Charite Krebs married on Nov 4, 1778, in New Orleans, Francois de Buiason of New Orleans.

On the 12th of Nov. 1715, Joseph Simon de Lapointe received from Gov. Cadillac a grant of land on Massacre Island "one league from north to south, west front of one league on the sea facing Grand Bay", for the purpose of establishing a large cattle range. It is possible that this land was abondoned after 1717, when the great storm, which ruined the harbor of Massacre Islandand destroyed part of the island. On a map drawn about 1732 and published in Hamilton's "Colonial Mobile" there is on the east side of the mouth of Pascagoula River marked "Habitation du Sieur Lapointe". "Sieur" was at that time the title given to all who held land grants from the govt. There, in East Pascagoula, was where Hugo Ernestus Krebs married and lived for many years. Descendants of him still live there and own land.

1810 Antonio Krebs and Brigida Krebs get dispense to marry in 2nd degree.

1816 Jose Krebs of Pascagoula and Eleonore Deflou get dispense for the same thing.

1816 12/1 Joseph Krebs married Eleon ra Hindenberg, a widow.

To Krebs Family

John Gradenigo moved to Opelousas,where his name appears,in 1796 as president of the trustees of the church of the Immaculate Conception. In a marginal note in the church records of Opelousas the parish priest, Father Barriere, gives the following account of him

"Juan de Gradenigo was born in Venice, the son of a very distinguished family. His uncle was a Canonof St. Mark's Cathedr of Venice. A large number of the male members of this family served the Republic of Venice in the capacity of senators and ambassadors. One of the paternal ancestors was even Doge of that world-famed commercial Republice in 1356. When still a young man,Ju took a liking to travel. He visitedthe whole of Europe and travele extensively in North and South America. During one of these trips he came to Mobile, where he fell in love with a Miss Margarite Krebs, the daughter of a rich German of that place. A son was born to the couple in Dec.1781, and baptized Nov.17,1782. Later on the boy was sent to Venice to his kin people, where he was to acquire an education in keeping with the traditions of this illustrious family and for which there was no opportunityin the colonies. When Napoleon was sent to Egypt by the Directoire, young Juan ran away from his kin, bid adieu to the city of the Lagoons and followed the Corsican adventurer into the land of the Pharaos. There,in the burning sands at the foot of the pyramids,he is supposed to have perished. No news ever reached the anxiously waiting parents in the far away post of the Opelousas."

Barriere winds up this very interesting bit of family history with the words: "Don Martin Duralde and myself were particular friends of Mr. De Gradenigo. Still,we never tried to solve the mystery which surrounded his emigration to La. He died in this country(Opelousas) and was buried March 1, 1809.

Dear Mrs. Krebs,

I enclose a typewritten report on the Krebs family which was among the possessions of my wife's grandfather Charles Leonce Poché, grandson of Natalie Krebs who in turn was granddaughter of Charles René Krebs. It contains a great deal of information but its form is quite confusing. Note that it repeats much of the same information twice and that this helps to clear up some of the confusion. I am trying to find the original source of the material and when I do I will furnish you with a more accurate copy if one exists. Perhaps you already have all of this information. I also enclose a map of the Mosel river showing Neumagen which does not appear on most maps.

I have bought the charts and book you mentioned from Mrs. Gautier and she sent along several interesting leaflets. Mr. Cain's two volumes have also been most helpful.

Thank you very much for the abundant material which you sent. I have copied much of it and I now enclose it in this registered package. Also enclosed is your list of cemetery inscriptions which you sent earlier. I speak Spanish and German and have travelled the Mosel river from Trier to the Rhine by bicycle. I have been in all the little places mentioned in the Krebs history and plan to return there next summer. Your material and that collected by Regina Napier is fascinating. It was very kind of you to send so much. You have saved me months of research.

My wife and I may be over that way about New Year and will try to stop by to introduce ourselves if you will be there. We will be visiting family in Mobile and would also like to stop to see the fort.

Sincerely yours,

David A. Sandberg

AND

GENEALOGY AND HISTORY NOTES ON:

COLON, ROCHON, TROUILLET, DeMOUY AND VON KREBS FAMILIES AND CONNECTIONS

The introduction of the name of Innerarity on the Gulf Coast at both Pensacola and Mobile was when the firm of Panton, Leslie & Co.,[1] opened for business. Panton divided with Mather the commerce of West Florida, and Pensacola became their head business before extending to Mobile, and after doing so, Mather & Strother disappear, and John Joyce (their successor) turned contractor. As merchants of Mobile, Panton, Leslie & Co. petitioned for a vacant lot on Royal Street running back from the river, bounded north by the land of Miguel Eslava, south by vacant land. As granted September 16, 1795, the lot had 60-foot front and according to Olivier, the Spanish governor of Mobile, was eligibly situated for commercial purposes. It was the northeast corner of Royal and Government Streets, extending eastwardly to the river.

Panton, Leslie & Co. had not been long in possession before they determined on a great improvement. At that time Royal Street was the front street, and Panton, Leslie & Co.'s lot was only one of a number of lots extending from the east side of Royal Street toward the river. Their motive was to improve the shallow lagoon that ran between a shell bank that ran the entire length of Royal Street near the shore and created in summer a stagnant and offensive odor. It also interfered with ready access to water of loading depth. The firm determined to fill the marsh out to the shell reef, and therefor file a petition in due form. It was warmly endorsed by the Spanish governor Olivier, and on April 25, 1798, was granted by Gayoso.

The firm of Panton, Leslie & Co., which began this reclamation, was destined under that and the later name of John Foster & Co.,[2] to attain to great importance at Mobile and Pensacola. It was composed at first of John Forbes, William Panton and John Leslie.

Panton was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and, moving to America, he acquired property in South Carolina and Georgia. The American Revolutionary War made him a refugee, and by 1785, if not before,[2] he was in business in Pensacola. He made a specialty of the Indian trade, in which the firm was aided by the celebrated chief Alexander been engaged in a mammoth trade with with the Souther, Indians from the year of 1783. This firm had six houses besides its principal establishment at Pensacola. In 1803, James Innerarity became a partner. He resided in Mobile and took great interest in all public matters, and in 1817 was president of the commissioners of the town of Mobile. The members of this firm in all periods of existence were Scotsmen and all related. They were influential with the government under which they lived, and exercised unmeasured control over the Indian tribes with which they dealt."

The Rev. John Davidson in his "Inverarie and the Earldom of Garioch", published at Edinburg, Scotland, by David Douglas (and at Aberdeen by A. Brown & Co.) in 1878, gives extensive references to the Leslies and the Pantons, the connections of the Innerarity family.

Marquis James, the writer whose novel "Andrew Jackson and the Border Raider" was published in the early 1830's, wrote to Mr. Lewis A.R. Innerarity (2 Rector Street, New York) the following of James Innerarity, the head of Forbes & Co. of Pensacola:

"Innerarity spent his time alternately between Pensacola and Mobile, in both of which places Forbes & Co. maintained a trading house..... There is very little in print on Innerarity. Paron & Bassett's biographies of Jackson mention him... It is possible that R.L.Campbell's "Historical Sketches of Florida" may have something to say about him, but in main my vague picture of this interesting man was put together from casual references here and there, derived from the study of a vast number of manuscripts, and from my perusal of General Jackson's report to the Secretary of State on the Vidal Incident.#This is printed in the American State Papers (Foreign Relations 4, and Misc. 2) and is voluminous. In full I would say that it runs as long as my entire book. Reference to Panton, Leslie & Co. and its successor Forbes & Co., and to Innerarity and various others I have found in copies of the Spanish archives in the Lawson-McGhee Library in Knoxville; retired classified files, Creek and Seminole, in the Indian Bureau at Washington, Etc..."

"My father tells me that his grandfather (James Innerarity) married a Spanish countess, who owned very large coffee and sugar plantations in Cuba. He does not know her name. There are a number of court records involving litigation over land owned by the family. I am sorry I haven't the citations available here. One was decided by the U. S. Supreme Court (circa 1908) and is reported (I think) in 203 U. S. Reports. The title is Forbes et al vs. Dalcour. It gives a very long list of heirs. One million nine hundred odd thousand acres of land in Florida were involved. My father was one of the defendants. Another suit in the Alabama courts was decided sometime between 1910 and 1913, involving the land comprising substantially all of the business district of the City of Mobile. There are two other Supreme Court cases in which the Innerarity's figure. One is reported (I think) in 11 Wall.

"I understand that there is a Fred Innerarity (the Rector in charge of the Episcopal Cathedral of Toronto, Ontario) who has a full family history; but I have never communicated with him.

"Douglas' Baronage, printed in about 1760, shows seven Barons of Innerarity...in a straight line originating in about 1260, the original ancestor being the ancestor of the present Duke of Argyll (or Airlie) family. This publication contains extensive references to the ~~Innerarity~~ INNERCARARITY (or Inverquharity) family, and shows a number of family trees in which John and James Inverquharity appear. I procured a copy of this work (intwo volumes) from London for about $12.50. Douglas' Baronage is out of print, but I procured Photostats of the pages (Four) for $2.50 from the New York Public Library....."

"My cousin Mrs. Joseph Alfred Blythe (586 Walnut Street, New Orleans) can doubtless give.....a great deal more information about the family than I. In fact I have never made any effort to compile any data; and the information I have, outside the Bible record, resulted from my inquiry of the Librarian of the New York Public Library (after I had read of the exploits of the 'Knight of Inverquharity' in Sir Walter Scott's 'Quentin Durward'. As you doubtless know, the letters 'nn' and 'NV' are used interchangeably in Scottish names. The letters 'quh' are pronounced as 'wh' in 'where'.

"My father (L. M. Innerarity of Laurel, Maryland) advises me that Messrs. Hamilton, Kinnear & Beaton, Q. C., of Edinburg were trustees under my Grandfather's will, and should be able to give all desired information.""James Innerarity married beautiful Louise Trouillet, and in his own or her name (says Hamilton) acquired land."

The government of the Mobile district was, of course, military at first..with a general in charge.....During the Creek war the territorial legislature of Mississippi (on January 21, 1814 - after the battle of the Holy Ground) passed an act for the incorporation of the Mobile citizens. Under it, on March 11, 1814, a meeting of the inhabitants was held at the house of M. McKinsey with Josiah Blakely in the chair, and it was resolved to hold the election at the dwelling house of Wilson Carmon. These residences cannot be identified, but were no doubt like the few Spanish one-story buildings (or story and a half with dormer windows) still remaining in Mobile. Lewis Judson, James Innerarity and B. Dubroca were appointed commissioners (inspectors we would now call them), and Innerarity and Samuel Acre (the Lawyer) formed a committee to prepare a few translations of the act into French, to be posted up conspicuously in public places. These peaceful affairs were contemporaneous with General Jackson's march to Horse Shoe Bend. The polls were accordingly opened at Carmon's on Monday, March 14, from ten to four o'clock. Lewis Judson, James Innerarity, B. Dubroca, P. H. Hobart, T. Powell, A. Robesbow, and S. H. Garrow were duly elected Commissioners of the town of Mobile: Miguel Eslava treasurer, Michael McKinsey collector, and Dominique Salles assessor....a mixture (says Hamilton) of the old and the new stocks. How many property owners were there to vote we do not know, but three years later at a similar election, only seventeen voters were mentioned, although we have the names of over a hundred male residents.

The next day the Commissioners were sworn in to office by Josiah Blakeley, as one of the justices of the quorum of Mobile County. James Innerarity was elected President, and McKinsey clerk. On March 16th, a business meeting was held, its first acts being the appointment of a committee on rules on motion of S. H. Garrow, and then a resolution establishing the boundaries of the town and of the three wards, and also one fixing the tax rate at twelve and a half cents on the hundred dollars. The town limits began at Choctaw Point, then ran due west to where a perpendicular line due north would strike Murrell's Ford over Bayou Chateauguay (Three Mile Creek), thence down that creek to the east side of the river, thence south to the beginning. These are substantially what the boundaries have now long been; but an act of the legislature of December 1, 1814, made them triangular, running from Choctaw Point to a place 200 yards above the Portage on Bayou Chateauguay, thence down the bayou to its mouth, thence down the river and bay to the place of beginning.[1]

The above information shows with the beginning of Mobile as a town at the beginning of American times and places James Innerarity as a prominent and responsible asset by his election to the first City Commission as "first commissioner executive. He was often referred to by his previous business connections as the managing man for Forbes & Co., and Zadek's old corner (SW Dauphin and Royal Streets) was owned by that progressive firm. It can be noted that the progressiveness of James Innerarity was a "go further" spirit, and that from the gabled Church of the Immaculate Conception at NW Conti and Royal Streets to Dauphin Street and thus including Van Antwerpt's corner, was later the property of James Innerarity, who seems to have acquired it from John Joyce.[2]

James Innerarity was elected president of the new or second board of Commissioners of Mobile (1815), although Lewis Judson was also a member. During Innerarity's incumbency on the board, the construction of Water Street took place from Government to the market place at Dauphin Street. This great improvement, giving Mobile its first street east of Royal Street, was accomplished during this and the next year (1815-1816), largely by the cooperation of John Forbes & Co. and Lewis Judson, who moved their fences voluntarily and contributed to payment of expense in consideration of a grant claim to lands between the projected street and their fence to the west.[1]

Appearing in The Mobile Daily Commercial Register and Patriot (July 11, 1838) is the following notice published in both Spanish and English, and among the oldest of the later records of American Mobile, with which James Innerarity had a part:

The object of the meeting was stated by the Vice-Consul of Spain, and the following officers were unanimously elected:

President: Don Miguel de Eslava
Vice-President: Don Jayme (James) Innerarity
Secretary: Don Bartolome Lopez
Treasurer: Don Eugene Latady[1]

Directors: Rev. John Bazin, Don Claro Fernandez, Dr. Don Fernando Moreno, and Don Ramon Soto

The Rt. Reverend Bishop M. Portier was elected an Honorary Director, with the privilege of a vote and of the Chair.

The object of this Society is to promote the prosperity of the Spanish citizens residing in Mobile; to extend the hand of beneficence to their fellow-countrymen who may immigrate hither, and to relieve generally the necessities of the unfortunate, the orphan and the widow."

Note: The Don Miguel de Eslava (correctly Don Miguel de Siderio de Eslava - or, as he always signed himself: M. D. Eslava) was the eldest son of the Great Don Miguel de Eslava, who figured as Spanish Commissary of Mobile, and who died before 1824.

The French dramatist Marc Antoine Jacques Rochon de Chabannes, who was born in Paris January 25, 1730, and died there on May 15, 1800, was a connection of the Mobile Rochon family.[1] Rochon de Chabannes wrote a great number of successful comedies, published under the titles: "Theatre"(1786), also "Slowful Nobility"(1756) and "Philosophic and Moral Discourse" (1768). A rare copy of his "Le Jeleux" (comedy in five acts in free verse) sold for a high price at the American Art Association - Anderson Galleries, Inc., New York City, on Tuesday November 27, 1934.

The above shows that as both d'Iberville and de Bienville were both titles added to the sur-name of LeMoyne (e.g. "Sieur d'Iberville", "Sieur de Bienville", "Sieur de Chateaugue", "Sieur de Ste. families of Preau, Colin (or Colon), Troillet (originally de Trouillet), Dekay [illegible] and the later in-marriages of de Juzan and Hollinger, etc., and even the Irish [illegible] clan of Powers. These families all had coats-of-arms, some retaining and some dropping their inheritance and marks of rank.

HISTORICAL FAMILIES OF ROCHON, COLON AND TROUILLET

The family of Rochon went early with the first settlers to Canada in the 1600's from France; and, on the colonization of the vast Province of Louisiana by Iberville and Bienville, Charles Rochon (a native of Montreal) came with the first settlers to Fort Louis de la Mobile at Twenty-seven Mile Bluff, and then later at the second site (or present Mobile). He married Henriette Colon, who died at Mobile on March 1, 1733. Their son Pierre Rochon became the master contractor of Mobile. Family tradition says that Charles Rochon was a tall and stately man with a friendly personality and disposition.

Of the children of Charles Rochon and his wife Henriette, we trace in the Mobile Catholic Church records:

(1) Therese Rochon - who married Pierre Brossard (a habitant of Mobile), and whose first son (Pierre) was born June 18, 1708 at the first Mobile. A second son (Francois) was baptized on February 19, 1710.

(2) Marie Therese Rochon - who married Jean Crespeau, and had a daughter (Marie Josephe) born March 20, 1719.

(3) Charles Rochon - born at present site of Mobile January 5, 1716, and baptized January 6, 1716.

(4) Pierre Rochon I - (the master contractor of Mobile) born October 14, 1710 at Mobile, and died in the late summer of 1771 (perhaps of yellow fever). He married at the age of 21 the beautiful Catherine de la Rochelle(the daughter of Andre Pierre de la Rochelle and his wife Jeanne de l'Isle de Cevan). Their son Pierre Rochon II succeeded to his father's contracting business at the latter's death in 1771.

(5) Henriette Rochon - born February 17, 1720.

(6) Marie Josephe Rochon - born March 17, 1722...baptized April 6, 1722.

(7) Louis Augustin Rochon - baptized May 14, 1724.

(8) Constance Rochon - (perhaps) married Jacques de la Soussaye.

(9) Marguerite Rochon - born April 23, 1731.

KREBS 94.

PASCAGOULA LIBRARY
GENEALOGY COLLECTION

(10) Olivier Rochon - born February 1733...baptized March 2, 1733.

Pierre Rochon II, son of Pierre Rochon I and Catherine de la Rochelle, married Catherine Pauz (or Panx or Pons). Their children were: (1) Pierre Rochon III - baptized October 9, 1739; (2) Charles Rochon - baptized July 9, 1741, his godfather being his uncle Charles Rochon.

The Colon family is mentioned many times in the Catholic colonial records of Mobile. There are Louis Colon, Anne Renee Colon, Marianne Reuvielle Colon, and Marguerite Colon (who first married Francois Sianaon, and then Joseph Barbeau - the master tailor of Mobile). These may be sisters and brothers in immediate line to Henriette Colon (the wife of Charles Rochon), but at any rate they are of very close knship. The old Catholic records are somemeagre in giving us definite proof. There is also Jean Colon - born November 5, 1707; and a daughter (unnamed) - baptized September 19, 1709; also a son (unnamed) - baptized September 19, 1709 (these two latter way have been twins). There was also another son (Antoine Colon) - born December 20, 1712....and another daughter (Marie Therese Colon) - born & baptized on January 11, 1715....and also another unnamed daughter - born and baptized on July 10, 1722. All these latter children named here (from Jean Colon on) were the children of Jean Colon, who married Marguerite Prot (or Preau).

We find next in this line that the Rochon blood passed into the Trouillet blood by the marriage of Marguerite Rochon (born April 23, 1731) - the daughter and ninth child of Charles Rochon I and his wife Henriette - to Charles Trouillet. The ceremony was performed in the little church of La Notre Dame de la Mobile, near or about the present intersection of Monroe and St. Emanuel Streets, outside the southwest bastion of Fort Conde de la Mobile. Family tradition[1] says this was a unique and lovely wedding: the slaves all dressed in livery and brass buttons and plumed hats followed the family and wedding procession of friends to the little church, and later served the many guests, many from both New Orleans and Biloxi, at the long improvised tables in the flower garden of the Rochon home.

Reference to the judicial records of Mobile gives much valuable information on property ownership and belongings, and Hamilton tells us the Spanish Commandant had some duties much pleasanter to read of, and it is hoped pleasanter to perform, than taking possession of other peoples' property. An instance is found in the matter of contract for marriage between Monsieur Pierre Trouillet and Demoiselle Isabelle Narbonne[1] on May 18, 1786.

Hamilton further states it recites the groom's father and mother, Charles Trouillet & Marguerite Rochon - and the Bride's, Antoine Narbonne and Marie Josephe Krebs. Friends participated in the arrangement, such as Jean Chastang and Narcisse Brortin, Valentine Dubroca and Louis Dubroca - besides the bride's parents (she being a minor). The instrument provides for a Catholic marriage to occur as soon as either requests it; that neither is liable for the ante-nuptial debts of the other, but that they shall hold in common all property (movable and immovable) according to the custome of Spain...all other customs[2] being renounced. The estate of the bride consisted of a ten-year old negress named Julie (worhh 300 hard dollars); while Trouillet brought into the community 8,000 piastres in money, slaves, etc., of which he gave a dower of 750piastres (hard money). In case of death of either without children, the survivor should receive the whole property. All was executed before Commandant Favrot.

From the Mobile judicial records as well as the Church records, we find Monsieur Pierre Trouillet (son of Marguerite Rochon and Charles Trouillet) marries Demoiselle Narbonne (Narbona in the Spanish records) on May 18, 1786, the daughter of Antoine Narbonne and Marie Joseph Krebs - which brings the Krebs family and connections into the Trouillet family and blood. Another son Jean Trouillet marries Isabelle Chastang, while ### another daughter Louise Trouillet married James Innerarity. The former were the parents of Marguerite Trouillet - born in Mobile on the 6th of November, 1785, and baptized July 7, 1786. Some of the Trouillet family members went back to Canada or to reside in New Orleans, when the British took over Mobile. However, it is found that these today spell the name in two forms: the old and also "Troullier" or "Trouillier" (pronounced the same as the old and original name.

The Krebs' blood comes into the connections of this family history by the marriage, as we have seen, of Demoiselle Isabelle de Narbonne (Narbona) to Pierre Troillet. The following family history of Baron Frans von Krebs and his connections bring into light many notable people:

PASCAGOULA LIBRARY

Baron Franz von Krebs (born in Castle Cashem), whose towers rise above the flowing waters of the Mosel River into the Rhine province of Germany). He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada (his wife). From this union were three sons:

(1) Francois Krebs - who married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de l'Isle a Guillory (his wife).

(2) Pierre Krebs - who married Aline Peteet (Petite ?) of Pascagoula. It is said that from this marriage are descended the Sandses, Senacs, Frys, Demouys, and Rapiers and descendants of Mobile.

(3) Hugo Krebs - who married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans. Marie was the cousin of Madame Jan Diard (nee Francoise de Mau), plantation owner and army officer in Haiti. M. Diard & Mme. Diard were the parents of Francois Diard, who came to New Orleans at the turn of the 18th century and married Eugenie Rapicault, the daughter of Therese Billeron (the cousin of Bienville) and her husband Renee Rapicault, of Ste. Genevieve and New Orleans. M. & Mme Renee Rapicault were also grandparents of Joseph Krebs Diard (of New Orleans and later of Mobile), who married Adeline Jourdan. The latter couple were the parents of Charles Diard - who married Sarah Antonia Parker (of Mobile), the daughter of Louise Adelaide Delage (of Mobile) and Robert Monell (native of Albany, N.Y.).

(4) Maria Josephine Krebs - who married Captain Antoine Narbonne (or Narbona)...mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Anna Norbona (she spells her name the Spanish way) became the wife of Don Enrique Grimarest..the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company. For, inthe archives of the Indes at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez (the governor of Louisiana) proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the Regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile (in 1780); and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

A descendant of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Joyieuse (but whether immediate or not is not stated) was Joseph Krebs. As related in family records, he married the daughter of William Fisher..the owner of the Fisher Tract and other property in Mobile. His (J. Krebs') sister Josephine Krebs became the progenitress of the Delmas Family of Pascagoula and Mobile. And another sister, Emarante Krebs, married Eugene Latady.

Corinne Krebs was married in great state (July 15, 1850) to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house at NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets in Mobile. She had for her bride's maid her stately sister Miss Florida Krebs, long an early socialite of Mobile.

Henry G. Humphries was a notable man of Mobile (said to be very handsome), and was a successful cotton man before the War Between the States. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery (from Mobile County) in 1861; provost-marshal at Mobile, 1862-63; and enrolling officer, 1864-65. He had a long linsage beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England..who was a member of the illustrious House of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, 11th Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy governor of Massachusetts. A descendant, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son Dr. W.N. Humphries was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women. And his son, Henry G. Humphries, settled in Mobile in 1819.

One of the handsomest edifices and residences was the house that stood on the southwest corner of St. Louis&Conception Streets in Mobile (until torn down and built over by the first Greyhound Bus station). And it was there his daughter Marie Humphries became the wife of Hon. Marion Gaines of Austin, Texas. This beautiful old Humphries home for many years before demolition became the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin (daughter of the late O.J. Hood).

RE the old Krebs home, NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets: It was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; by Mrs. M. Krebs in 1866; in 1878 by L.D. Krebs; and in 1886 by Miss Florida Krebs, by whom (in 1901) it was sold to the Mobile Library Association..and became the site of the first Mobile Public Library. When the Library was moved in 1926, the old home became the property of J. Howard Wilson...and still later by H. Hoffman.

.....There is a note about the Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter married Sieur Francois Krebs? The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJoyieuse (whose names play some part in this family history and narrative) and Dubas, Senac, Petat (Peteet ? or Petite ?) and Vivia (whose names do not). The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company (September 7, 1717) to Count M.A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis XIV of France, and general of the marines in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

Going further back into the judicial records of Spanish times in Mobile, we find for the first few years transactions are in French (or in both French and Spanish). But as the hold of Spain grew stronger, hers became the sole official language. The Trouillet division of 1786, before Commandant Favrot, was in French, but others were altogether in Spanish.

On March 15, 1786, we find Pierre Trouillet petitioning for the dissolution of the partnership with his brother Jean Trouillet, and for division of the property...Pierre wishing to leave for New Orleans. Jean Trouillet was the husband of Elizabeth Chastang, and they were parents of Marguerite Trouillet, born in Mobile on November 6, 1785, and baptized July 7, 1786.

The neighborhood of old Fort Louis de la Mobile (the first Mobile settlement at 27-Mile Bluff on Mobile River) was not deserted, for in 1792 the Widow Rochon obtained the very site, named "The Bluff", described as "land 12 arpens front by 40 deep, being a piece of land called 'the Old Fort', distant about nine miles from this place, situated on Mobile River". A short distance below this James Innerarity established a cotton plantation on which to work the negroes of his wife, Eloise Isabelle Trouillet, as she owned a number accustomed to agriculture. He applied for a tract "40 arpens on the river by 30 deep, situated on both sides of a small spring (bottom) commonly known by the name of Fond de Lourse (otherwise the Old Fort Spring)". It was situated between the plantation belonging to Dubroca and St. Philip and that of Rochon's at the Old Fort on the river. B. Dubroca and Peter Chastang testify that the tract is vacant, and Perez grants it April 6, 1809, the intendancy being closed. Two years later we find a grant to Isabelle Narbonne bounded on the north by (James) Innerarity's habitation and on the south by that of St. Philip.[1]

A map of Township #2 North Range East Land District Southern Part of Alabama, [illegible] and examined and approved January 26, 1849 (and signed by James H. Weakley, Surveyor of the Public Lands in Alabama)....shows us 240acres with a full frontage on the Tom[illegible] marked "4" owned by Augustin Rochon (next south of the land of James Caller..#3 [illegible] erty was several miles above the meeting of the Tombigbee and the Alabama (to form the Mobile River).

Biloxi, near Mobile, always continued a settlement, even if across its bay to the east the memory of Fort Maurepas was lost in the oaks and pines of that promontory. Piernas early made a grant to the widow of Baptiste Christian, who had lived at Biloxi since her birth; and a little later Mathurin and Careaux obtained land at Dumanon Point, bounded south by the sea and east by "the mouth of the Bay of the Old Fort", for cultivation and other uses. James Innerarity in 1809 became the owner of Round Island, once the property of Frances Krebs.[2]

Few documents survive in the Mobile Archives of the later English period in Mobile, and the one deed in the Translated Records is so indefinite, says Hamilton,[3] in description as not to be of much aid. But its form of "grant, bargain, sell" and the rest of it, with the "to have and to hold" is at least a reminder of English Procedure. One paper is dated February 2, 1775, and by it Augustin Rochon buys three lots (for $100), with a house all falling to pieces. The sellers are Margaret Belluque, Francis Fleure (Fievre ?), Martonne (Martha) Dubroca and Louisa Rochon. The property is a double lot, that is , extending east and west from street to street, bounded on the south by Henry Driscol, and on the north in part by the vacant lot also conveyed and the lot of J.B. Lefleaux...the vacant lo in turn being bounded on the north and west by unnamed streets.

This same property became the subject of litigation in American times between the omnivorous Kennedys (Joshua and William) and the heirs of Rochon; and in this way we learn its location to have been at the southeast corner of Conception and Government Streets. It seems that the original grantee was B.F. Fievre, probably the ancestor to the parties selling to Rochon. Augustin Rochon married Louisa Fievre, and she as his widow resided there...with the yard, fruit trees and park overlooking the common - at least until 1780, the year the Spanish under Galvez conquered Mobile from the British. Whether Madame Rochon was there later or not was the point in the suit, which depended on whether U.S. Commissioner Crawford reported in 1814 that she had lived there "36 years" or "36 years ago".[4] Marie Jeanne Lapointe, the mother of the wife of Orbanne DeMouy,[5] must have been the first wife of Rochon.[1] At the time (February 5, 1780) when Galvez was sieging Mobile, the British burned the home of the widow Augustin Rochon at the SE corner of Conception and Government Streets, no doubt to enable the fort the better to command the neighborhood.[2]

During the occupancy of Mobile by the Spanish there were 13 pastors of the little Church of the Immaculate Conception until American times. The first entries during this period in the church records are by Father Salvador de Esperanza, who describes himself as "parish priest of the Mercedarian Order". Almost his first duty was to enter Augustin .....(there must be a page or so missing).....

The energetic Pierre Rochon, the master contractorof Mobile during British times, (and the son of Charles Rochon and Henriette Colon) according to Lorimer's report in 1771, made all necessary repairs on the barracks and stockade at Fort Charlotte and on boats to be sent to Haldimandat Pensacola, as well as at Croftown on the eastern shore of Mobile Bay. Lorimer's Report hints the effect of the abandonment of the fort for residence of troops. By April 1771, the work at Croftown was finished.

It is pleasand, says Hamilton,[3] to turn to the side lights in the correspondence between Pierre Rochon and the general (Haldimand). Rochon was compelled by his wife's illness in April (1771) to remain at Mobile, and from there he sends a few dozen fowls as a compliment. He was then building boats, one a schooner for the government, but had to wait until the middle of May for a sail maker from New Orleans. His own schooner was taken for carrying guns, but he has the policy to express himself as satisfied about it. He asks that his white workmen have rations at the royal tariff, which he will repay if not allowed. To Pensacola he sends over diables (despite the name, the peaceful articles we call log carts) and two pairs of oxen. Once Pierre Rochon expresses the intention of coming to Pensacola after finishing his work at Mobile, which would be June 20, 1771. He was anxious to obtain further employment "in order to refit his house spoiled by the bad conduct of his children" but he does not let us into the particulars of this domestic affair. This home may have been at Dog River, whence his later letters are dated.

Pierre Rochon was also a slave holder, and his clear, bold signature to the negro bap-

Pierre Rochon 22½ pounds for repairing a boat for Pittman "to survey the lakes with".[1] Family as well as Mobile history records tell us that Pierre Rochon grew so popular (and we can readily imagine he was now in great demand) that after a short while the patriotic British at Pensacola were up in arms about this Frenchman's taking their business away.

In the summer of 1771, we read of only a small amount of sickness in Mobile and the garrison of the fort proper. And in November (1771) we find Haldimand corresponding with Pierre Rochon II at Pensacola, who speaks of the death of his father. The mantle, says Hamilton, had descended on worthy shoulders, and the young man announces that he will carry on his father's agreements and intentions..... The last letter from Pierre Rochon I was dated July 11, 1771, from Mobile. Haldimand no doubt missed his old friend when, on November 28, 1771, he was in Mobile to attend a congress of the Chickasaws.

The Eslava Bay Tract below Arlington or Garrow's Bend on Mobile Bay (which is different from the Eslava Mill Tract) was by the Spanish Commandant Osorno granted Michael Ardas as a cotton plantation on March 26, 1803. The Diego McVay Tract of 4, 374.09 acres was a claim of Cornelius McCurtain, who seems to have purposes. 20 acres at the mouth of Dog River was in 1798 the property of John (Jean) Trouillet at a place called Bateau Pancho. He wanted it for cattle, of which he had a large stock.

Across Dog River was where lived Pierre Rochon I, Hamilton says, for much of Hollinger's Island stood in Rochon's name, the origin of its modern titles. The 800 arpens which Powell was to get from James Innerarity as the executor of Troillet's widow (nee Isabelle Rochon), his mother-in-law, was probably south of Deer River, and not on the island.

Mary Rochon, widow of Arbanne DeMouy, for $400 sold John Murrell 1,200 arpens situated "by the junction of Dog River, about three leagues south of Mobile, belonging to her deceased husband, acquired by grant of Corondelet. It was bounded on the north by Monlimar Creek and lands of Charles Lelande, on the south by another creek (Cedar, in a later deed) and the same estate, on the west by public lands, and on the east by Dog River. Four months later Murrell sold the tract to Eliphalet Beebe, and he in 1810 conveyed half of it to Asa Beebe for $300. This is the Beebe Tract at the mouth of Hall Mill Creek.[2] rest of Dauphin Island to Joseph Moro - the origin, in fact, of the existing title to hat historic spot. Moro's petition of July 31, 1781, is dated at New Orleans, and says hat he is an inhabitant of that city. Galvez the next day directs Grimarest to investiate the matter, and if the land is vacant to put Moro in possession...and return the proceedings made out "in continuation" with the comissioners - a substitute for the indorsement on the original papers by officials in our practice. September of the same year there as a report by Charles Parent, Arbano (Arbanne) DeMouy, Dubroca, and Louis Carriere, who ad been called on for evidence.

St. Francis Street east of Royal, like Dauphin and even Conti Streets, was represented nly by a lane to the river. In 1811 the free mulatta Mary Jeanne was living with her hildren in a little house at what is now the 60 NE corner of St. Francis and Royal Streets. his was next south of another place of Simon Andre which crossed on St. Michael Street. ohn Forbes & Co. desired the Mary Jeanne place, as it extended 26 toises eastwardly, and as bounded on the south by the lane going to the river. So they exchanged with her, giving er a place twelve toises front, somewhere on the south side of Church Street in the rear f the town. There they obligated themselves to build her a house 26 by 18 (French) feet like the house of Peter Lorandine (Pierre Laurendine), with a double chimney of Bricks"; nd they paid her $40 cash besides.[1] Thus these merchants got an outlet to the river from heir main house. North of Forbes, on the west side of Royal, the residents are not so easy o make out, except that the site of the northwest corner of Royal and St. Michael was the esidence of Arbanne (DeMouy) by 1802.[2]

St. Michael is a Spanish name but one of the suriosities of Mobile is that it is not n the surviving records applied to that street, says Hamilton. It did not extend east of oyal, and west to our St. Joseph it is called St. Jago at first, and later St. Francis; hile west of St. Joseph it was in 1811 known as Orbanne Street, from the residence of " isieu' Orbanne" DeMouy at the NW corner cornar of Royal. Hugo Krebs came next north of Andre (or Andry) on Royal (with the title confirmed in 1842 to his heirs[1]), and beyond him was George Tucker, the English carpenter of Pantan, Leslie & Co. In 1804 James Innerarity was granted what is now the SE corner of Royal and St. Louis Streets, bounded on the north by that unopened street.

The first known sale of land ascertained by the new line to be within the United States was that of C.U. DeMouy..for$250 (October 23, 1800) to John Brewer of 20 by 40 arpens between lands of said Brewer and Dubroca. C.U. DeMouy was the ancestor of the Mobile family of that name.

Across Mobile Bay a Spanish map shows settlements above the old French Village[2] (Aldea), but none at modern Howard's; and about Montrose have been found silver coins and antiquities more likely of this than DeSoto's time. J.B. Lorandine had six or seven arpens with house and kitchen on it, at Red Bluff, about the site of the British summer camp of Croftown; and Lt. Ferriet was to buy it in 1805 for $120[3]. This neighborhood near Rock Creek in later times was the site of kilns. Isabelle Narbonne, the widow Campbell, obtained a tract of 20 arpens front at the Bluff in order to put her slaves at making brick and tile. And we have already seen the judicial proceedings by which Forbes & Co. purchased the Trouillet yard there (in 1811).[4]

This ends the writing and recording of the family history of the descendants and connections of the Chevalier de Juzan. This family history includes many notable people, who were the makers of the history of the Gulf Coast Territory under the five flags flown over the country now known as the State of Alabama...a family history to be proud of, which is not only a gift to posterity but a monument to its people and to the South!

In 1720 Admiral de La Pointe was appointed by the French Government to build a fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) for a defense against the Indians. In 1721 he returned to settle in Pascagoula. Vice Admiral Du Pont was appointed to succeed him. The concession of Mississippi was made in 1721 to Madame the Duchess de Chaumont, who was Admiral de La Pointe's sister. She was a widow.

There came to Missippi with Madame de Chaumont her daughter, a widow Mrs. de la Prade and several French families, amongst whom were Ranserve, Juellory, Senac, Jants, Penibet, Durez, Laurendine, Dubac Fayard, Ladenier, Petat and Vivis. Petit

Baron Hugue Von Krebs arrived shortly after. He was from Neumagen, on the Mosel, Germany. He was an officer and came to Pascagoula from Canada in 1722. He married Marie Simone de la Pointe, the Admiral's daughter. They had seven children, Hugue, Ludwig, Joseph Pierre, Marie and Innocente. Marie Simone, his wife, was the first of the French settlers to die. She was buried in the cemetary which was established by the settlers on Lake Krebs and is still called Krebs Cemetery. Hugue Krebs married a second time to Marie de Joycuse of New Orleans. They had five children: Pierre, Raphael, Francois, Augustin and Cecile. Francois and Augustin died young. Raphael married in Louisiana and lived there. Pierre married Miss Aline Petet. This is doubtful. The marriage took place in Pensacola Fla. and all official records were destroyed by the British in 1814 when they retreated

November 19, 1966

Dear Richard:

I am so glad to hear from you, and to have your address. I tried several years ago to get your address from Sada Pope, your grandmother sister, and more recently from Anne Hawkins, Richard Hawkins daughter but without success.

I spent some time, last summer, looking up the Latadys and Hazar and am, consequently, somewhat fresh on our family tree. The princip handicap is that all the papers which come from our ancestor, Captain Mariano Latady, are in Spanish, of which I know very little. Of thes the most important are his will, his service record in the Spanish ar and my grandfather's baptismal certificate. I will get these Xeroxed you as soon as I can locate them. In the meantime I can give you the salient facts from memory.

The first of our family who came to America was Francisco Latady who was a native of one of the Basque Provinces (Una de las provincia vascongadas) of Spain, and came to Mexico about 1760. He married Mar Nicolasa Aguilar and they had one child, my great-grandfather Mariano Latady who, as nearly as I can puzzle it out from his service record, must have been born in 1776.

Mariano Latady entered the army at the age of 16 and spent the of his life in it. He was stationed in Louisiana and in West Florid from about 1800 to 1821 when Florida was ceded to the United States. then went to Havana with his command and never saw his wife or son a He died about 1845.

Mariano Latady married Emerante Krebs and they had one son, my grandfather and your great-grandfather, Eugene Latady, who was born 1807. His baptismal certificate shows that he was baptized by the chaplain of the regiment, and that his sponsors were Pedro Senaque a Ynes Krebs. The sketch of John Lawrence Rapier, on page 163 of volu III of Owen's Story of Alabama, says that he was the grandson of Pie and Agnes (Krebs) Senac of Pensacola, that he married Regina "Denrou (Demouy, of course) and that one of his children was named Regina. Of course, Pedro Senaque is Pierre Senac, and I feel sure that Ynes Krebs is Agnes Krebs.

John Rapier was the founder of the Mobile Register. He was born June 15, 1842 and died May 7, 1905.

Captain Mariano Latady's will refers to his wife and son as residents of Mobile, "en los Estados Unidos Norte-Americano." (The north-American United States.)

I have often wished that I had the time and sufficient data to write a life of my grandfather, Eugene Latady. He was the only Southe bourgeois that I have ever heard of, though there were several others in Mobile and New Orleans. He never had any connection with the soil, never owned, lived on or operated a farm nor, of course, did his fathe or his grandfather. The Krebs family owned lands, as did other of his relatives on the Krebs side. He was a money maker with many irons in the fire, principally Mobile real estate, but he turned a penny wherever he could. I have two of his old cash books, home-made of the double sheets of foolscap which they used to have. He would stitch a few sheets together, open them out and keep his cash on them. He received rents on several pieces of real estate, he had a female slave named Adele whom he did not need in his household, so he rented her ou He even rented a whole bench in the Cathedral, and sub-leased the part he and his family did not need. He was a physician of sorts and made two medicines, No. 1 and No. 2, no doubt a purgative and an emetic, an kept strict records of the administration of these compounds in his family, consisting of himself, his mother, an aunt, and several domesti servants, and later on, his wife.

My grandmother Latady was born Margaret Dineen, in Cork, Ireland. I remember her very well, as I was about eight years old when she died She was very handsome and very high class, a genuine, old fashioned Irish Catholic aristocrat, well educated and a great reader. She was thirty years old and her husband was fifty-two, when they were married (Their ages may have been 29 and 51) I think they had been married onl about five years when my grandfather died, at the age of 56, in 1863. Several other Dineens came over at about the same time, but as I under stand it all the rest moved to Sioux City, Iowa.

There are two highly interesting slips of paper in the lot, about the size of bank checks. They were written on the same day, in 1852, when my grandfather had the first death in his family. One acknowledg receipt from Mr. E. Latady of the price of a lot in the Catholic Cemet of Mobile, and concludes with the words, "and this is his title to sai lot." This, being a conveyance of real estate, and subject to be recorded in the Probate Office, was in English, signed by the Rev.

G. Chalons, Sacristan of the Cathedral. The other slip, also signed by the sacristan, and dated the same day, being a document strictly inside the Catholic community, is written in French, and acknowledges receipt of twenty "Piastres" for an interment. This shows that French was the language of the Catholic community of Mobile, and from the evidence it is clear that my grandfather wrote and spoke both English and French.

There is a touching indication of the perpetuation of French in the Gulf Coast parts of Alabama and Mississippi. Shortly after another death, my grandfather received a letter, written in excellent French, from his cousin Josephine M. Delmas, of East Pascagoula, in which she refers to the death of her sister, Mme Aleck, and asks my grandfather to send Mme Aleck's personal slave, whose name is given, to visit Mme Delmas, to help the servant get over her grief at her mistress' death. This letter, as well as my grandfather's record of medical treatments, shows the way the old southerners treated the negroes.

You have a son namdd Charles. My son Charles is getting married in Atlanta next Friday. I deeply regret that I did not have your address soon enough to send you a timely invitation. My wife has written Charles' future mother-in-law asking her to send you and your lady an invitation which, of course, will be very late. Charles was graduated from Birmingham-Southern last June and is working in the computer section of the Huntsville Arsenal. I have a married daughter, Virginia Latady Ward, and one pert little grandson. Virginia and Charles are all my family, and my wife and I are already alone in our house.

If you find it convenient to make me a copy of the material on the Krebs family which you have received from Regina Rapier, I should be glad to have it. In the meantime I will have copies made for you of some notes which I made from Hamilton's book, "Colonial Mobile," which is a very fine local history, which, however, comes down only to the time when my grandfather and his mother moved to Mobile from Pensacola.

It is a joy to hear from you. with love to your family, I am

Dear Miss Rapier:

I thank you very much for your kind and interesting letter of the 10th, to which I am late in replying because I wanted to review some material that I thought would interest you. I cannot claim to have made any research at all on the Latady family. The story is this; after the death of my great-grandfather, in Havana in 1845, Mr. Carlos Crozat, who was a close friend of his, sent or delivered to my grandfather a number of papers, which are now in my possession. I know barely enough Spanish to make out certain names and dates. I enclose a copy of my grandfather's baptismal certificate, which contains the names of his parents and his sponsors in baptism. Please note that according to the old Spanish custom, which is very considerate of ladies, the name of his mother is given as Emerante Krebs, and not as Mrs. Mariano Latady. I understand that in that period the wife retained her maiden name for life. That is also the reason why it does not appear whether or not "Pedro Senaque" and "Ynes Krebs" were married or not, in 1807, because married or siggle her name would have been the same. It is this Spanish regard for women that has created the law of community property, which since 1913 has been such an important income tax question. The Spanish wife owned one half of the income of her husband, and thgough this the taxpapers of Texas and California, principally, have down to 1948 enjoyed an enviable position.

As to the name "Amie," as applied to Emerante Krebs, it seems to me that I have heard my father say that she was referred to in the family as "Tante Amie." I enclose a copy of my letter written today tc Richard Latady in which I gime him the exact birth dates of Mariano Latady and Emerante Krebs. She was born in 1780.

On the medicines, there are lots of pages of treatment records for all of Eugene Latady's family, relatives and slaves, and in one of his three cash books which came down to us there is a recipe for "The Medicine," or rather a list of ingredients, the only one of which I can remember is jalap. I have unfortunately misplaced that particular cash book. It was not Mariano who made up the medicine, but Eugenio, his son. There might be a closer correspondence in many of these things but for the fact that my grandmother, Margaret Dineen, and my great-grandmother Emerante Krebs, probably were never acquainted. My grandfather did not marry until several years after his mother's death, and his wife had not been long a resident of the USA when they were married. She herself, my grandmother, was a very good hand at records. She even left such things as receipted bills for the boys' schooling, and she bought each a full set of school books. I have both of their first Greek books, which they used at the age of fifteen.

The nearest of the three Spanish Basque provinces to Bayonne is Guipuzcoa, and my ancestor came from Vizcaya. However, Navarra may almost be considered a Basque province, and one piece of information mentioned by my father was that his ancestor came from Pamplona, the old royal capital of Navarra. He was mistaken in this, however, as my great-grandfather clearly states that his father was known as "The Vizcayan.

Among papers left by my grandfather is a Circular of Spring Hill Academy, over the name of Thomas G. Rapier, A. M. Principal and Proprietor, of which I enclose a copy. The original is rather frail, being printed on thin paper. If you would like to have the original, let me know and I will send it to you. This Circular does not carry any year date, but you will easily be able to give its actual date from other information in your possession. They had good schools in Mobile in the old days. My father was one of the best educated men I ever knew, and he never went to college except to law school. He had studied practically all the subjects which Mr. Rapier mentions in the circular, many of which, such as Natural Philosophy, now known as Physics, were in their infancy.

My son Charles, who was married in Atlanta on November 25th, lives in Huntsville, where he is in the computer department of the Arsenal. His mathematics, Physics and Chemistry are as far ahead of mine as mine were over my father's Natural Philosophy. Charles married a mighty fine girl.

I have made a copy of a description by Bernard Romans, copied in Hamilton's Colonial Mobile, of the early cotton gin invented by Mr. Krebs, of "Pasca Oocooloo," I will send you a copy when I have gotten some of the typing errors corrected.* My father always told me that the cotton gin was invented by a relative of his.

Let me say again what pleasure it gives me to be able to correspond with you. Though I may appear indifferent, I have always been very tenacious of my relatives, to the third and fourth generation and beyond.

Please let me know whether I shall send you the original of Mr. Thomas G. Rapier's school circular. As I dig up more material I shall take the liberty of sending it to you. Tell me, have you or has anyone else, compiled a book on the Krebs family?

Again, with my best wishes for a happy and peaceful New Year.

BRIEF MEMORANDA CONCERNING A SOUTHERN LINE OF THE SANDS FAMILY.*

I. ROBERT[1] SANDS, a native of Maryland, married Sarah Norris. He lived in Prince George county, but later removed to Baltimore, where he and his wife continued to reside until their death. He had several children, among them Benjamin[2] Sands, who had Maria[3] Sands, who married Lloyd Addison. Hortense[4] Addison, a daughter, married Alfred Batré, and resides at Mobile, Ala. She is the regent of the Alabama Chapter of the Society of Colonial Dames.

He also had another son

II. RICHARD MARTIN[2] SANDS, who was born Oct. 8, 1791, in Prince George county, Md. He early entered the United States Army, and had a long career of faithful service. Under date of Jan. 9, 1903, the office of the Adjutant-General, War Department, Washington, D. C., supplied the following data from the official records:

"It is shown by the records that Richard M. Sands, of Maryland, was appointed Ensign, 38th Infantry, May 20, 1813; was promoted to be 3d Lieutenant April 22, 1814, and to be 2d Lieutenant July 9, 1814. It appears that he was disbanded June 15, 1815, at the close of the war, but was reinstated December 2, 1815, as a 2d Lieutenant in the 4th Infantry with rank from July 9, 1814, date originally promoted to that grade. He was promoted to be 1st Lieutenant March 12, 1817, and to be Captain April 30, 1819; he was brevetted Major April 30, 1829, for ten years' faithful service in one grade. He died September 13, 1836, at Fort Call, Florida.

"'There is on file a letter from him dated Baltimore, February 9, 1813, applying for a commission in the Army and stating that he had lost his left arm by accident about six years previously, and he expressed the hope that the injury he had received would not debar him from the appointment desired. When the Army was about to be reduced after the war, a small number of officers being retained, Major Enos Cutter of the 38th Infantry recommended Lieutenant Sands for retention as one of the best offices of the regiment, as did also Lieutenant Colonel Stuart, of the same regiment. The records of the 1812 War on file are quite incomplete, and it is impossible to give a detailed statement of services rendered by Lieutenant Sands during the War."*

At Pensacola, Fla., June 14, 1824, by Father C. Moenhant, he was married to Adele, daughter of Peter and Agnes (Krebs) Senac, residents of the town. She was born in Pensacola, Aug. 4, 1807, and died at New Orleans, La., Dec. 31, 1879. Peter (Pierre) Senac was a native of Bayonne, France, and his wife, Agnes Krebs, was born in Pascagoula, on the gulf coast, of a French family, which had been seated in that vicinity nearly two hundred years.† Agnes Senac died in Mobile, and is buried in the Catholic cemetery there.

Major Sands died at Fort Call, Fla., but his remains, together with several others, were removed to St. Augustine.

Children of Maj. Richard M, and Adele (Senac) Sands:

III. 1. Robert Martin[3] Sands, b. at Cantonment Brooke, Tampa, Fla., Oct. 12, 1825; m. Josephine LeBaron.
2. Agnes Evalina[3], b. at Tampa, Feb. 9, 1830; m. Joseph Fry, at New Orleans, Aug. 10, 1849. Their son Wm. Fry, and daughters, Mrs. Paul H. Demouey and Mrs. Franklin Demouey, all reside in Mobile.
3. Charles Senac[3], b. at Mobile, Sept. 15, 1832; m. Nov. 25, 1857, Emma Laurendine, daughter of Clinton and Mercelite Ford. After his death she removed to Houston, Texas, and remarried.
4. Richard[3], d. in infancy.
5. Harvey Hook[3], d. in infancy.

III. ROBERT MARTIN[3] SANDS of Mobile, was born at Cantonment Brooke, Tampa, Fla., Oct. 12, 1825. He received a good education, and was engaged in business pursuits in 1861, at the beginning of the war. He was then captain of the Mobile Cadets, and on Jan. 2, 1861, was with his company at Fort Morgan, Ala. On the formation of the Third Alabama Regi-

Another daughter of Peter Senac, Mary Louisa, married Samuel Fry, who came to Pensacola, Fla., from Albany, N. Y., as Secretary to Gov. He was rapidly promoted Major and Lieutenant-Colonel, and during practically the whole of the war, after the battle of White Oak Swamp, Va., June 8, 1862, he commanded the Regiment. He was wounded July 2, 1863, at Gettysburg. In March, 1865, on account of ill health, he was placed on the "invalid corps," and sent to Talladega, Ala., where he was in charge of a camp of instruction at the close of hostilities.

His wife is Josephine LeBaron (b. Nov. 29, 1828, at Pensacola), daughter of Charles LeBaron (b. Dec. 13, 1804, at New Orleans), and wife, Ann McVoy (b. Oct. 21, 1803, at Pensacola, where she was married by Rev. Mr. Coleman, Feb. 22, 1822).

He was the last Lieutenant Colonel of the Third Alabama Regiment, C.S.A., and during the later part of the war commanded the regiment. At the time of his death he was the oldest representative of the Southern branch of the Sands family. See this Magazine March 1903, Vol. I, pages 352-354 for genealogy."

NB: Page 353, paragraph 3, "Children of Maj. Richard M, and Adele (Senac) Sands" seems to record inaccuracies in names. Charles' full name was Charles Felix Senac Sands. Emma was known as Emma Louisa and may have dropped her mother's maiden name, Laurendine, for some reason. Mercelite should be spelled Marcelite (Laurendine) Ford. HFK

June '67: Spelling Mercelite is apparently correct. HFK

I. UNPUBLISHED LETTERS OF GEN. NATHANIEL GREENE.

Two letters of Gen. Greene, which are printed below, believed to have never before been published, are given here without special comment. The student of our Revolutionary annals will doubtless find them of interest and importance. These letters as well as the documents embraced in the four succeeding items were selected for use here by Dr. U. B. Phillips, of the University of Wisconsin, for which grateful acknowledgment is made.

GENERAL GREENE TO GOVERNOR NELSON OF VIRGINIA.

(Draper Collection, Sumter Mss., Vol. I., No. 63.)

Head Quarters on the High Hills of Santee September 16th 1781.

Sir

I did myself the honor to enclose your Excellency, in my last Letter, a State of the Virginia Line as it then stood in South Carolina. Since then we have had a severe and bloody Action, by which their Ranks are considerably thinned.

I hope your Excellency will recommend it seriously to the consideration of the Legislature to furnish us with a fresh supply of Troops, and forward, all in your power, such measures as they may adopt to compleat the continental quota. Your zeal for the public good, and your knowledge of the state of things, I doubt not, will sufficiently induce you to great exertions.

Captain Pierce who will have the honor of delivering you this Letter, is fully acquainted with the state of the Line, and the circumstances of affairs as they at present stand in this part of the World. He will also give you the particulars of the Battle of Eutaw, which was fought on the 8th instant, and which was attended with signal success to our Arms. The Officers paid severely for the honors of the Day: But such as fell met their fate with becoming Dignity!

Your Troops participated considerably in the loss, and their very material Services claim the most generous acknowledgements of gratitude from their Country.

Lieut. Colo Campbell who commanded the Brigade, and who was killed in the heat and fury of the conflict, merits all that can be said of a brave, active and intrepid Soldier. His worth I beg leave to recommend to you as deserving particular public notice. He has been engaged in our Service from the com-

THE CONCESSION OF PASCAGOULA

TO

MADAM DUCHESS DE CHAUMONT

More than two hundred years ago, there arrived from France, a fleet sent by the Duchess de CHAUMONT for the colinization of Louisiana, and destined for her concession at Pascagoula, Mississippi.

MADAM DUCHESS DE CHAUMONT was lady-inwaiting to Princess Henrietta at the Court of Louis XIV, at Fountainblue place. She was the daughter of Comte General Gramont of the French Army, and Lady Elizabeth Hamilton of England, and a renouned beauty at the Court of Charles the Second.

MADAM DE CHAMOUNT married Le Chevalier de Chaumont, who was Duke de Crequin, Chevalier de St. Louis et de la Legion d'Hormeur of France.

In 1711 the Concession of Pascagoula to Madam de Chaumont was made under the Corporation "The Western Company", and was registered by Parliment in Paris on the 7th of September, 1711.

In 1718 Admiral de la Pointe (brother of Madam de la Chaumont) was commissioned by the France Goverment to build a Fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) to protect the concession of Pascagoula to Madam de Chaumont.

In January 1721, the Frigate "Charles (a war vessel) under commandant Joseph de la Pointe and flying the "Fleur de Lys" dropped anchor in the Bay of Mobile at Fort Louis de la Mobile. Her passengers included Duchess de Chaumont, her daughter, Baroness de la Parde (or Prode), Count Captain Seumaid de Bellille, Sieur Gregriede Guillory and his wife Jeanne de Guillory, and the Dubos, Senac, Petats, and Vivias and others.

In 1721 Admiral de la Pointe returned to France and on account of ill health resigned his commission although he returned to settle in Pascagoula. Admiral Dumont was appointed to succeed him.

In the year of 1699 d'Iberville landed off Ship Island in the Gulf of Mexico on the coast of Miss, which he used as a base to establish a claim for the conquests for the French Crown. From this base he explored the mainland and established Fort Maurepas on the Eastern shore of Biloxi Bay. d'Iberville left the colony to return to France in 1702 the King Louis XIV sent him back with more colonists to move the Fort to Mobile to be nearer their Spanish allies at Pensacola, concessions in this t territory.

One of the numerous grants made by Louis XIV in 1618 when John Law's Miss. Buoble was in effect was to Mme. Duchess de Chaumont who was a lady-in-waiting to the Princess Henrietta at the court of Louis XIV at Fountainbleau palace. She was the daughter of Comte General Gramont of the French army and Lady Elizabeth Hamilton of England of the Court of Charles the second. This concession was situated on the Pascagoula River originally spelled Catahoula now known as Krebs Lake which her son-in-law, Joseph de la Pointe, Admiral in Bienville's fleet, was commissioned to protect. In 1711 the concession of Pascagoula to Madame de Chaumont, was made under the corporation "The Western Company", and was registered by Parliament, in Paris on the 7th of September, 1717. De laPointe had accompanied La Sevole and de Iberville explorere and founders of the Miss. French Colonial Co. of Louisiana in 1697.

In Janiary 1721, the frigate Charles, a war vessel, flying the Fleur de Lys, and under the command of Joseph de la Pointe anchored in Mobile. Among the passengers were the Duchess of Chaumont, her daughter, the barcness dela Erode , the Count Captain Soumardde Bellile, Sieur de Guillory and his wife, Jeanne de Guilory, and Bibas, Petats, and Vivias. In December, 1721 Madame de Chaumont returned to France, and sent five vessels with slaves, money, building materials, and colonists to consolidate he concession or claim. For protection against Indian attacks de la Pointe was ordered to build a fort on Lake Catahoula which is still standing, using the material sent from France and native materials with the aid of ship carpenters a rambling one-storey structure which xxxxxxxxx included oyster shells, mortar maso and moss. A low hanging roof is braced by cedar logs, the one room xxxxxxxxx deep xxxxxxx building with porches front and back faces and adjoined by the small family cemetery all buried above the ground three and four deep, with inscriptions and dates of the most famous names in French, Spanish, and English History. Many were victims of the dreaded desease "Yellow Fever". Five Dupont children were victims are buried xxxxxxxthere.

months. A proper use of the "Neptune" alone, which had been stationed permanently in the colony since 1718, would have relieved the congestion in Biloxi and saved thousands of human lives which were sacrificed by the criminal neglect of the officials of the Compagnie des Indes.

As "Le Dromadaire" carried the oufit for the Law concession and for the plantation of St. Catharine, this ship may also have had some passengers on board, German engagés, so-called Law people; but perhaps not very many, as Bienville, in sending her to the Mississippi against the protests of some of the directors of the company, took a great responsibility upon himself, and could not afford to load her too heavily, lest there should be trouble in getting her over the bar of the river. The larger number of the German Law people, those who had arrived during the year 1720, had, no doubt, been sent to the Arkansas River by the inland route to clear the land and provide shelter for the great number of Germans who were expected to arrive in the spring of 1721.

No wonder that under such conditions as obtained in Biloxi a very low state of law and order reigned there, and that complete anarchy could be prevented only by drastic measures. A company of Swiss soldiers in the absence of their commander forced the captain of a ship to turn his vessel and to take them to Havana; and another company marched off to join the English in Carolina. The Swiss in Fort Toulouse, above Mobile, also rose and killed their captain; but these mutineers were captured and punished in Indian fashion by crushing their heads; one Swiss was packed into a barrel which was then sawed in two, and a German who had helped himself to something to eat in the warehouse in Biloxi was condemned by the Superior Council to be pulled five times through the water under the keel of a vessel.

But punishment which was meted out so severely to the small pilferer did not reach the guilty ones in high positions. Though the Germans on the other side of the bay died by the hundreds from starvation, Hubert, the commissioner general, who, as an investigation proved, had not kept any books during the whole tenure of his office, did not even know that there was a shipload of provisions in the hull of a vessel stranded near Ocean Springs and left there for eleven months. Yet Hubert was not punished.

Even this description, perhaps, does not give the whole truth, as contemporary writers did not dare to say what they knew. Dupratz says (I. 166):

> "So delicate a matter is it to give utterance to the truth that the pen often falls from the hands of those who are most disposed to be accurate."

Germans in Pascagoula.

In January, 1721, 300 engagés came to the concession of Madame Chaumont in Pascagoula. There were no Germans among them, as the census of 1725 shows, but Pensacola must be mentioned here, as there was a German colony at that place very early, arising, perhaps, on the ruins of this concession or of some other enterprise. The date of the founding of that German settlement is not known; but, in 1772, the English captain Ross found there, on the farm of "Krebs," cotton growing and a roller cotton gin, the invention of Krebs, and, perhaps, the first successful cotton gin in America.[8]

In the same year (1772) we hear of a great storm which raged most furiously "on the farm of Krebs and among the Germans of Pascagoula."

His last will and testament, written in New Orleans in the Spanish language in 1776, gives his full name as "Hugo Ernestus Krebs." He was from Neumagen on the Moselle, Germany, and left fourteen grown children, whose descendants still own the old Krebs farm, which the author visited in August, 1906. It is situated on a slight elevation on the border of "Krebs' Lake," near the mouth of the Pascagoula River, and a mile and a half north of the railroad station of Scranton (now incorporated with East Pascagoula), Mississippi.

[8] Cotton was planted in Louisiana much earlier. Charlevoix saw some in a garden in Natchez in 1721; and Dupratz constructed a machine for extracting the seed; but his machine was a failure.

The Creoles there call the Krebs home "the old fort," and the three front rooms forming the center of the house, the rest consisting of more recent additions, were evidently built with a view of affording protection against the Indians. The walls of this part of the house are eighteen inches thick, the masonry consists of a very hard concrete of lime; unbroken large oyster shells, and clay. The post and sills are of heavy cypress, which, after serving at least 175 years, do not show any signs of decay. The floor is made of concrete similar to that of the walls, but a wooden floor has been laid upon it, taking away about eighteen inches from the original height of the rooms. All the wood work was hewn with the broad axe.

In front of the house lies an old mill stone which once upon a time served to crush the corn.

Near the house is the "Krebs Cemetery," with the tombs of the members of the Krebs family, of whom a great number are buried there. The accompanying pictures were taken on the spot.

According to the family traditions the old fort was built by "Commodore de la Pointe," who is said to have been a brother of Madame Chaumont. Hamilton, in his "Colonial Mobile," page 140, says that Joseph Simon de la Pointe received, on the 12th of November, 1715, from Governor Cadillac, a land concession on Dauphine Island for the purpose of enabling him to raise cattle. As Dauphine Island was practically abandoned, after the great storm of 1717, de la Pointe probably also gave up his concession, and a map, drawn about 1732 ("Colonial Mobile," page 86) shows "Habitation du Sieur Lapointe" [9]) on the very spot where the Krebs homestead now stands, near the mouth of the Pascagoula River.

La Pointe's daughter, Marie Simon de la Pointe, became the first wife of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Thus the old fort came into possession of the Krebs family, where it still remains, the present owner and occupant being Mrs. J. T. Johnson, née Cécile Krebs, an amiable and highly intelligent lady to whom the author's thanks are due. She is the great grand-daughter of Joseph Simon Krebs, the eldest son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Simon de la Pointe.

Francesco Krebs, the second son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Simon de la Pointe, received Round Island in the Bay of Pascagoula, containing about 110 acres of land, as a grant from the Spanish government, on the 13th of December, 1783, after having occupied it for many years. The family of his wife had received permission to settle there from the French governor Bienville, who left Louisiana in May, 1743.

Pest Ships.

On the 3d of February, 1721, the ship "La Mutine" arrived at Ship Island with 147 Swiss "Ouvriers" of the Compagnie des Indes, under the command of Sieur de Merveilleux and his brother. French speaks of 347 Swiss.

Shortly before, on the 24th of January, 1721, four ships had sailed from the French port of L'Orient for Louisiana with 875 Germans and 66 Swiss emigrants. The names of these ships were "Les Deux Frères," "La Garonne," "La Saonne," and "La Charante." Of these four ships the official passenger lists, signed by the authorities of L'Orient, have been preserved, and a copy of the same came into the possession of the "Louisiana Historical Society" in December, 1904. From these it appears that these emigrants, who had, perhaps, traveled in troops from their homes in Germany and Switzerland to the port of embarkation, were divided on board according to the parishes whence they had come. Each parish had a "prévôt" or "maire," whilst the leader of the Swiss bears the title of "brigadier." We find the parishes of Hoffen (there is one Hofen in Alsace, one in Hesse-Nassau, three in Wurtemberg, also five "Hoefen" in Germany);

Freiburg (Baden);
Augsburg (Bavaria);
Friedrichsort (near Kiel, Holstein);
Freudenfeld (some small place in Germany not contained even in Neumann's "Orts-und Verkehrs-Lexicon," which gives the names of all places of 300 inhabitants and upwards);

P. 234 -Augustin Rochon in Feb. 2, 1775 bought 3 lots from Margaret Belluque, Francis Firurs(Fievre), Martonne Duroca, and Louisa Rochon. It was at the South east corner of Conception and Govb. St. It would seem thet the original grantee was B. F. Fiever, probably the anctstor of the parties selling to Rochon. Rochon married Louisa Fievre, and she as his widow resided there until 1780.Marie Jeanne Simon Lapointe, mother of the wife of Orbanne Demouy, must have been the first wife of Rochon.(from the Will of Maria Rochon, 1 Mobile Will Book, p. 14) Marie M Augustine Rochon.
P. 156- Pascagoula on map in 1732 shows Sr. LaPointe' place and at MOss Point we find the famous Chaumont concession. First record in Mobile is the certificate of burial in 1726 of drowmind on Fish river at Pas. Then the baptism of Francois Rilieu, in 1734 the marriage of Baudrau of Dauphin Island, at the house of LaPointe. Not until 1758 do we hear of Pas. again except for a mention of Rilieu and his wife and child as resident there. This seems to be the last church record of the place.
There seem to be no grants or deeds of town lots while Grimarest was in command at Mobile, but several times old inhabitants were thus called on in determining what was royal domain and what nit. In Oct. 1782, Messrs. Lusser Duret, and Dubroca certifiy that the small island known as Chufe and "Camp of the Grand Bay", distant a league from the town, had been owned, and they are granted provisionally to Joseph Colomb. So in Dec. 1783, Chastang senior, Dubroca, and Duret similiary certifiey the Round Island has been possed by no one except Mme. Maurau, who was in possession in 1752 without title. This leads to the absolute grant to Francis Krebs, whose memoril sets up that Bienville had permitted Mme. Maurau, Mother-in-law of Krebs, to occupy the island in 1745, and that Galvez had one stopped there on returning from Mobile and Pensacola and promised Mme. Krebs a grant.

The consessions of land on Dauphine Island to Joseph Simon de la Pointe, whose name occurs often in the church registers as the father of Mme. Krebs, was made Nov. 12, 1715, byAntonine de la Motte Cadillac, governon of the province of Louisianna, and Jean Baptiste Ducols, royal conncillor and marine commissary. They certify that are vested by his Majesty the King, their, lord, with the powers to grant lands.It recites LaPointe's application, and was excuted on Dauphine Island, and registered, as ordered, the same day by Raguet ------ The grant was for the purpose of enabling LaPointe to raise cattle ------

It recites the groom's father and mother as Charles Trouillet and Marguerite Rochon, the bride's as Antoine Narbonne and Marie Joseph Krebs.

Settlements of estates was not necessarily any more prompt under Spanish than under the American dispensation. Upon the death os Sieur Claude Dupont, one Augustin Moreau, called Belleisle, resident on Pascagoula River, became administrator. There were several distributees, to wit, Marie Anne Dupont, wife of Mathias LeFlaux; Louison Dupont wife of Joseph Krebs; Jean Baptiste and Catherine Dupont; andMarie Jeanne Guillory, widow or Dupont, but then wife of Moreau. This widow petitioned and obtained from Grimarest an arbittration In 1783, Chastang, Sr., Duret, and Dubroca being selected. In some way they overlooked the debts and Moreau next yeat had the governon set aside their award. The same arbitrators were countinued, however, and, deducting debts, they ascertained teh balance to be 2,347 piastres. Of this, half went ti the widow, the rest to the four heirs, all whom in 1786 sign in satification, renouncing all right of appeal. In connection with this settlement we find Favpot's grant of Jean Batiste's request for emancipations, and that Rapheal Krebs be made his guardian, Jean Baptiste being only 23 years old.

There were of course, a number of other streets, all unpaved and narrow, as under the French. Leaving the fort and its esplande behind, as one walked down Royal st, he would notice that the old Barracks Square had become private property in 1796, - that of Mary J. Krebs, the widow of Anthony Narbonne. She sold it that year, from conti to the fort front. for $5000.00

/ 308-
Hugo Krebs came next notth of Andre' (Andry) on Royal (with the title confirmed in 1842 to his heirs)

James Innerarity in 1809 became the owner of Round Island, once the property of Francis Krebs.
Lanzos could not ceritfy about occupancy of islands at Pascagoula, as he more than once frankly advised Gayoso. But when Ambroise Gains oBtained 500 arpens, this petitioner produeed the indorsement of Charles Ellier, Peter and Francis Krebs, James Nadeau, and Francis Colin.
Betsy Wilson, and old inhabitant of Pascagoula, in 1801 obtained twenty by forty arpens frint on both sides of that river, including the first bluff"below the confluence of the rivers Chicasaha and Estopacha"(Pascagoula, --She married Joseph Collins. c.Sidney Simon Cumbest, William Wilson and the wodow Krebs also obtained lands there,

In 1874, Emma Louisa Laurendine Ford Sands undertook the support of her family -- invalid husband Charles Felix Senac Sands, who had sustained War injuries, and four young children.

Family tradition says that Emma had been banished to the Conservatory of Music in Leipzig, Germany, when she was fifteen years old in order to put an ocean between her and young Charlie because parents Ford considered their daughter too young to accept his proposal of marriage. Emma had taken a degree in music at Leipzig and returned to Mobile to marry C. F. S. Sands on November 25, 1857. She had occasionally given piano lessons to the children of friends. Why she chose in 1874, when she was forty-one years old, to earn money by applying her skills in operating her "Singers Machine" rather than resuming music lessons is not recorded. Certainly it was not lack of musical talent, for she remained a powerful pianist well into her eighties.

Here reproduced from the back pages of her cooking note book is a list, partial, of her patrons. The entries are headed "Money Made from Singers Machine" and dated "From Feb. 14, 1874." Since, with few exceptions, the names are all recognizable as those of relatives, it is evident that the family rallied around to commission their determined young kinswoman.

Present members of the Krebs family may be interested to note that a "drefs" was made for a "Miss C. Krebs," who would have been one of Charles Felix' cousins.

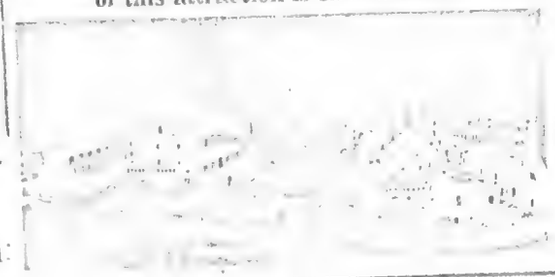
OLD SPANISH FORT — Built at Pascagoula in 1718 by French settlers and later captured by the Spaniards, the garrison is now a museum. Here and in the cemetery nearby cluster many memories of Francis Krebs, "the cotton-gin man". It is uncertain whether Krebs is buried here, but other members of his family are.

An unusual tourist attraction which has just come to our attention is located at Lucedale. It's a re-creation of the Holy Land called "Palestinian Gardens," built on a scale of one yard per mile. It's a "living map" which includes 500 miles of Biblical scenes which can be visited in 60 minutes. The Rev. and Mrs. W. Harvell Jackson are the innovators of this unusual miniature attraction, which they say is the result of 25 years of careful research to assure accuracy of detail. The attraction is non-denominational. A view of this attraction is shown below.



D'IBERVILLE HISTORY

By Ione Guice

Many of the older people in Ocean Springs will remember the strange tree that once grew in the yard of the Shore home near the beach.

The trunk of the Myrtle tree which was really two trees grown together formed a perfect shape of a woman - two legs, body, and distinct separate breasts. Many people came to see the strange tree, and viewed by moonlight never failed to give a body a strange feeling.

It has been suggested that a Historical Society be formed, if interested in your town, call 875-2575 or 875-5381.

A passenger car traveling on an expressway will go about 19 miles on a gallon of gas, compared with 14 miles on a city street, according to the National Automobile Club.

PALISADE, N.J. (UPI) — Richard Schiess, 23, who doesn't even have a car driver's license, takes a shipload of 32 passengers at a time, more than 200 times a day, on a flight to the moon and back.

Keeping Live Bait Lively

ODDLY ENOUGH, one of the secrets of keeping bait alive is to store it in some material other than that in which it normally lives. Take nightcrawlers, for instance. Death rates usually soar when you try to keep them like worms in a tub of soil. Much better is to store your supply of nightcrawlers in a tub, box or other container filled with, of all things, dry leaves! There's just one simple trick to it: Sprinkle the leaves lightly with water daily. Evaporation will keep the 'crawlers cool and comfortable. They'll eat the leaves, and stay alive indefinitely.

Or take hellgrammites, the bass fisherman's favorite bait. These big larvae live under rocks in the rillles of streams, yet it's very difficult to keep them alive in water without special facilities. Instead, fill your container half full with well rotted wood and bark. Crumble this material, but leave it coarse enough so that the bait can crawl freely between the chunks. Keep the wood damp, but never let it become soaked. A wring out burlap bag draped over the top will keep the contents cool. Hellgrammites cared for in this way will remain alive for months.

Crayfish also live in water, but the best way to keep a stock of this reliable bait alive is to store it in damp, loose bedding. Rotted wood, sphagnum moss, decomposed leaves or matted green twigs will furnish suitable bedding material. Keep the bedding moist, but not wet, and cover with dampened burlap for the cooling effect. Crayfish are not as hardy as hellgrammites, but they'll live for a substantial period.

Minnows are an exception, of course, for they must be kept in water. But, if your wife consents, try this: Build a small cage of wire screen and hang it in the water tank of your bathroom facility.

Sparked By 38-Year Overdue Book

Wednesday Is Library Day Of Thanksgiving Forgiving

A considerably overdue book has come back to the Mobile Public Library.

Inasmuch as the label on the inside cover gives the library's address as "Conti and Hamilton Streets," and since the present library has been located at 701 Government St. for more than 37 years, it can be concluded that the book is at least 38 years overdue!

The person who returned the book is discreetly listed as anonymous. It arrived in some boxes of old books donated to the library by a Mobilian who quite possibly was not the person who borrowed the book 38 or so years ago but came across it when clearing out some shelves.

In any case, the book is not one that the library has been mourning for these many years (there are some missing books which are irreplaceable, however, and the library does grieve over these). It is a novel, "Helena," by Mrs. Humphry Ward which was published in 1919 by Dodd, Mead and Co. The frontispiece shows the heroine Helena — coquettishly [illegible] in 1919 fashion, but [illegible] susceptible of exciting interest in [illegible].

The [illegible] return of "Helena" provoked two reactions:

Mrs. Emma C. Harris, director emeritus who was librarian when the book was loaned, fingered it with a smile and delivered one of her apt remarks:

"[illegible] I [illegible] now the [illegible] His [illegible] back to the [illegible]id."

Director Hank Blasick said: "Goodness knows how many other books are long overdue. This is a good time for a 'forgiveness day', when borrowers can bring back without any fine books which they are ashamed to return because they are so long overdue and have accumulated such large fines."

However, Blasick added, it would not be fair to excuse only those with long-over due books; in effect this would penalize those whose books are only slightly overdue.

So, for one day — and one day only — all persons with overdue books, no matter how long they have been out, can bring them back without paying any fine (which for adults is now 10 cents the first day, five cents a day thereafter).

With Thanksgiving approaching, the appointed no-fines day is the day before Thanksgiving, this Wednesday, Nov. 24, because the library will be given thank for books long missing.

When the "forgiveness—Thanksgiving Day" is over, fines will be resumed.

In case you might have wondered how much fine would have been charged for "Helena" (borrowed when fines were five cents a day), the figure calculated for 38 years, 365 days a year, plus nine Leap Year days, at five cents per day is $693.95.

Cotton Is Still King In Mississippi

Even since Mississippi was created a state in 1817 cotton has been its spectacular cash crop, spanning first the Golden Age of the big slave operated plantations and the steamboats during which the planters of the Natchez area boasted more millionaires than any other city in the Country—surviving the tenant farmer period of Reconstruction and today with its mechanized operations waging a bitter struggle with the new synthetic fabrics. But strangely few of the people who grow and market cotton today and especially the visitors who see its white podded fields for the first time know much about its fascinating history.

The beginnings of cotton are lost some where in the East centuries ago. Herodotus, the Father of History, tells us that when the Teutonic savages wandered naked in the forests of Germany and the workmen on the cathedrals of Chartres and Notre Dame wore garments of animal skins and wool the natives of China and India had been wearing cotton garments since time immemorial. Alexander the Great sheltered his soldiers under cotton tents, the Senators of Rome wore cotton togas and the followers of Saladin were protected from the wind, sun and sand by cotton burnoses.

This fabric that touches every man, woman and child in some way every hour of the day came to the U.S. via the early settlers of South Carolina who in the long nights grouped around the fireplace tediously separated the lint from the seeds, a laborious hand ginning process that after a night's work by the whole family yielded only a handful of seed free cotton. Most of the Carolina farmers planted small patches to be hand worked by the family and the slaves. Cotton grew luxuriously, the only drawback being the tedious method of getting it ready for the loom. A Yankee finally solved that problem.

By a fortunate incident [illegible] a young man named Eli Whitney graduated from Yale College and set out with his diploma in his hand seeking a job. On the trail of a schoolteacher job he met on the train the widow of General Nathaniel Green of Revolutionary fame who lived in the mansion Mulberry Grove in Georgia. When Eli reported his failure to get the job in Savannah she courteously extended the hospitality of her home to him until he found employment.

Intrigued by the nightly ritual of the lint picking around the fire, his Yankee ingenuity reasoned that there must be an easier and quicker way. He shut himself for weeks in his room working on the problem and finally emerged with the devise that turned the [illegible] and ginning of cotton into a [illegible] million dollar industry.

Eli had no chance [illegible] his invention. Blacksmith [illegible] duplicates as fast as [illegible] take orders. However, South Carolina voted him $50,000 in gratitude and North Carolina followed with $30,000 and Tennessee with $10,000.

By 1825 with the Whitney Gin our national cotton product of cotton reached a half million bales and by 1850 passed the three million mark.

There is an interesting side story to this history of cotton. We, here on the Gulf Coast, know that Whitney was not first with a cotton gin. In fact, he was a belated second. He just had better public relations than our own Pascagoula boy—Baron Franz von Krebs, who not only had a cotton gin working twenty years before Eli, but one that turned out half again as much cotton as the later Eli Whitney model.

If you are skeptical you'll find the proof at Old Spanish Fort in Pascagoula which was once owned and occupied by this same Baron von Krebs. There is on exhibit there a photoscopic copy of the original drawing of the Krebs Cotton Gin, as seen and described by an Englishman named Bernard Romans in 1772. The original is in the Rare Books Division of the Library of Congress.

Chapter 40 Page 204 - "Petit"

Just a few weeks before I commenced to write my chapter on "Petit" I attended a Genealogical letcure given by a lady who had traveled France three times looking up old family records. She had prepared a list of names in ~~thm~~ preminant in early La. history together with the localities in the old country from whence the y sprang. The Petit family originated in ~~thm~~ what is now the Department of Moselle, adjoining both Luxembourg and the Sarr Valley, which was recently taken from France and given to Germany. So, we have another Lorrainer! But I do not know where I can find the birthplace or name of the ancestors of our one and only Petit.

Before going to her, however, I must concede that it is entirely posible that she was related to the Petit who was convicted of rebellion after Spain took over La. from France. This was, indeed, the very first revelution of any colony in the Western Hemisphere against a European Monarchy. It may be best to let Chase tell you this in his famous book "Frenchmen Desire Good Children."

" The record of France in La is characterized by a presistent effort upon the part of that nation to give the country away to anybody except back to the Indians. It was given to Antonine Crozat in 1712, and to John Law in 1716. In 1763 ~~thmkm~~ it was given to Spain; and finally , after Napoleon had taken it back again, it was "given" to the U.S. for 4 ¢ an acre.

The French City of N.O. was shocked when it learned it had given to Spain. However, in the 37 yrs of Spanish domination in La. that nation cost are roughly equivalent to what U. S. paid to buy the country outright.(there is more)
Leaders of this revolution of 1768 was Nicholas Chauvin de Lafrenniere, attorney general of the Colony and son of the first Lafrenniere who had come with Bienville and settled with his brothers at Chapitoulas. Other whoes names deserve a place in the cast of this drama were: Faucault, John and Joseph Milhet, Petit, Noylan, Marzan, Bosisblanc and Villere(I think Faucault was uncle of Hugo's 2nd. wife) Dufour says Joseph Petit might be the brother of Aline Petit or she might be his daughter because aline was born about 1750 or a little later since we know that her last child was born in 1780, she must have died after that. She married Piere Krebs. Her children all born in or near Pascagoula.

CHAPTER 27

KREBS

- o O o -

The origin of our Krebs family is difficult to establish, principally because the Rhineland and its surroundings have passed from German to French jurisdiction and back again, with various sovereignties existing in the interim.

I quote this from a letter from Regina Rapier, who visited the area and did much valuable research while there:

> "The origin of Hugo Ernestus Krebs was in the Rhineland . . . though there were some by that name in the Moselle valley as far south as Alsace who had French titles.
> the archdiocese of Treves is the same district where Nicholas of Cusa, the famous Cardinal-scientist, was born about 1400. His father, Johan Krebs, was a boatbuilder on the Moselle River, and the Cardinal also had a brother, Johan, who may have been the ancestor of our Hugo. . . "

(See preceding page for map showing origin of this family)

- o O o -

This is your great-great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have received 1/256 of your blood. JOHANN von KREBS

I have arbitrarily guessed his birth at about 1692 and his death at about 1742. He married Anna Charitas Fritz, and the only child we know of is our ancestor, Hugo Ernestus von Krebs, who came to America.

He and his wife spent their lives at Neumagen-on-Mosel in the Diocese of Trier (Treves) in the Rhineland.

- o O o -

Son of the above Johann von Krebs, this is your great-great-great-great-great-grandfather, from whom you have received 1/128 of your blood. HUGO ERNESTUS von KREBS

I have arbitrarily placed the date of his birth at about 1715. He made at least one trip to Canada, back to Europe and settled in both Pensacola and Pascagoula, finally dying in New Orleans in 1776, the year our Revolutionary War began.

PASCAGOULA LIBRARY

He was married twice, and had many children. We descend from his first wife, Marie Josephe Simon de LaPointe, daughter of Joseph Simon, Sieur de LaPointe of Pascagoula.

Among other things he was a "surgeon", which means "M. D."

You may recall, if you have read this work page by page, that I have previously introduced to you my father's friend, Professor Deiler. If you have not done so, it would be helpful to turn back to Chapter 19, p.99 on the name Engelhardt, to find out who he is.

I will now let Deiler tell you about the "Germans in Pascagoula", but before doing that let me give you two pieces of information:

1.- Deiler uses the French word "engagés"; this means "volunteers". In other words, they were free people who voluntarily came to settle in the new world, as against forced convicts and slaves, of whom there were many.

2.- There is no longer a town called "Scranton". The town was always called Pascagoula, but when the "Barrett Lightning Matinee Train" was merged into the Louisville & Nashville system, the home office thought Pascagoula was too hard to pronounce, and called the station "Scranton". The resentment of the citizens finally induced the railroad to reverse its judgement.

GERMANS IN PASCAGOULA.

In January, 1721, 300 engagés came to the concession of Madame Chaumont in Pascagoula. There were no Germans among them, as the census of 1725 shows, but Pensacola must be mentioned here, as there was a German colony at that place very early, arising, perhaps, on the ruins of this concession or of some other enterprise. The date of the founding of that German settlement is not known; but, in 1772, the English captain Ross found there, on the farm of "Krebs," cotton growing and a roller cotton gin, the invention of Krebs, and, perhaps, the first successful cotton gin in America.[8]

In the same year (1772) we hear of a great storm which raged most furiously "on the farm of Krebs and among the Germans of Pascagoula."

His last will and testament, written in New Orleans in the Spanish language in 1776, gives his full name as "Hugo Ernestus Krebs." He was from Neumagen on the Moselle, Germany, and left fourteen grown children, whose descendants still own the old Krebs farm, which the author visited in August, 1906. It is situated on a slight elevation on the border of "Krebs' Lake" near the mouth of the Pascagoula River, and a mile and a half north of the railroad station of Scranton (now incorporated with East Pascagoula), Mississippi.

[8] Cotton was planted in Louisiana much earlier. Charlevoix saw some in a garden in Natchez in 1721; and Dupratz constructed a machine for extracting the seed; but his machine was a failure.

The Creoles there call the Krebs home "the old fort," and the three front rooms forming the center of the house, the rest consisting of more recent additions, were evidently built with a view of affording protection against the Indians. The walls of this part of the house are eighteen inches thick. The masonry consists of a very hard concrete of lime, unbroken large oyster shells, and clay. The post and sills are of heavy cypress, which, after serving at least 175 years, do not show any signs of decay. The floor is made of concrete similar to that of the walls, but a wooden floor has been laid upon it, taking away about eighteen inches from the original height of the rooms. All the wood work was hewn with the broad axe.

In front of the house lies an old mill stone which once upon a time served to crush the corn.

Near the house is the "Krebs Cemetery," with the tombs of the members of the Krebs family, of whom a great number are buried there. The accompanying pictures were taken on the spot.

According to the family traditions the old fort was built by "Commodore de la Pointe," who is said to have been a brother of Madame Chaumont. Hamilton, in his "Colonial Mobile," page 140, says that Joseph Simon de la Pointe received, on the 12th of November, 1715, from Governor Cadillac, a land concession on Dauphine Island for the purpose of enabling him to raise cattle. As Dauphine Island was practically abandoned, after the great storm of 1717, de la Pointe probably also gave up his concession, and a map, drawn about 1732 ("Colonial Mobile," page 86) shows "Habitation du Sieur Lapointe" [*]) on the very spot where the Krebs homestead now stands, near the mouth of the Pascagoula River.

La Pointe's daughter, Marie Simon de la Pointe, became the first wife of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Thus the old fort came into possession of the Krebs family, where it still remains, the present owner and occupant being Mrs. J. T. Johnson, née Cécile Krebs, an amiable and highly intelligent lady to whom the author's thanks are due. She is the great grand-daughter of Joseph Simon Krebs, the eldest son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Simon de la Pointe.

Francesco Krebs, the second son of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Simon de la Pointe, received Round Island in the Bay of Pascagoula, containing about 110 acres of land, as a grant from the Spanish government, on the 13th of December, 1783, after having occupied it for many years. The family of his wife had received permission to settle there from the French governor Bienville, who left Louisiana in May, 1743.

[*]) Every concessioner was given the title of "Sieur".

This "Old Spanish Fort and Museum" is the Krebs home that Deiler mentions in the foregoing excerpt from his book. Some day you should go to see it. It is interesting. I am sorry that the pictures appearing in Deiler's book did not reproduce well on the Xerox, but the Pelican Publishing Company is in the process of completely reprinting Deiler's book.

After you pay the toll and take the hand-bill, but before proceeding at normal speed, look South - to your right - beyond the Ingalls Shipyard, and on a clear day you can see Round Island, also mentioned by Deiler.

The Pascagoula Indians were gentle and peace-loving. The Biloxi's were brutal savages. Both tribes were very small, and were probably off-shoots of the Choctaws. Shortly after the Pascagoula settlement, the Biloxis attacked the whites and the Pascagoulas, living harmoniously together. Our settlers placed the women and children on Round Island and went to battle the Biloxis. But the Pascagoulas, rather than face another battle with their savage neighbors, joined hands, men, women and children, and, singing their doleful songs, walked into the river and drowned themselves. Meantime, our menfolk destroyed the Biloxi braves and their tribe moved inland.

If you have the time some quiet Summer evening, especially if there is a full moon, get in a small skiff and row out to the middle of the Pascagoula River, not too far from the highway bridge. If you wait until everything is still and quiet, you can still hear the poor gentle Pascagoulas singing their quaint songs -- the bases and the baritones; the sopranos and the altos; and, above all, the children.

PIERRE KREBS

Born in Pascagoula, in 1743, he married there and died in 1787 -- I suspect in Pensacola, though I am not too sure. He was about 20 years old when the English took West Florida away from Spain and made Baton Rouge the capital. He died just three years after Spain retook West Florida from England and removed the capital to Pensacola.

He was married twice; once to Jeanne Durit (sometimes spelled Duatis) and to Aline Petit. Both marriages seem to have taken place in Pascagoula. We do not know which marriage occurred first. We descend from Aline Petit, and as far as I know he had no children by the other marriage.

Note that it seems to have been Pierre who, together with all others of his generation, completely dropped the 'von' and assumed French first names, although all the official records spelled these first names the Spanish way.

This being the end of the name Krebs, because the surname is lost upon her marriage to Senac, I will now give you what I know about the more important descendants of Agnes Krebs and her husband, Pierre Senac.

Captain JOSEPH FRY

Grandson of Agnes Krebs, this is your first cousin thrice removed. If you are sufficiently interested, I will let you read my copy of "Life of Capt. Joseph Fry, The Cuban Martyr", by Jeanie Mort Walker of New Orleans, (1875).

This is a reproduction of his signature, which appears under a steel engraving of his bust as appears in the above mentioned biography.

Captain Fry entered the United States Navy as a Midshipman, by taking the bull by the horns and going directly to Washington and securing an interview with President Tyler.

He was Captain of the U. S. S. Plymouth, under Commodore Matthew C. Perry when that fleet was ordered to force Japan to open her ports to U. S. merchant ships in 1853.

Tiring of sea duty, he found himself in charge of lighthouse service and stationed at New Orleans when Louisiana seceded from the union. The word reached him while he was sitting at his desk, writing a report. He immediately put down his pen, removed his insignia and offered his services to the Confederacy. His service was outstanding, and the New Orleans Picayune in 1861 gives him credit, as commander of the C. S. Ivy, for having driven, from Southwest Pass, the U. S. South Carolina and a gunboat on October 17, 1861. This was when Farragut was entering the Mississippi.

Fry remained in the C. S. Navy until the end, even fighting in the Battle of Mobile Bay.

After the Civil War he tried various civilian enterprises, but he had been at sea so long he couldn't remain "on the beach". At that time, too, there was a tremendous sympathy for the Cubans and many Americans were anxious to help free that Island from Spain. Many a plot to free Cuba was hatched in New Orleans, and Captain Fry entered the hazardous career of smuggling arms and ammunition to the Cubans.

He was captain of the S. S. Virginius, with a cargo of arms and ammunition for the Cuban rebels, was overtaken at sea by the Spanish navy, and he and his crew were executed by a firing squad in Santiago, Cuba, November 7, 1873, in violation of all international law.

Up to the time the communist Castro took over that poor Island, all school children were taught to revere Captain Fry and the Virginius.

THE FIRST COTTON GIN

It is always stated, in school books and historical works, that prior to the invention of the cotton gin, by Eli Whitney, the cotton fibres had to be separated from the seed by hand, taking an immense amount of time to separate a few pounds. Thqt this was not true will appear from the following quotations from the travel book describing the journey by Bernard Romans in 1771 and 1772. On the subject of cotton, Romans writes:

"Give this plant a dry soil, and further it will cost you little trouble or attention; it must be planted in rows at regular distances about six feet apart: plant the seed in rainy weather, and in about five months' time the fibres will be completely formed and the parts fit together, which will be known by their being completely expanded; it must now be carried to the mill, of which take the following description.

"It is a strong frame of four stubs, each about four feet high, and joined above and below by strong transverse pieces; across this are placed two round well-polished iron spindles, having a small groove through their whole length, and by means of treadles are by the workman' foot put in directly opposite motions to each other: the workman sits before the frame, having a thin board, of seven or eight inches wide, and in length of the frame, before him; this board is so fixed to the frame that it may be moved over again and near the spindle; he has the cotton in a basket near him, and with his left hand spreads it on this board along the spindles, which by their turning draw the cotton through them, being wide enough to admit the cotton, but too near to permit the seed to go through, which, being thus forced to leave the cotton in which it was contained, and by its rough coat entangled, falls to the ground between the workman's legs, while the cotton drawn through falls on the other side into an open bag suspended for that purpose under the spindles.

"The French in Florida have much improved this machine by a large wheel which turns two of these mills at once, and with so much velocity as, by means of an a boy who turns it, to employ two negroes at hard labor to shovel the seed from under the h mill. One of these machines I saw at Mr. Krebs' at Pasca Oocooloo, but as it was p: ly taken down, he claiming the invention was very cautious in answering my questions. I cannot pretend to describe it accurately; I am informed that one of these improving mills will deliver seventy or eighty pounds of clean cot per diem.

The above notes on Mr. Krebs' cotton gin are taken from Colonial Mobile, by Peter J. Hamilton, published in 1897. The following are other notes relative to the Krebs ~~xxim~~ family in Mobile, taken from that work:

Describing the great storm of August 30 through September 3, 1772, Hamilton says that "The greatest severity of the storm, however, was felt by Krebs and the Germans near Pascagoula river."

In connection with the ownership of Round Island by the Krebs family, Hamilton says: "So in December, 1783, Chastang senior, Dubroca, and ~~xxxxxx~~ Duret similarly certify that Round Island had been possessed by no one except Mme.Maurau, who was in possession in 1752 without title. This leads to the absolute grant to Francis Krebs, whose memorial sets up that Bienville had permitted Mme. Maurau, mother-in-law of Krebs, to occupy the island in 1745, and that Galvez had once stopped there on returning from Mobile and Pensacola and promised Mme. Krebs a grant."

"James Innerarity in 1809 became the owner of Round Island, once the property of Francis Krebs."

New Orleans, La.,
July 18, 1971.

Dear Regina:

They arrived! I mean the Xerox copies of certain records in the St. Louis Cathedral, which I mentioned in my letter to you of July 14, 1971.

The net result is that I am more confused than ever. I was anxious to learn the name of the maternal grandmother of Agnes Krebs, so I ordered the baptismal records of two of her brothers, which I sent you July 14. As you already know, one of the records does not show the name of the maternal grandmother, whereas the other is written in such a manner that it can be taken two ways, St.Pé, which is a La. name, or Sarpí, which is the old way of spelling the prominent family name Sarpy.

Mrs. Forsyth, in her very coöperative manner, as usual, dug up several baptisms of Agnes' mother's siblings, and I get a confusion: Sappé, Sappè and Sapet. I therefore prepared the attached digest of these records, entitled: What's The Name, Please? and passed it around at a meeting of the Genealogical Research Society of N. O. yesterday. The only positive reply forthcoming then came from a Sarpy descendant, who says most positively that it could not be Sarpy, because they were not here in 1752, and furthermore, in all his research he has not found a Cecile or Cecille in the family in La.

So, we have another problem: What was the family name of Agnes' grandmother.

In Mrs. Forsyth's research, however, she also found a very interesting 1721 marriage of Paul Durif, "soldat, natif de Clermont en Auvergne" and Marie Curé, "natif de Paris". This couple could easily be the grandparents of Mrs. Augustin Krebs.

So, as usual in genealogy, the answer to one question is simply the raising of two or more other questions.

Sincerely,

Glen

FRANCIS B. LATADY
935 BROWN-MARX BUILDING
BIRMINGHAM 3, ALABAMA

January 23, 1967

Dear Richard:

A happy New Year to you and Dorothy and the children. I have been terribly busy with a lot of things, and have puzzled out a few more items of necessary information, principally the birth dates of our ancestors, Mariano Latady and Emerante Krebs. Some of these things come back to me, in a way, from having heard my father talk about them.

I enclose a Xerox of a paper which Captain Mariano addressed to his son, Don Eugenio, and to his sons if he has any, telling him that in a skirmish at Fort San Miguel, with the Americans, in 1810, he lost his baptismal certificate. He proceeds to say that his father was Don Francisco Latady, who was called "El Vizcaino." That means that in place of coming from one of the Basque Provinces, as his will states, he came from the province of Vizcaya, and was known as "The Vizcayan." This is something which my father told me years ago. The paper goes on to say that he, Mariano, was born in the Street of San Juan, on the 20th day of January, 1776. I had figured out the year only, from the military record.

There is also a letter in which Eugene Latady, Senior, your great-grandfather, applied for a position with the Southern Bank of Alabama, at Mobile, on August 28, 1850, giving as his sureties the names of Joseph Krebs and Augustin Demouy. The main interest in this letter, however, is that there is a note on the back in Eugene Latady's handwriting, giving the date of birth of Mrs. Emerante Latady as January 15, 1780. She was five years younger than her husband.

I am returning the letter from Miss Rapier, which you so kingly sent me, and which have had copied. I have also received a most interesting letter from Miss Rapier, and enclose a copy of my reply.

After April 15th, I think I shall go to Mobile and make some inquiries at the Cathedral about names and dates. I am particularly puzzled by a confusion which seems to have existed in regard to my grandmother's family name. I have always known it as Dineen, but there is a copy of my father's baptismal certificate in which her name is given as Margaret Denny. Also, among the treatment histories of my gransfather's family, in which they were dosed so faithfully with medicines No. 1 and No. 2, there is a record for Miss Maria Denny. The Dineens came from Cork, and the name is well known there. I have two copies of The Capuchin Annual, published in Dublin, which contain many interesting advertisements, among them John J. Dineen & Sons, who have several wholesale and retail grocery stores. I was seven or eight years old when my grandmother died, and always remember that her name was Dineen.

We were all so deeply gratified by the gift you and Dorothy sent to Charles and Jeanne. May God biess you both.

As fast as things develop, I will keep you informed.

Sincerely yours, Francis L.

Dear Rita,

This is the letter which verifies that Emerante Krebs' birth date is the same as that given for Estefana Krebs in the St. Louis Cathedral baptismal record. Her baptismal record and that of her sister Agnes (Ynez) were listed under the name "Creps" of which you have a copy. I am sending for the baptismal record of Charles Rene Krebs which gives Marie Joseph Simon LaPointe's birthplace as LaRochelle, France, and will send you and Archie Gautier each a copy. Really had a wonderful time and appreciate all that you did for me while in Pascagoula. Hope to see you again in the not too distant future. Sincerely your cousin (in-law)

Dear Mrs. Krebs,

I enclose a copy of a deed of division which was obtained from Mrs. Stella Evansen, a granddaughter of Natalie (Krebs) DeVillenevue who is mentioned in the deed. It was of great use to me and I thought it might also help you in some way. You may keep the enclosed copy and I will also send a copy to Regina Rapier with whom I have not yet corresponded.

Is there much news on the Krebs family lately? I believe it has been over a year since we corresponded.

If I can, I mean to get over to Pascagoula for the day sometime in the next few months to do some research.

MRS. AMANDA KREBS.

Mrs. Mary Amanda Krebs died at her home at 108 River Front in this city on Tuesday, July 3, 1928, at 12:20 o'clock p. m. Her funeral took place Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock from the Catholic church, Rev. Father O'Reilly officiating, interment in the Krebs cemetery.

Mrs. Krebs was born in Pascagoula, 89 years ago last September, and was therefore, at the time of her death, the oldest person living in Pascagoula, both as to age and as to the number of years residence here, having resided in this city her days. She was a sister of the late W. E. Frederic, and was therefore connected with three of the best families in the city, the Frederic, Krebs and Delmas families.

Of late years she has been confined to her home by illness and the infirmities of age, but before that time led an active life and was identified with much of the earlier history of the community. She had a large circle of friends and many relatives among the three families with which she was connected.

She had no living children, but is survived by three grand children, Mrs. E. J. Krebs and Messrs. Frederic and Wilhelm Sward of this city, four great grand children and a host of nephews, nieces and other relatives, to whom sympathies are extended in the passing of this good woman.

Sir,

Having been informed that you will take charge of my sisters affairs, Mrs. Alick. I am taking the liberty of writing a few lines to ask you sincerely to allow MADELAINE to come and stay some time with me. She is complaining of bad health and I believe that the air from the country would help her a lot. When I saw her a few days ago, she asked me sincerely if I would want to take her interest upon myself. She manifested the wish of living with me a few days. I believe from the wonderful care that she gave her mistress, she well deserves a few days of kindness. If it is in your power, try to have the kindness to permit her to come, I am with respect, your friend and cousin.

HISTORIC OLD KREBS CEMETERY

Alongside Old Spanish Fort in Pascagoula, recognized as the oldest still standing building in the entire Mississippi Valley, is the ancient family burial plot of the Krebs. Because of its association it, too, is recognized as one of the few still surviving family cemeteries in that million square miles that encompassed the original French Colony of Louisiana.

The Krebs family stems from Baron Frans von Krebs who married the daughter of Colonel de la Pointe who built this fortress home in 1718. Baron Von Krebs and his new wife took occupancy of it about ten years later and from then on the lake it overlooked was known as "Krebs Lake" and the home itself was called "Krebs Fort" until the Spanish domination of the Mississippi Gulf Coast caused it to be refered to from then on in history as "Old Spanish Fort."

Obviously the family cemetery was established upon the first death in the family and the ancient crumbling graves stones in this cemetery give evidence that it served the Krebs for well into two centuries.

Among the time blackened tomstones is one that reads in French "Ici reposen sept des enfants de Rene Krebs et de Marie nee Dupont, son espouse, tous decedes en bas age." A graphic reminder -- "seven children to die under age" -- of the grief that must have plagued this couple year after year and of the mortality rate of children in those pioneer days.

This cemetery is a dramatic presentation of the early history of the Krebs family -- the gravestones of so many of them born in one century and laid to rest in another! Today it is a combination of graves so old that their original identities are lost and new ones that blend the cemetery's history with this present generation. It is probably the oldest existing record of the Krebs family that originated in Pascagoula and which, over those two centuries, has become so much a part of the community that one prominent Pascagoulian admits to having 75 first cousins, all of which but two were Krebs.

HOW IT ALL CAME OUT

The following acts, relative to historical and conservation programs administered by the Department of Archives and History, were passed by the 1972 session of the Legislature. We appreciate the support of the Legislature, which will permit us to continue in business at the same old stand, and even to expand our services somewhat during the fiscal year July 1, 1972-June 30, 1973.

H. B. 536. To require preparation of a master plan for the development of Jefferson College buildings and grounds as an official state historic site and to delineate powers and duties of the Jefferson College Advisory Committee.

H. B. 578. To reappropriate funds to be expended by the State Building Commission and the Department of Archives and History for repairs and renovations at Jefferson Military College. $250,000.

H. B. 610. To appropriate $26,000 as state matching funds for the development of the Grand Village of the Natchez Indians, Natchez.

H. B. 632. To defray the expenses of the Department of Archives and History for the fiscal year 1973. State funds, $362,781; special source funds including federal funds, $77,000; or a total support fund of $439,781.

H. B. 1233. For conservation and care of paintings in the Hall of Fame and the Hall of Governors. $6,080.

Senate Concurrent Resolution 545. To create the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission, the Department of Archives and History to serve as the executive agency of the Commission.

S. B. 2014. To reappropriate $25,000 to the Department of Archives and History for the publication of a history of Mississippi as part of Mississippi's commemoration of the bicentennial of the American Revolution.

S. B. 2025. To amend Chapter 451, Laws of 1971, to create the Nanih Waiya Advisory Committee.

CRAWFISH CAPER. Your editor, on leave during the month of May, took a busman's holiday and crossed the state line into Louisiana, where she toured the bayou country, Greek Revival mansions and Acadian museums to keep everything on a professional basis, and ate crawfish in abundance to make it all worth while. As we have a complaining reader in Quitman County who will write to ask if this was on an expense account, the answer is no. Back in Mississippi, we visited Department projects in Adams County, ruined our shoes in the Grand Village of the Natchez Indians, walked through the Jefferson College site, and climbed to the top of Emerald Mound, just off the Natchez Trace, to see how our countryside looked to the First People, before they ran afoul of the French. The rest, as you know, is history.

KREBS PORTRAIT. A flag day ceremony and the unveiling of the portrait of Hugo Ernestud Krebs was held at Old Spanish Fort, Pascagoula, Sunday, June 11, at 3 p.m. Krebs occupied the de la Pointe house, now known as "the Spanish Fort," with his wife, the former Josephine de la Pointe, in the 1730s. Krebs invented a cotton gin in 1772, which was recorded by Bernard Romans, historian. The Spanish Fort Building was listed in the National Register of Historic Places in September, 1971, after its nomination by the Department of Archives and History.

HISTORY OF MISSISSIPPI. According to Dr. R. A. McLemore, editor, all of the copy for the two-volume history of Mississippi now in progress has been received, and galley proofs for the first volume have been received by the editorial staff. This puts the history right on target for its publication date, November, 1972, and in good time for Christmas giving.

STAFF NOTES. James H. Stone, Hattiesburg, joined the staff as assistant administrator, Division of Historic Sites and Archaelogy, on June 1. Stone comes to us from Florida State University, where he did his course work for his dissertation, and holds a bachelor's degree from Mississippi Southern and a master's degree from Ole Miss. Sam McGahey, field archaeologist with the staff since 1968, has moved into division headquarters in the Archives and History Building. Archaeologist John Connaway, who also began work in the Department in 1968, remains in the field. Caroline Allen, who holds a M.S. in L.S. from the University of Kentucky, has accepted the position of staff librarian. We are grateful to Mrs. Ada Corban, librarian, who held the fort in May and June, during the illness of our head librarian, Mrs. T. Eugene Caldwell.

YOUTH MOVEMENT. College students in our summer intern program include Sue Robertson, University of Southern Mississippi; Ed Polk Douglas, University of Virginia; Kate Lampton, University of Vermont; and Nancy Tipton, University of Mississippi. Kendall Wall, a high school student, is helping with the reorganization of the collection file rooms in the Old Capitol Museum.

ATTENDS INSTITUTE. Miss Harriet Heidelberg, genealogist and assistant librarian for the Department attended the Institute of Genealogy and Historical Research at Samford University in Birmingham June 19-23.

GUN EXPERT. Bill Wright, senior historian, Division of Historic Sites and Archaeology, participated in the American Studies Seminar at Mississippi College sponsored by the History Department of the College in June. Wright addressed a session on Civil War guns.

MANSION MEMORIES. Mrs. Samuel C. Strite, Hagerstown, Maryland, the former Claudia Brewer, writes about her childhood in the Governor's Mansion as follows: "I remember the many many layers of straw carpeting all over the main front half, and riding my tricycle leaving a trail of dust. When Mom asked for hardwood floors and a committee came to see, I demonstrated my dust trail for their benefit. It must have helped because that was when hardwood floors were put in." Claudia continues: "There were no closets in bedrooms, just old time armoires, and Minnie was so tiny that when she wanted a dress she had to step up inside to get her dress out. The darn thing turned over on her one night but fell over the side of the bed, so she fell out and was protected by the bed. Great excitement." Well, public life was never safe, not even during the Brewer administration, 1912-1916.

Introduction of Krebs Descendants and History of the Museum Building

Joseph Simon de la Pointe, French Naval Officer, came to the Gulf Coast with D'Iberville and Bienville 1699. He was deeded land on Dauphin Island, 1715. Later in 1718, he built "The Spanish Fort".

Hugo Ernestus Krebs arrived in the early seventeen thirties. Married Marie Josephine, daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe. They had six children. Krebs second marriage was to Marie Chauvin Joyuse. They had seven children. Ten generations of Krebs still reside in Mississippi and along the Gulf Coast.

Krebs' will was written, in Spanish, in 1776 in New Orleans. It is believed that he was buried there. History records that he was a surgeon also a farmer, and that he raised cotton, rice, indigo and sugar cane on this property which was called at the time "Krebs Fort". It was here that Bernard Romans recorded a cotton gin, invented by Krebs in 1772. This was twenty years before Eli Whitney invented his cotton gin. Roman's book, "Republic of West Florida" is in the Rare Books Division, Library of Congress. The last descendent that owned and lived in the "Spanish Fort" was Mrs. J. T. Johnson (nee Cecile Krebs) great grand daughter of Joseph Simon Krebs who was the son of Hugo and Marie Krebs.

September 1971, the Spanish Fort building was listed in the National Register of Historic Places, in Washington D.C., thus becoming one of forty-five National Registered Properties in Mississippi.

'Old Spanish Fort'

Museum Recalls Glory Of Fort

High on a bluff overlooking the Pascagoula River stands the "Old Spanish Fort" with its sun-dried, oyster-shell, mud and stick walls which were hand-made over two centuries ago. Ironically, the "Old Spanish Fort" is not a fort at all, nor was it built by the Spanish. Rather, it is the carpentry shop from the original de la Pointe settlement founded in 1718 and later owned by the German nobleman who married de la Pointe's daughter.

KREBS

The settlement was then known as Kreb's fort. Baron von Krebs lived like a feudal lord, owned slaves by the hundreds and raised cotton, indigo and rice. He was an inventor as well as surgeon and farmer. Among the existing relics is proof that he invented a practical cotton gin 20 years before Eli Whitney.

Today the house is a museum, having been taken over and restored by the Jackson County Historical Society in 1949. The society unveiled a portrait of von Krebs at a museum ceremony last Sunday.

The building stands as a link to the past. Hundreds of stories and legends are connected with the site. In 1760 the British took over the area, only to be displaced by the Spanish six years later. Hence the name "Spanish Fort." The shop withstood battles between settlers and Indians, the French and English, the English and Spanish.

Located in Pascagoula, five blocks north of U.S. Highway 90, the museum should be included on any tour of the Gulf Coast.

Krebs portrait unveiled

The portrait of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, one of the earliest residents of the Old Spanish Fort, was unveiled in special ceremonies Sunday afternoon on the grounds of the fort.

The portrait, presented to the fort museum by Miss Hermina Earnest of New Orleans, was unveiled by Miss Joan Portas and accepted by Mrs. Archie Gautier, president of the Jackson County Historical Society.

Many direct descendants of Krebs joined interested residents of the county for the ceremonies which included presentation of a flag to the fort by American Legion Post 160.

VINCENT ROS, chairman of the board of the Jackson County Historical Society, was master of ceremonies. Guests were welcomed by Pascagoula City Manager Phillip Kelley and the invocation and benediction were given by the Rev. Clark McMurray, First Baptist Church, and the Rev. Louis Lohan, Our Lady of Victories Church.

Rear Adm. Charles N. Payne, Supervisor of Shipbuilding, U.S. Navy, Pascagoula, was guest speaker for the flag presentation.

JACKSON COUNTY Board of Supervisors President E. A. Khayat introduced descendants of Krebs attending the ceremony and recounted the history of Krebs.

Hugo Ernestus Krebs arrived in the early 1730s and married Marie Josephine de la Pointe, daughter of the builder of The Spanish Fort. They had six children. Krebs' second marriage was to Marie Chauvin Joyuse and they had seven children. Ten generations of Krebs still reside in Mississippi and along the Gulf Coast.

Mrs. Gautier said the portrait of Krebs will hang over the mantel in the center room of the museum.

OLD SPANISH FORT AT PASCAGOULA
Its French, Not a Fort—But Krebs Home Once

The Weekender

Dedicate Portrait

By CARL McINTIRE
Sunday Editor

Today at 3 o'clock at the Old Spanish Fort in Pascagoula there will be a ceremony to unveil the portrait of one of the early residents of the fort—Hugo Ernestus Krebs.

And it is in such events as this that Mississippi history gets all wound up in a most interesting and fascinating fashion—even unbelievable to those who have not paid enough heed to the vagaries of people, events and places of the dim past in the Magnolia State.

The Spanish Fort—first of all—is not Spanish, but of French origin. It was never a fort, but the carpentry shop of the French settlement of Joseph Simon de la Pointe, who came from France with D'Iberville and Bienville in 1699, was deeded some land and homesteaded.

The carpentry shop—likely as some other buildings—was made of oyster shells and limestone and is believed to have been erected in about 1718. The very thick walls have withstood hurricanes, other storms, Indians and wars, plus long years of use as a house and then long years of neglect.

Saved from destruction by history lovers about a quarter century ago, it has become one of the most important historical sites in Mississippi. Study of the place has brought much more history to light.

KREBS PORTRAIT

Like the story of Krebs, whose portrait will be unveiled today.

De la Pointe, a brother of Madame de Chaumont who was deeded the Pascagoula site by the French government, apparently moved from his Dauphin Island site (now in Alabama) to Pascagoula and started the settlement on his sister's land.

He needed some help, so he brought in a boat load of Germans in about 1830. That must have included Krebs. Now this Krebs was quite a fellow.

First, he married the boss' daughter, Marie Josephine, de la Point's offspring. He became a surgeon and a farmer, plus being an inventor who displayed—and is fully credited for it now—a cotton gin 20 years before Eli Whitney.

With Marie Josephine, he had six children. After her death, he wed again and fathered seven other children.

The Krebs family, being a large one then, has continued to today and many descendants reside in the Pascagoula area. The lake adjacent to the fort is now known as Krebs Lake, though early maps list it as Lake Catahoula.

To further confuse this interesting bit of history, let it be noted that this German, who married a French girl and lived at what is now the Spanish Fort, went to New Orleans in the 1870s, had his will drawn up in Spanish and is believed to have died and been buried there.

The last descendant of the Krebs who lived at the Spanish Fort was Mrs. J. T. Johnson (nee Cecile Krebs), a great-great-granddaughter of Hugo.

In a fitting ceremony to honor such a man from the history of the area, the event today will include the unveiling of the portrait by Mrs. Diane Krebs Yandell, and the presentation by Miss Hermina Earnest, New Orleans.

The acceptance will be by Mrs. Henry Gautier, president of the Jackson County Historical Society that owns the fort and has preserved it.

Others taking part will be Edward Khayat, emcee, Cincent Ross, Rev. Clark McMurray, Mayor Ben L. Briggs, Legionnaire Dave Balduff, George B. Hague, Joel Slayter, Legion Commander John F. Szymonik and Admiral Charles N. Payne, U. S. Navy, who will be the speaker.

Unveiling ceremony, flag celebration held

Unveiling ceremony and Flag Day Celebration were held at Old Spanish Fort Museum in Pascagoula with hostesses in ante-bellum dresses. They were Mrs. Christine Oaks, Mrs. Tressie Caulk, Mrs. Betty Rodgers, Mrs. Emily Legare, Mrs. Aline Gambrell, Mrs. Iva Williamson from Jackson, and Mrs. Helen Callagan from Jackson.

Vincent Ros, chairman of the board of Jackson County Historical Society, was master of ceremonies and the Rev. Clark McMurray of First Baptist Church gave the invocation. Phillip Kelly, city manager from Pascagoula, welcomed visitors and guests.

The Plantation Home hostesses with escorts from the Pascagoula Chapter of DeMolays, presenting the seven sovereign flags that have flown over the Old Spanish Fort were Janice Gautier who carried the flag of France and was escorted by Kyle Lochart; Sue Adkins carried the flag of England and was escorted by Everett Simmons; Mrs. Lois Adkins carried the flag of Spain and was escorted by Scott McWhirter; Elizabeth McCain carried the flag of the Republic of West Florida and was escorted by Larry Ransom; Lanier Gautier carried the Magnolia State Flag and was escorted by Billy Herrington; Mrs. Dorothy Pierce carried the Confederate Flag and was escorted by French Caldwell; Nancy Gautier carried the American Flag and was escorted by Bern Gautier.

Two other DeMolay members, Steve Willis and Mickey Nickelson assisted with the ceremony. Les Hayes and Guy Blake were in charge of cold drinks and candy.

Americanism Chairman Dave Balduff of American Legion Post 160, assisted by E. J. Granger, presented a new American flag to the fort. Also presented was one from William M. Colmer which had been flown over the Capitol at Washington, D. C. Joel Slayter of Pascagoula High School Band played the trumpet as the new flag was raised.

George B. Hague, vice president of Jackson County Historical Society, accepted the flag.

Commander John F. Szymonik of American Legion Post 160 led the pledge of allegiance to the flag, assisted by an honor guard of eight Legionaires and one Boy Scout.

Ros introduced the guest speaker, Adm. Charles N. Payne, Supervisor of Shipbuilding, U.S. Navy.

Another highlight of the ceremony was the unveliling and presentation of a picture of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Edward Khayat, president of Jackson County Board of Supervisors, was master of ceremonies and gave a short history of the museum building. He read the names of the living descendants of Hugo Krebs and introduced those present.

Miss Joan Kreds Portas unveiled the picture which was presented by J. E. Krebs. Mrs. Henry Gautier, president of Jackson County Historical Society, accepted the gift and thanked those who helped to obtain it for the fort.

The Rev. Louis Lohan of Our Lady of Victories Church gave the benediction.

USM co-ed wins top prize in State Collegiate Art Show

Diane Krebs, Pascagoula, a sophomore majoring in art at the University of Southern Mississippi, has been named winner of the top prize in the annual State Collegiate Art Show in Jackson, sponsored by the Mississippi Art Assn.

She was one of 10 USM student artists who submitted a total of 32 paintings for judging in the competition, which is open to students in all of the colleges and junior colleges in the state.

There were 179 paintings by 68 students representing nine schools in the show. Schools represented, in addition to USM, were Delta State, MSCW, Mississippi College, Ole Miss, Belhaven, Hinds Junior College, Jones Junior College, and Northeast Junior College.

Miss Krebs, who is specializing in drawing and painting and who is a student of Charles Ambrose, associate professor of art at Southern, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Krebs, Pascagoula. Her prize-winning entry was an unnamed non-objective oil painting.

Another Southern student, Hector Bourg, a junior from Long Beach who is majoring in commercial art, received an honorable mention citation for his collage, "The Twenty-second." He is the son of Mrs. James Doherty, Long Beach.

The Collegiate Exhibition is on view in the Mississippi Art Assn. galleries on North State St. in Jackson during the month of April.

Young Artists Of State Give Future Bright Look

By LOUIS DOLLARHIDE

he annual Collegiate Art Exition, which opened last week a large crowd in spite of the n, is at ribute to talent and d teaching in our colleges.
Very few of the almost 200 intings, prints, drawings, and ramic pieces were lacking in mmendable qualities. And for show which excluded no en-ies, this is a high praise deed.

Marie Hull, who gave the gal-ry talk, commented that if e show keeps growing from ear to year we will soon have have a new gallery to hold

The first prize of $250.00 went Dianne Krebs of the Uni-ersity of Southern Mississippi or an oil in very subtle shades f blue and green.

The second prize of $50.00 went to Ken Herrington of Jones Junior College for a very original print of quality and distinction.

In addition, juror Homer Casteel gave two Special Mentions and two Honorable Mentions.

Virginia Cole of MSCW was chosen for a Special Mention for a black and white drawing of a female figure.

STRONG DESIGN

Lewis (Ruki) Stowers of Mississippi College, last year's first prize winner, was given Special Mention for a freely-excuted watercolor of an old suspension bridge, a work of strong design and fluid strength.

The Honorable Mentions were Jim Kemp of Mississippi College for an abstract oil and Hector Bourg of University of Southern Mississippi for a collage.

This second work, entitled, "The Twenty-Second," is in some ways the most arresting painting in the show, partly from its subject (the assassination of President Kennedy) but even more from the professional handling of design and color.

OTHERS OUTSTANDING

Among the other outstanding works, Lewis Sanders of the University of Mississippi, using a wash technique, creates an abstract of almost oriental suggestivity and grace.

Norma Wilcox of Mississippi College, James Guercio and Joseph Perotti of the University of Southern Mississippi, and Stan Topol of Delta State all entered pictures of distinction.

In fact there is so much knowledgable painting, so much talent present in the show that one can look and feel pleased that these are our young artists, that with them our future looks brighter.

In Gallery No 5 Lewis (Ruki) Stowers of Mississippi College, last year's first prize winner, is to be seen in a one man-show of water-colors.

Ruki, a many talented young man from Jackson, is already a master of water color techniques. Although still lacking the depths and intensity of the late William Hollingsworth, qualities which must come with age and experience, Ruki is perhaps the closest thing to that great and gifted painter to appear.

He sees with a poet's eye, he feels for the world around him very much as William Hollingsworth did. And he shows that in time the same degree of mastery of painting may be his.

RARE VIRTUOSITY

Like many gifted young painters, Ruki has an amazing facility, a rare virtuosity, which can amount to mere glibness unless one is dedicated to his craft. And at the present time facility is what shows up most in some of his work.

But as he develops, as he bends the mere mechanics of painting to the mould of feeling and deep meaning, his work will take on a splendor achieved only by the true artist, by a man like William Hollingsworth.

Since his high school days at Murrah, Ruki has been a young man to watch. For those of us who share this privilege, watching talent develop and mature is somehow worth all our efforts.

JOINT EXHIBIT

At the Little Theater Sam Gore and Alan Dunnaway have a joint exhibition of oils and watercolors.

Sam Gore's oils are a union of two earlier approaches he has used separately, a cubist-abstract approach on the one hand, and a solid realism on the other.

In these paintings he has applied the cubist-abstract approach to landscapes with very interesting and appealing results.

Alan Dunnaway is a gifted watercolorist whose paintings are always of interest.

First Effort In Oil

Young Pascagoula Artist Wins Collegiate Contest

By EDWARD LEPOMA
Press Register Bureau

PASCAGOULA, Miss. — When a girl seeks a life with a purpose, especially at age 12, the results can only be success.

At least this formula seems to work for Diane Krebs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Krebs, 586 N. Willow St.

Diane is an artist and a good one. On April 5 she was informed that one of her non-objective paintings had capped first place in the Mississippi Art Association's Annual Collegiate Exhibition.

The award was significant in two ways. This was the first showing of any of Diane's work and the painting was the product of her first efforts in oil.

"When I entered the exhibition, I didn't think I would win," Diane said. "I didn't even think that 'maybe' I would win."

But judges of the event which included 180 entries from six Mississippi senior colleges and three junior colleges thought otherwise and presented the University of Southern Mississippi junior the $250 cash first painting on a theme of blue.

The painting is now on exhibit at the Municipal Art Gallery in Jackson.

Diane's career in art began at age 12 when she was art editor for a weekly neighborhood newspaper published by herself and some of her childhood friends.

The paper was called The Weekly Express and since funds for printing were very limited, some means of illustrating the news had to be found for the ditloed paper.

Diane improvised and instead of capturing the action with a camera, she used a pen and sketch pad. This was her first expression in the vast world of art.

At Our Lady of Victories High School, where she was graduated in 1961, Diane was assistant editor of the annual for two years, when she did illustrations, photography, and layouts.

At Southern Diane is majoring in art and drawing and if there were ever any doubt about her pursuit of a childhood dream — to be an artist — her recent honor and recognition prove that purpose does spell success.

She is looking forward to the future now and a possible career in commercial art and all indications say "go."

Memories of Old Pascagoula

By UNCLE MARTIN

The Star of September 21, 1877, mentions several items of interest that may be recalled by old time citizens. They follow:

"Mr. J. S. Thomas, of West Pascagoula, while on his way to Scranton last Saturday, killed a rattlesnake measuring over six feet in length, and having 14 rattles and a button on its tail. Mr. Thomas informs us that after cutting off his snakeship's head he took a full grown rabbit from its stomach."

"Mr. E. T. Toomer has sold his place at Bayou Cassotte for $8,500 to Mrs. James Donovan."

"I. N. Osborn has been removed from this port as inspector of customs, and Mr. B. M. Campbell, son of W. L. Campbell, of Summit, appointed in his place."

"Capt. Pat Mullett, of the dredge boat No. 2 working on the canal between here and the West Side, lost $800 by the late suspension of the Chicago savings institution. A heavy loss for a workingman."

In the Star of September 28, 1877, there appears two marriages: Walker-Krebs, on Tuesday, September 25, 1877, at the Church of Our Lady of Victories, by Rev. J. S. Wise Mr. Ferdinand B. Walker, of Bay St. Louis, to Miss Anais F. Krebs, daughter of H. and Mary Louise Krebs of this place.

And lo! another Pascagoula's fairest and loveliest representatives of the gentlier sex espoused that blessed and sacred cause. To Miss Anais and her happy consort elect do we proffer our earnest and sincere congratulations, wishing them a long and exalted life of happiness, and that their mutual and social desires will so converge and harmonize that their every effort in life will be crowned with success and mutual prosperity."

Cambra-Catchot—In Ocean Springs, Miss., September 22, 1877, by Judge H. H. Minor, Mr. Frank H. Cambra, of New Orleans, to Miss Eliza Catchot, daughter of Capt. Antonio Catchot, of Ocean Springs. No cards.

The Star of October 5, 1877, mentions a wedding of note thus: "Woodhouse-Dodson—At Scranton, Miss., September 29, 1877, by Squire Randall, J. O. Woodhouse to Mrs. M. E. Dodson." The usual printer's fee of cake and wine was sent in with the above, which was enjoyed by the corps. We wish the wedded couple a long life of prosperity and happiness.

The Star of October 5, 1877, says: "Our young friend Mr. E. C. Chastant left our town a few days since for one of the upper parishes in La., where he is to engage in the manufacture of molasses on one of the largest plantations in that section of the state. We wish him success."

RACING SHIPS — Tiny Portas looks through ər collected files of the boats that were built at her ımily's business, the Krebs Shipyard in ɜscagoula.

Local woman traces 100-year history of family-built boats

MARTIN BLUFF — Some people research their families' roots. Tiny Portas' performs a special kind of genealogy. She traces boats that members of her family made at Krebs' Shipyard.

The shipyard, which operated on the east bank of the Singing River from 1885 to 1985, made more than 1,000 fishing boats and yachts, all out of wood and all with two sails.

Portas, the daughter of the late Roy M. Krebs, searches libraries, archives, government agencies and ports, looks at old hand-written notes, talks to old ship captains, writes letters and surfs the Internet for information about the boats.

Portas copies and collects and places information in manilla folders at her home.

"You open one folder and you never stop," she said. "It is the most fascinating thing you ever saw in your life. I will never finish because every boat has a story."

Portas starts her work by looking in annual federal registries of ships. All boats that have insurɔe are listed in the registries name. Sometimes new own- change the name, she said. "I have one boat that has r names," Portas said.

Also, the registries list each ıt's homeport, size, former ne, if any, type of power and ıistration number, which nev- changes.

"That is that boat's finger nt," she said.

But the registry books in rtas' collection do not list the gerprints in numerical order. With a boat's homeport, Por- ɜ can search for information regional archives in Fort ɔrth, Texas, and Atlanta.

In an archives, Portas ırched for days for the master rpenter's certificate of com- ɛtion for the Sidoine, a yacht ılt in 1951 for a retired archi- ɛt.

"They bring out these books. ɔu look and you flip and you flip. One day I just went 'wusssh.' When I did this came out and it lands on my lap.

"If you hit something, you expect to hit the floor, not land on your lap. It's divine intervention."

Portas made a copy of the document and put it in her files.

The chicken scratches on the document include the word, "Vera."

"Vera is its new name," Portas said. "God bless whoever gave me that name. The chances of me finding that were one in 20 million."

The first owner did not insure or document the Sidoine or the Vera, Portas said.

But, the second owner did. With the name, Portas could collect information about the boat. The second owner sailed the boat to Port Arthur, Texas. Registry books show it there in 1962.

The third owner ported the boat in Groves, Texas, in 1965, Portas said. She spent days looking for information about the Vera or the Sidoine after 1965, but has been unable to find any.

Also, Portas traced up to 1994 the history of the Danny Boy, which worked in Mobile-based Star Shrimp & Oyster Co.'s fleet from 1926 to 1967.

In the 1970s, federal agents seized it for running drugs from Mexico to California, Portas said. Then, a young man bought the boat in California to restore it, sailed it to Hawaii, ran out of money and sold the boat there.

The latest records show the boat in St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

One way Portas can trace boats through the registry books is to look under Star Shrimp & Oyster Co.. Krebs made 40 schooners that sailed for Star, she said.

Also, government records tell of the demise of a ship through sinking, scraping, bombing or burning.

But, not all boats have documents telling their history, Portas said.

"I have a whole file of the little boats that I have not done because they are not documented," she said. "Once in a while I can find a record through newspapers or something."

Theme

The Mardi Gras season which is the prelude to the season of lent is properly filled with many days and nights of merry-making. This is an excellent state of affairs, for by this extreme contrast with the fasting and penance of lenten days it makes sacrifices far more meaningful when the actual days of lent arrive.

There is also meaning in the Knights of Columbus choice of King Arthur and Queen Guinevere and the Knights and Ladies of Camelot as figureheads for this annual celebration. The people of this great court were of the highest moral character. Christ held undisputed sway over all of them and their battles for truth and justice have often been told in story and song.

Thus with all these goodly thoughts in our minds, let us again join in the crowning of King Arthur and Queen Guinevere, and may all of this remind us that our country and the rest of the free world will surely fall and be trampled by the hard heels of communist boots if we do not keep faith with such men and women as were Arthur and Guinevere.

Carnival Peak Rises As Mardi Gras Nears

Gala Rulers Invited To Final Dance

A total of 14 monarchs are expected to be present at the Mardi Gras ball to be staged by the Mystic Krewe of El Mar Tuesday, announced Krewe Captain Wally Sherwood of Pascagoula late Thursday.

Presiding over the gala will be the King and Queen of Mardi Gras, the mysterious El Rey II and La Reina II. They will be official hosts for the Royal Champagne Toast.

Participating in the toast will be the King of Carnival, Douglas Cumbest of Pascagoula; the Queen of Carnival, Mrs. H. W. Gordon of Pascagoula; the king's consort, Miss Mary Sue Baylis of Pascagoula; and the queen's consort, Benny Buckley of Pascagoula.

Captain Sherwood stated that special invitations have been issued to the following monarchs;

L. S. Rouse of Pascagoula, King Antlers VII of the Elks ball.

Mrs. Julius Martin of Pascagoula, Queen Doe VII of the Elks ball.

Philip Scordino of Pascagoula, King Arthur VIII of the Knights of Columbus ball.

Miss Diane Krebs of Pascagoula, Queen Guinevere VIII of the Knights of Columbus ball.

Cecil Byrd of Moss Point, Zeus I of the Veterans of Foreign Wars ball.

Mrs. Ruth Allen of Pascagoula, Hera I of the Veterans of Foreign Wars ball.

J. A. Willis of Pascagoula, King of Hearts II of the Hairdressers ball.

Mrs. Margaret Hammett of Pascagoula, Queen of Hearts II of the Hairdressers ball.

The ball, the first to be held in Pas-Point on Mardi Gras itself in more than 20 years, will begin at 8 p.m. with the coronation of the King and Queen of Carnival. "A Chinese Fairy Tale" will be the theme of the costume tableau at the Pascagoula Elks Home.

The Royal Champagne Toast will occur approximately at 8:30 p.m. Following the ball, a midnight reception will be held at the Pascagoula BPW Club House.

YMBC Ball And Hi-Jinx In Spotlight

Pas-Point's 30th annual Carnival season roars towards its Mardi Gras blast Tuesday — with the two oldest balls taking the party spotlight this weekend.

Moss Point's oldest ball, the Young Men's Business Club fete, will begin at 9 p.m. Friday at Pascagoula's 11th St. Auditorium.

Following a tradition held since the first ball in 1935, the theme is kept secret. Tickets for the semi-formal affair will be available at the door.

After the YMBC ball, a reception at 1 a.m. Saturday, will be held at the Knights of Columbus hall in Pascagoula. Admission is by invitation only.

Saturday will also see the latest version of the "granddaddy" of all Pascagoula balls, staged by Hi-Jinx, a Pascagoula High School social organization.

The ball was first held in 1937. The 1965 event, following a theme of "All The Things You Are," will be held at Pascagoula's 11th St. Auditorium with tickets sold at the door. It will be semi-formal.

Following the ball, a midnight breakfast will be held at Cotita's Restaurant in Pascagoula. Admission is by invitation only.

The tempo of festivities will continue to grow Monday, Mardi Gras eve, when the younger set gets into the party mood at the Pascagoula Junior High School.

Visiting in the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Krebs last week for the coronation of their daughter, Diane, at the KC ball was Tam Hoge, Gene Yondell, Sherrie Richards, Judy Larkin, Harold Hitt, students who attend the University of Southern Mississippi where Diane is a senior. Mr. Frank Calaway of Vicksburg and Mr. Greg Cusimano from the University of Alabama were also guests. Miss Barbara Walker also from the University of Alabama was present for the event, staying with her parents.

Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hofheins drove in from Mobile especially for the night of the ball. Also, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Moore of New Orleans visited with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Moore, Sr. while here for the celebration.

KC Royalty Announced During Ball

Philip Scordino of Pascagoula Saturday night was proclaimed as King Arthur VIII at the annual Carnival Ball of the Knights of Columbus.

His gracious co-ruler was Miss Dian Krebs of Pascagoula as Queen Guinevere VIII in a sparkling undersea setting.

It was the first pre - Lenten ball staged by the KCs in their new Columbus Club addition to the Pascagoula lodge. Re-created by the members of the court were the traditional knights and ladies of King Arthur's Round Table.

Although the KC rulers are dated from 1958, the ball is actually among Pas-Point's oldest. Recorded in old newspaper files is the initial KC frolic held in 1941, but apparently discontinued due to World War II.

Placing the crowns upon the heads of King Arthur VIII and Queen Guinevere VIII Saturday were the 1964 rulers, Raymond Josephs and Miss Linda Jane, both of Pascagoula.

Following the glittering ball, King Arthur VIII entertained his queen, court and invited guests at his traditional breakfast. The event, held at 1 a.m. Sunday, was staged at Pascagoula Elks Home.

USM students heads Pacagoula KC ball

Diane Krebs, Pascagoula junior, was crowned Queen Guinevere during ceremonies at the eighth annual Knights of Columbus Carnival Ball in Pascagoula recently. She will reign for a year.

Miss Krebs is an art major at Southern and active in the art fraternity and the USM Newman Club.

Arriving for the coronation of Queen Guinevere, Diane Krebs, at the K. C. Ball Saturday evening were Eleanor Trehern, Tom Hoge, Gene Yondell, Sherri Richards, Judy Larkin and Harold Hitt from the University of Southern Mississippi; Barbara Walker and Greg Cusimano from the University of Alabama; Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Moore of New Orleans, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hofheins of Mobile, Ala., and Mr. Frank Calaway of Vicksburg.

KC Ball Theme Is On 'Inner Space'

In this age of outer space, the Knights of Columbus Saturday night explored the world of "inner space" as its annual Carnival ball.

In the most elaborate ball of its eight-year history, the KCs presented a stunning setting under the sea. It was their first ball in the new Columbus Club addition of the hall.

Phillip Scordino of Pascagoula was unmasked as King Arthur VIII. Miss Diane Krebs of Pascagoula was presented as Queen Guinevere VIII.

Following a long-standing tradition of the KC gala, King Arthur's Round Table was re-created in the glittering tableau.

Squires introduced, and later tapped as knights by their king, were Lancelot, Gareth, Gawain, Galahad, Bedivere, Pelleas, Percivale, Tristram, Mansel and Markham.

The knights were Gary Byrd, Kenneth Robertson, Edward Hudson, Willie Scheeler Jr., Loren Bosarge, Tommy Moffett, Lonnie Barton, Jack Beatty, Jimmie Freeman and Ivan Murray. The women of the court presented the following ladies: Elaine, Lynette, Marion, Ann, Enid, Ettare, Windemire, Elizabeth, Constance, and Margaret.

They were represented in the court by Mesdames L. C. Guillotte, W. W. Miner, Hal Vaughn, Freddie O'Brian Jr., William Pavlak, Marion Bond, C. L. Davis Jr., Matt Zelenka, Donald Olsen and Robert Goff.

Merrymakers attending the ball looked up at a sea-green ceiling, festive with mermaids, schools of fish and seahorses. An unusual decorating technique were bottoms of boats with their propellers extending downward.

The walls featured under-the-sea scenes with fish, seaweed, submarines, coral, Scuba divers and sunken ships. A large mermaid and seahorse flanked the throne, behind which was a large KC emblem.

Officiating at the coronation were last year's rulers, Raymond Josephs and Miss Linda Jane', both of Pascagoula. Arlis Gray of Pascagoula was master of ceremonies.

Music was provided by the Nik-Naks of Mobile. Following the ball at 1 a.m. Sunday, King Arthur VIII entertained with his royal breakfast at the Pascagoula Elks Home.

Rulers KC Ball Mr. Scordino, Miss Krebs

King Arthur VIII and his queen, Guinevere VIII, reigned over their court of knights and ladies Saturday night in a dazzling underwater setting in the new Columbus Club Hall, at Pascagoula.

Phillip Scordino, King of this eight annual ball, staged by Pascagoula Knights of Columbus, had as his queen, Miss Diane Krebs.

The hall was transformed into the world of inner space at the bottom of the sea. The walls were a background of green sea and the beige sand with banks of coral of all shapes and shades. Fishermen were evident as the bottoms of their boats could be seen overhead. Schools of vividly colored fish swam close by. Lovely mermaids and proud seahorses languished overhead. Completing the scene were a sunken gallion and a modern submarine.

Exploring all these wonders was a curious skindiver.

Members of the Knights of Columbus were responsible for the unique decorations. They donated their artistic talents to make this one of the most beautiful balls ever staged in this area.

Knights presented in King Arthur's Court were: Gary Byrd, Willie Scheeler, Jr., Ivan Murray, Edward Hudson, Jack Beatty, Lonnie Barton, Kenneth Robertson, Tommy Moffatt, Jimmy Freeman and Loran Bosarge.

Ladies of the Court were: Mesdames Matt Zelenka, William Pavlak, Robert Goff, L. C. Guillotte, C. L. Davis Jr., Hal Vaughn, Donald Olsen, Freddie O'Brien Jr., W. W. Miner and Marion Bond.

Placing the crowns on the new rulers were Raymond Josephs, Arthur VII and Miss Linda Jane, Quinevere VII.

Chairmen for the event were: decorations, Phillip Scordino, with art under the direction of Robert Blythe and Rudy Woodward; floor and seating, Lamar Cox; door and tickets, Jean Richards; transportation, Charles Olsen; publicity, Jack Strahan and coordinating the work of these committees, general chairmen E. J. Murray and Arlis Gray.

KC 'Camelot' Fantasia Headlines Carnival Fun

Days and nights of merry-making continue during Pascagoula's Mardi Gras—the prelude to Lent—with the annual Knights of Columbus carnival ball a pre-windup attraction.

Mythical, but tradition-revered King Arthur and Queen Guinevere, are to rein at the ninth renewal of Council 1605's staging Saturday.

The regal pair will head the Knights and Ladies of Camelot when the court is presented at 8 a.m. Dancing to the music of the Cavaliers begins at 9 and will last until 2 a.m.

The Royal Breakfast is scheduled for 1 a.m. Sunday at the Elks Club.

Tickets for the event are on sale at the KC Hall for $5 per couple. At the door, the cost will be $6.

Knights are R. L. Woodard, Lamar Cox, Larry Toups, Joe Colingo, Walter Johnson, Julian W. McLeod, B. H. Beach, Bruce B. Bradley, Melvin R. Stringer and Monte Moncrief. Ladies are Mesdames John Galley, Larry Savell, Melvin Warner, Rex Moore, Warner Peterson, Norman Lehnen, Jimmie Murray, Mike Commiskey, Edward F. Thorn and Tommy Fields.

Phil Scardine, King Arthur the VIII, and Diane Krebs, Queen Guinevere the VIII, will be making their last visit to the fabulous land of Arabia before returning to Camelot, and amidst the many wonders of the Arabian Nights will pause for the coronation of the new rulers. The retiring king and queen will place their crowns on the heads of the royal couple chosen to reign over people of Camelot for the next year.

THE DEDICATION OF OLD SPANISH FORT was featured by a pageant, tracing its long history. Some of the characters in the pageant are photographed on this page as they rehearse their parts. Baron Hugh Von Krebs (played by J. E. Krebs, a direct descendant), who made the old building his home for many years, reaches for a gun, while his wife, the former Marie Jeane de la Pointe (played by Mrs. John Howkins), stands by to give him the powder horn.

Calendar Turned Back 230 Years

Pageant At Pascagoula Depicts "Our Native Land" Early Days

Jackson Countians Challenge Other Sections To Produce Building Older Than Fort

By C. E. MATHEWS
Press Register Staff Writer

PASCAGOULA, Miss.—With pomp and colorful ceremony, an historic shrine was dedicated here Saturday.

In colorful costumes dating back through 230 years of American history, Jackson Countians dedicated Old Spanish Fort, located on Krebs Lake, in the northern part of this city as "the oldest building in the Mississippi Valley."

Such a distinction in antiquity would make the sturdy old building, erected in 1721 by one of Bienville's officers, older than any structure in historic Mobile or New Orleans.

Other Sections Challenged

In fact, Mrs. Hermes Gautier, chairman of the dedication program, says folks here "challenge all other sections of the nation to show us an older building."

It was around the low-roofed building that Saturday's all-day program of ceremony and pageantry revolved. On hand for the occasion were officials of the national, state and local governments. An intriguing factor of the pageant was that some of the costumed characters on the stage are direct descendants of Sieur Joseph de la Pointe, an admiral in Bienville's fleet, who erected the building, and of Baron Hugh Von Krebs, whose family occupied the home for more than 200 years.

Was Built By French

It is pointed out by officials of the Jackson County Historical Society, who have the building under lease for the next 50 years and an option to lease it longer, that the name Old Spanish Fort is a misnomer. The fort was built by the French—not the Spanish.

Following his arrival in Biloxi in 1710, de la Pointe established a naval base on Dauphin Island, and in 1721, came here and built the old fort. Later the facility was taken over by the Spanish government. It was during the Spanish possession of the fort that de Grinarest, a lieutenant, married a granddaughter of de la Pointe, and it is presumed that this is where the place received the Spanish name.

Lived Like Feudal Lord

The old building later was acquired by Baron Krebs, upon his arrival from Germany. The baron married a daughter of de la Pointe and came into possession of extensive lands surrounding the fort. For many years he was a large planter, raising cotton, indigo, rice and other products with slave labor.

The historic narratives say Krebs lived the life of a feudal lord on the banks of Lake Chatahoula, which later became known and is known today as Krebs Lake. He is said to have invented a roller cotton gin 20 years before the Eli Whitney gin was patented in 1793.

Recently rehabilitated by a group of Pascagoulans who contributed their time and skill, the old building is a comfortable, hospitable home. Its walls, nearly a foot thick are constructed of oyster shells, moss and sand. Some investigators of its construction believe that juice from raw oysters was used to make the sand and shells stick together.

The building, facing on Krebs Lake, has three rooms, one large one in the center and two smaller ones on the ends. All rooms have attractive, efficient old fireplaces whose hearths are elevated.

Fitted Out With Antiques

Through efforts of the historical society, the place is now being filled with antiques, including ancient muskets, a tattered slave whip, powder horns, hunting horns, a crude wooden rice husker, spinning wheel, an ox yoke, cowbells, a hand-made wooden rake, a fro for making shingles, a battling stick for removing water from clothes, cotton baskets and many other items.

The day's ceremony included the ever-intriguing legend of the Singing River, whose waters wash the edge of Pascagoula. Impressively costumed Miss Joyce Josephine Krebs, descendant of the baron, played the role of Anola, the Indian princess, who joined her prince, Altama, in re-enactment of the dramatic scene in which the pair led the tribe of Pascagoula singing to watery deaths in the river. The suicide of the peaceful band came as the warlike Biloxis charged into their village.

In the role of the baron was J. E. Krebs, one of the hundreds of Krebs descendants living in this area. He wore a costume with short pants, white stockings and buckled shoes.

Then, there were representatives of French Canadians, who came to trade with the friendly Indians, among the approximately 70 taking part in the pageant.

Mrs. Claiborne Koch of Pascagoula, one of the members of the pageant, wore a lovely old evening gown that was made in Rome and was worn by a forebear of Mrs. Quin Gautier when she was presented at the Court of St. James.

The pageant was directed by Mrs. E. H. Bacot and the script, "Our Native Land," was written by Mrs. Wilson Duval, daughter of the late Walter Lewis of Pascagoula.

The day's program began at 10 a.m. with a band concert by the Pascagoula High School and included: Flag raising by Troop No. 222, Boy Scouts of Pascagoula High School; invocation by Msgr. P. J. Carey; welcome by Sheriff J. Guy Krebs; presentation of the governing board; introduction of speakers by Tom Wells; address by Dr. W. D. McCain, director of the Mississippi State Department of Archives and History; dedication, Rev. Arthur Schneider; benediction, Rev. J. F. Brock.

Following luncheon, there was a fiddlers' contest; presentation of descendants of Baron Krebs; presentation of the oldest citizens; a swim suit style show; band concert; address by Lt. Gov. Sam Lumpkin; remarks of appreciation, Mayor W. G. Dees; square dance exhibition; address, Rep. William Colmer; pageant, and square dancing.

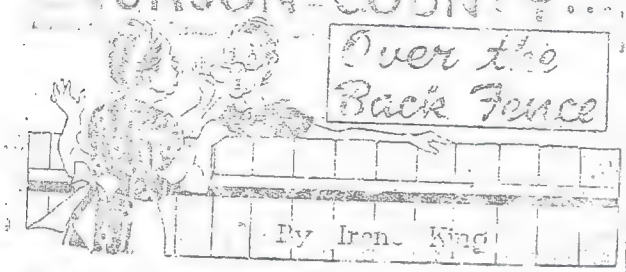
CKSON COUNTY...



When the Chuffen Hayneses came to live in Moss Point they arrived complete with two story house.

Actually that's a little exaggeration—the house didn't follow for eight months. And then it made moving history in Jackson County, at least, for it arrived by barge, floating down river from Kreole in two sections.

To look at the attractive big house its wide screened porch running around three sides (the best tricycle porch in town, says Mrs. Haynes) you wouldn't guess that it had been jig saw-puzzled back together after being split in two pieces to make moving possible.

It all happened because the Moss Point mill of International Paper Company decided to sell the building that had housed the manager for many, many years.

Mr. Haynes is manager and was living in the house with his family where they had moved in 1950. He and Mrs. Haynes discussed their future housing exhaustively. They leaned into building a new house. And then they looked at the big comfortable home they occupied. They figured the cost of various ventures.

"The more we looked into things the smaller the modern house got for the money we wanted to spend," Mrs. Haynes said. "In the few years we had lived in this house, we had gotten spoiled by the spaciousness and finally we couldn't resist the idea of buying it and moving it to our own lot."

Things didn't seem too complicated at first. J. E. Krebs, a contractor experienced in moving buildings, began to make plans for transporting the house. Cut into two pieces it would fit nicely on his trailer. But when he slid his jacks under the sawed-off front half of the house the jack handles just bent and the house didn't budge. He had failed to calculate the greater weight of heart pine that forms the floors—and perhaps of other old sound material, too.

Anyway, into his mind popped the idea of moving the house down river. A barge was secured, steel rollers were used to slide the house across the ground to the water and the big moving venture was on.

Folks along the river probably got a real start when they saw a two-story house sawed in two parts being towed smoothly over the water, but the trip was uneventful and the house arrived in excellent condition. The Haynes' lot in Moss Point is not on the river, so that presented another problem.

"It could never have happened anywhere but in a small town," explained Billie Floe Haynes. "The contractor landed at the back of two pieces of adjoining property by dredging a channel up to the land and the owners let him clear enough space to roll the house through."

As fresh and pretty as any brand new model, the house suffered no damage during its voyage. The plaster had all been removed to lighten the load and when the house was relocated this was replaced and all the walls and wood work were repainted.

The gleaming waxed floors show only a slight testimony to their trip. In the upper hall, a couple of nails show where the flooring was rejoined after being cut.

There were few changes the Hayneses wanted to make. They shuffled the rooms around a little at the rear and ended with another bedroom and bath downstairs and a part of the porch glassed to provide a breakfast room. There are some new closets upstairs, too, but mostly things are just as they were.

Few old houses have more storage accommodation, less waste space. Most of the clever hide-aways were already there when they moved in, according to Billie Floe. They areundoubtedly the mass results of the ingenuity and necessity of a series of managers' wives during the years.

The Hayneses feel complete at home now, for their proper is complete with the big garag with second floor storage spa and a little house consisting bedroom, bath and kitchenet which were moved to the sit from the old "homestead" sligh ly in advance of the big hous

There is also a children's pla house which joined the calva cade but they plan to turn th little house over to the childre in the near future.

"When we remove all the boxe and things that have been stored in it," Mrs. Haynes said.

The worse aspect of the entire move for the Hayneses? No getting to see the house come down the river. After waiting three months they had gone out of town on their vacation.

"There's one thing about a big house," Mrs. Haynes opined; "You can't clean up the whole thing

Pas fisherman lands prize tuna

(Special to the Chronicle)

NASSAU, Bahamas — J. E. Krebs of 558 N. Willow Street Pascagoula, moved into first place for Allison (yellowfin) tuna in the medium tackle division of the Bahamas summer fishing tournament with a 25-pound entry.

Krebs boated the yellowfin while trolling from a fishing cruiser off Rose Island, a few miles northeast of here.

The yellowfin is prized as a food fish and is usually caught while working the oceanic bonito and blackfin tuna schools along the "drop off" or out in deep water.

The angler will receive a bronze pocket piece and a hand lettered citation in recognition of his catch. If his fish is still leading at the end of the tournament, September 3, he will receive a prize awarded by the tournament committee.

The summer tournament, in its ten[illegible], is open to all anglers fishing Bahamas waters with rod and reel. There is no entry fee.

YMBC Hosts 33rd Annual Coronation Ball

Inclement weather notwithstanding, Jackson County residents by the hundreds attended the 33rd annual coronation ball, sponsored by the Young Men's Business Club of Moss Point.

The Elks Home was colorfully and appropriately decorated with hearts in every size, carrying out this year's theme, "Land of Valentine."

Figures of Dan Cupid with his bow and arrow were suspended from the ceiling, adding to the colorful decorations, directed by Jack Beatty and carried out by members of the YMBC.

Miss Martha Rhodes Turner of Moss Point and J. E Krebs of Pascagoula were chosen as King and Queen of Joy for 1969.

Mr. Krebs is a lifelong resident of Pascagoula and is descended from one of the city's oldest families. He was graduated from Our Lady of Victories High School and is a member of Our Lady of Victories Catholic Church.

He has been a general contractor in Pascagoula all his life except for several years during World War II when he worked at Ingalls Shipbuilding Corp. and served in the U.S. Navy.

Mr. Krebs is a member of the Elks and Knights of Columbus Carnival Ball.

He and his wife, the former Rita Gentile, are the parents of a daughter, Mrs. Gene (Diane) Yandell of Louisville, Ky.

Miss Turner is the daughter of the Jack F. Turners of Moss Point. Her grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin G. Lennep of Moss Point and the late Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Turner Sr. of St. Stephens, Ala. She is a member of Dantzler Memorial Methodist Church, Moss Point.

She was valedictorian of her graduating class at Moss Point High School in 1965, and was graduated from Sullins College in Bristol, Va., in 1967, also as valedictorian.

Miss Turner represented her city as Miss Moss Point in the 1966 Miss Mississippi Pageant.

Presently a senior at Ole Miss, Miss Turner is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma social sorority, serving as pledge trainer. She has been selected for Mortar Board, Sigma Delta Pi, and Phi Kappa Phi. She will receive a B.A. degree from the university in June.

Miss Turner's gown was of silk satin embroidered with brilliant jewels and highlighted at the waist by a sunburst of rhinestones centered with a large ruby. The portrait neckline was banded in gold paillettes and rhinestones and the sheath skirt had a panel effect in front.

The Napoleonic bee design, formed of rhinestones and handcut beads accented the sides of the skirt. The queen's mantle was of crimson velvet, an authentic replica of that worn by Empress Josephine, bordered with ermine and satin. The bee design was repeated on the mantle, interspersed with dazzling scrolls and teardrops extending the length of the train.

The collar was of gold lace traced in rich jewels of gold, silver and crimson red. Hand cut teardrops dangled gracefully from the points of the collar.

E. A. Khayat, master of ceremonies, presented, prior to the court for 1969, James F. Harvey and Miss Vicki Ramsey, King and Queen of Joy for 1968.

Archduke was Dr. G. R. Hilbun, escorting the archduchess Mrs. Ellis Gardner. Mrs. Gardner's gown was elegant in its simplicity, fashioned of rich burgundy velvet. ink satin highlighted the waistline and neck and the archduchess wore a ruby and diamond bracelet and diamond and gold earrings. Her shoes were gold and long white kid gloves completed her attire.

Dukes were E. S. (Ned) Nelson, Paul Palmer, Robert Nichols, Joe McDaniel (substituting for T. M. von Sprecken Jr.), Dr. C. D. Whigham Jr., Andrew J. Keenan, Douglass Fontaine, Terry Adams, J. M. Epting Jr., Gayden Harper Jr., and Hubby E. Nelson.

Duchesses were Mesdames A. L. Welsh, Gary Smith, Lum Cumbest, Thomas Hegwood Jr., A. L. Daffin Jr., David Smith, Jack Breland, C. R. Slaughter Jr., and Miss Sharon Stagg, Miss Martha McIlwain and Miss Kathy Bodden.

Mrs. Welsh wore a semi-fitted gown with two deep inverted pleats in front. The material was a large paisley print, interwoven with metallic thread, with a yellow background. Accent colors were orange and green and her shoes were yellow.

A chiffon gown of royal blue over jade w · worn by Mrs. Gary Smith. Back panels of chiffon flowed gracefully from the shoulder and the empire effect was accented by a large matching stone pin at the V-neck.

Mrs. Cumbest chose a modified A-line formal of moss green double crepe. A wide band of heavy pearl and gold sequins embroidery outlined the scoop neckline and extended down the center front to the hemline. Her shoes were matching green.

Mrs. Hegwood wore a fuschia gown featuring a brocaded bodice and skirt of textured peau de soie topped with chiffon. The fitted waist was accented with a wide band of rhinestones. An original by Louise Hudgins.

Mrs. Daffin was attired in a formal length gown of imported silk in a soft pink. Fashioned on empire lines, the gown featured a sleeveless re-embroidered Alencon lace bodice, highlighted by iridescent sequins, a cowl dollar and a crushed bow accenting the center front.

Mrs. David Smith's gown was a simple sleeveless A-line of light blue peau de soie, with a chiffon overdress of the same color. The gown was adorned with blue braid studded with pearls.

Mrs. Jack Breland was gowned in an Emily Domb original. The dress of emerald green silk crepe featured a skirt falling in graceful folds. the colorful bodice was of royal blue, emerald green and pale blue sequims. To complete her attire Mrs. Breland chose matching silk shoes and gloves of emerald green.

Mrs. Slaughter chose an aqua blue cotton faille with a sweetheart neckline outlined with clusters of pearls, bugle beads and rhinetsones. The bodice was accented with buttons, ended with a peau de soie bow. The skirt fell from the waist in a soft pleated semi-bell shape.

Sparkling designs of crescent moon and stars were embroidered on the ice blue gown of silk and worsted worn by Miss Stagg. The fitted bodice rose high in front, dipping to the natural waistline in back. The embroidered motifs were of pearls, silver blue Austrian rhinestones, iceberg Belgium crystals and sapphires. The same pattern formed a border on the short sleeves. Four deep unpressed pleats flowed from the bodice to form a perfect A-line skirt. To complete her attire she wore silver blue shoes and gloves.

Miss McIlwain wore a dress of ice blue peau de soie, lavishly beaded on the bodice, waist band and skirt with matching beads.

Miss Bodden's exquisitely designed gown of flash red chiffon draped gracefully from the empire waistline. The bodice was swirled with beads enhancing the portrait detail of the shoulders. Silver shoes completed her attire.

YMBC Carnival of beauty

The colorful carnival setting for the 33rd annual coronation ball, sponsored by the Young Men's Business Club, was perfectly complemented by the beauty of the gowns worn by the ladies of the court.

The queen, Miss Elizabeth Nell Talbott, is the daughter of Mrs. Roy G. Wingfield Jr. of Pascagoula and the late Eugene A. Talbott Sr.

Her mantle of maroon velvet featured a delicate collar of silver lace, trimmed with rhinestones and drops of aurora borealis crystals. The mantle was bordered with a wide band of ermine and embroidered with a design in silver, gold and pastel sequins.

Her crown of imported rhinestones was copied from one of Queen Elizabeth II's tiaras and her scepter was of matching design.

The queen's floor length gown was of silver and white brocade with an empire bodice and slightly gathered skirt. The deep V-neckline was bordered with a narrow band of white mink, crossing at the waistline to form a band. Beading of crystals and rhinestones outlined the fur on the bodice.

The skirt ended in a deep hem bordered with a double row of the same crystal beading above a wide border of white mink.

Miss Talbott wore pearl and diamond earrings and an opera length pearl necklace with a diamond clasp.

The 1969 Queen of Joy, Miss Martha Turner, wore an empire gown of moss green velvet and cream Quaker lace. The top was of the lace, sprinkled with sequins and featuring Edwardian effect shoulders with two ruffles topping the long fitted sleeves.

The slim skirt of gleaming velvet was accented at the waist by a satin band richly embroidered in a flower motif of green bugle beads and sequins. The back was enhanced with a bow and floor length streamers.

Miss Turner wore an emerald and rhinestone clip in her hair. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Turner of Escatawpa and was escorted by J. E. Krebs, last year's monarch.

MRS. FORBES HAYES of Moss Point was arch duchess. She wore a Dior gown of azalea silk chiffon, topped with a matching peau de soie jacket. A silver jeweled band outlined the high mandarin neckline and the full sweeping skirt was dramatized with a similar band at the waistline. Mrs. Hayes was escorted by Arch Duke Joe Colingo.

Duchess Mrs. Clinton Lockard, escorted by Duke Prentiss Rockwell of Moss Point, chose an emerald green crepe sheath, accented with a cowl neckline of matching chiffon. The chiffon was repeated in floating panels attached to the shoulder. Highlighting the front of the gown was a wide band of emerald beads and sequins below the cowl neckline.

Duchess Mrs. Warren W. Russum of Moss Point wore an A-line sheath of sky blue sparkle crepe. Iridescent beads and pearls were sprinkled generously around the slightly scooped neckline. Chiffon panels, duplicating the blue of the gown, were clasped at the right shoulder.

Mrs. Russum was escorted by Roy T. O'Bryant.

Duchess Mrs. Joiner M. Haltom Jr. was attired in a blue gown with a scooped neckline and empire waist. The entire gown was enhanced with jewel tones of rhinestones, beads and sequins. The skirt was in A-line design.

Mrs. Haltom was escorted by Donald E. Scarborough.

Duchess Mrs. Jackie Stewart of Moss Point, escorted by Walllace Reeves, chose plum colored crepe trimmed in narrow silver mesh. The mesh motif accented the wrap- James DePoyster of Moss around drape, the hemline and deep V-neckline.

Duchess Mrs. Wilbur Dees wore a radiant blue gown of silk worsted with bell-shaped skirt. The short sleeves bodice with its rising collar was embellished with pearls, rhinestones and bugle beads. Mrs. Dees' escort was Dr. James DePoyster of Moss Point.

Duchess Mrs. Richard Shields III wore a peau de soie gown in a soft shade of pink. Sleeveless and toe-touching, the gown's empire waist, deep neckline and low cut back were trimmed in a wide braid highlighted with a aurora borealis. The four-paneled skirt flared slightly at the bottom.

Mrs. Shields was escorted by Francis O. Rains Jr. of Pascagoula.

Duchess Mrs. Carl Nulta's gown was of champagne beige peau de soie. The A-line skirt fell from an empire bodice accented with black braid and bugle beads. Mrs. Nulta was escorted by Philips Watts of Moss Point.

DUCHESS MRS. Jesse Myers, escorted by Dr. Harry Burrow of Pascagoula, wore a Fred Perlberg sleeveless creation featuring a plunging neckline and tri - color front of champagne, pumpkin and deep brown chiffon. The full skirt fell from a heavily beaded midriff of gold braid, pearls and matching stones of brown and orange.

Duchess Mrs. Jay Toulme chose a gown of sky blue chiffon with a scooped neckline, accented with silver beaded bodice, back and front. The design featured long, flowing chiffon sleeves and a full skirt.

Mrs. Toulme was escorted by Richard Perkins of Moss Point.

Duchess Mrs. Robert Mills wore an empire gown of blue and silver brocade with a V-neckline. A softly gathered skirt fell from the wasitline.

Mrs. Mills was escorted by William O. Wilson Jr. of Pascagoula.

Duchess Miss Ruby Kihyet chose a lilac chiffon gown with a floor length accordion pleated skirt and billowy wrist-length Juliette sleeves. The gown featured a vest in shades of green and lavender covered with pearlized sequins and lined with lilac chiffon.

Miss Kihyet carried a carnival mask in traditional Mardi Gras colors. She was escorted by Tommy Earl Smith of Moss Point.

Shellie Dossett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ronnie Dossett of Moss Point and Misty Lee Haarala, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Haarala of Pascagoula, served as trainbearers to the queen.

The trainbearers wore orchid dresses of Mirror Mist with triple-puffed sleeves. The empire waistlines were accented with white lace and purple satin ribbons.

Crownbearers were Donald Shepherd, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. O. Shepherd of Pascagoula and Lance Monk, son of Mr and Mrs. Terry Monk of Moss Point.

They wore knee britche and shirts of white satin, ac cented with lace and red s quins. Their pages' hats wer complemented by tall re plumes.

E. A. Khayat was master ceremonies and music w provided by the Roy Choi Orchestra from Mobile. M Robert Pope created the c corations, which were carri out by members of t YMBC.

Drummers were Je Broome Jr., son of Mr. a Mrs. Broome Sr. of Pas goula, and Richard Staut son of Mr. and Mrs. G Stauter of Moss Point.

Kenneth Massey, son Mrs. A. S. Massey of M Point, and Dennis Wilson, of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth W son of Pascagoula, served trumpeters.

Patsy Murray and Mr. Krebs rulers at annual KC ball

Spectators at the 3rd annual carnival ball of Knights of Columbus were transported back into medieval days of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table Saturday night when J. E. Krebs received the crown of King Arthur 3rd and Miss Patsy Murray wore the regal robes of Queen Guinevere 3rd.

The 11th Street Armory took on the aspect of a scene from the middle ages with an ancient castle in the background from which the court entered the hall.

The king and queen were enthroned in a royal balcony box in front of which squires and ladies bowed and were introduced by a brief history of each knight and his feats of valor. Each couple took their place before a shield background and at conclusion of the presentations the squires were knighted by King Arthur.

On the opposite wall were huge knights in armor and the orchestra was seated on the stage.

Miss Murray was lovely in white satin gown featuring lace appliques with rhinestones and bugle beads tracing the design of the lace. The bodice was fashioned with square neckline dipping to a vee at the back outlined with applique and short sleeves also appliqued with the lace. Down the front of the very full skirt were sprays of lace outlined with rhinestones and beads and the pattern of delicate lace sprays was continued round the hemline held to graceful sweep of fullness by a low hoop.

Her cloth of gold mantle fell from a high-standing collar and was banded with white fur and embellished with brilliant design studded with multi-colored stones. She wore a rhinestone crown and carried a sequin and rhinestone scepter and an arm bouquet of American beauty roses.

Her king wore full dress and a crown of rhinestones and satin.

Knights escorting the ladies were Clarence Brown, Hudson Delmas, Lamar Bassett, James Hinman, Melvin G. Larsen, Donald Olsen, W. J. Scheeler, Steve McMillen, R. O. Cole, Nat Wilson, Bill Millette, Harold Applewhite, Harold B. Scott and Lavohn Haigler.

The ladies of the court each wore an orchid corsage.

Mrs. B. H. Beach appeared in a costume of royal blue taffeta. The bodice featured soft gathers across the top in camisole effect with a flat bow. Below the fullness the bodice was fitted to the waist where the skirt flared in graceful fullness caught up at intervals in poufs with raised line emphasized with a bow and the entire skirt worn over hoops. She wore a rhinestone bandeau in her hair.

Light blue taffetta and white net were combined in a gown worn by Mrs. W. J. Frazier. The full blue taffeta skirt was draped to the waistline at one side giving a side opening for a panel of tiny white net ruffles and big white roses were used along the line of the taffeta at the front. A bow of the material finished the strapless bodice.

Mrs. John D. Gautier wore a gown of ecru satin over white tulle underskirt with the satin caught up in poufs centered with rhinestones and dipping into a slight train at the back. Her bodice of net over satin was finished with round neckline and cap sleeves and was heavily embroidered with bugle beads and rhinestones.

White chiffon was material for the formal gown worn by Mrs. Wayne Lee. The shirred bodice had rhinestone band at the top and tiny rhinestone straps over the shoulders. The bouffant skirt was spangled with appliques of lace circles each with three rhinestones. Glitter spray on her hair gave effect of a tiara.

Miss Carolyn Stone's gown was a combination of shirred brown chiffon top and full brown-over-beige tulle skirt. Giving back emphasis was a ruffled bustle with brown velveteen roses and the skirt swept to the floor with balloon hemline. A rhinestone clip was worn at the back of her hair.

White was chosen by Mrs. Mack Hudson, Jr., in net and lace fashioned with basque waist and very full skirt ruffled from waist to floor over hoops. Shirred shoulder straps of the net finished off the lace bodice.

Mrs. Donald Cumbest selected for the ball a champagne lace with fitted bodice with peter pan collar and long fitted sleeves. The pattern of the lace was outlined with traceries of gold and silver thread and the very full skirt broke into a froth of rows and rows of tulle ruffling with gold and silver spangles just above the hemline. Her shoes were of gold and she wore rhinestones on a silver bandeau on her head.

Red peau de soie formed a sheath formal gown for Mrs. C. P. Humphreys. The bodice was fitted and strapless and the slim skirt was draped to the side and caught with rhinestone pin. She wore rhinestone jewelry.

Miss Charlene Lander was gowned in peacock blue peau de soie with shirred bodice and full skirt featuring an apron effect across the front drawn into a big bow at the back. She chose rhinestones as jewelry.

Lace and chiffon in white combined in a gown for Mrs. George Castigliola. The full length very full skirt was of chiffon tiers of ruffles with lace draped across the lower bodice extending on to the skirt and ending with an immense bow of white taffeta at the side. She carried a white ostrich feather fan on rhinestone frame and wore rhinestone and crystal necklace and earrings.

Miss Regina Zalusky wore a gown of kelly green velveteen with full white nylon skirt over white satin highlighted with silver sequins Narrow green straps marked the shoulder line and she wore rhinestone earrings, necklace and bracelet.

White nylon embroidered in green over peau de soie fashioned a gown for Miss Sandra Montcrief. A feature of the design was double pleated panels of green fringed peau de soie falling into slight train on each side at the back from the top of the strapless bodice. The dress was fashioned along princess lines with very full skirt and cummerbund of the green material. She wore matching green shoes and rhinestone jewelry and ornaments in her hair.

It was orange for Miss Jane Grant in a nylon tulle having strapless bodice with flattering shirring and circular skirt over taffeta of row upon row of ruffling from the waist to the floor. Attention-catcher at the back was an enormous pouf of the net caught at the center with sequins and forming loops down the skirt.

Two shades of blue were combined in a velvet and satin creation worn by Mrs. Louis Franl. The dress of navy blue velvet was made with long-torso waist with tiny velvet straps and band at the top of the lighter blue satin.

The floor length full skirt was of velvet with inset bands of the lighter satin to give apron effect sweeping down to hemline in front and coming up into a big satin bow at the back waistline.

A blue rhinestone pin was worn at the front of the waist and matching earrings and bracelet completed her costume.

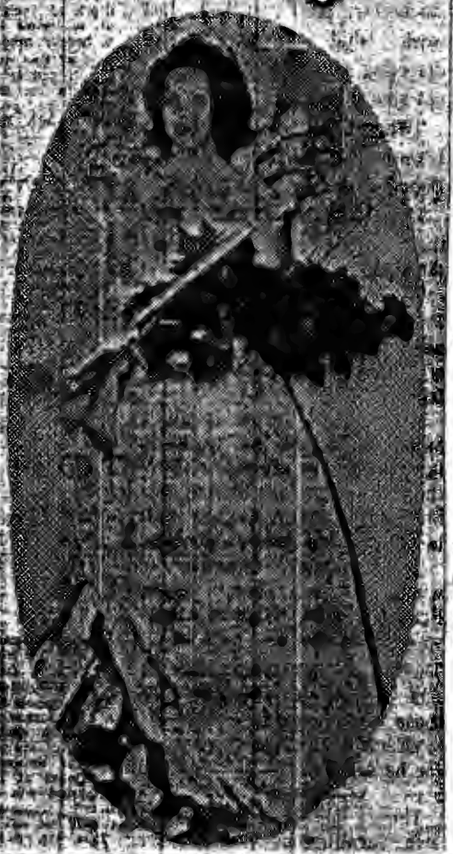
10 Years Of KC Royalty



ROYAL FAMILY—As the Pascagoula Knight of Columbus ball enters its 10th year, only one family can claim both a king and queen. — J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula reigned as King Arthur III in 1960. His daughter, Diane, now Mrs. Eugene Yandell, was the first Queen Guinevere VIII five years later.

Knights Of Columbus Frolic Achieves Carnival Milestone

There's a total of 15 balls during this Carnival season for the Pascagoula-Moss Point area. — And each and every one is special in its own way: to those who are honored to be in them and tho those who come and participate in the revelry.

But for 1967, there is one ball that is very special to the entire pre-Lenten festival. It marks a milestone in Pas-Point Carnival history. It is the maturing of the Pascagoula Knights of Columbus ball on its 10th birthday.

— And as mystical Camelot marks its first decade there are many golden memories for literally thousands of people. Thus an appropriate anniversary theme, "The Golden Era."

Saturday's ball will not only be a gala one, but a packed one as well. Last week the announcement became official. It's SRO.

No more reservations will be accepted, except on a conditional basis — just in case there are some cancellations. — And a public notice was made to the public at the ball to drop [illegible] day morning [illegible] and don't [illegible] are.

Although [illegible] and which [illegible] p.m., is billed as a formal anniversary event, the "ball" actually swings into [illegible].

Newspaper files of the old Pascagoula Chronicle bear witness to this fact. The following display proclaimed the ball as the first formal for the KC's and it was staged in the old Pascagoula Community House.

Due to the success of the dance, patriotism was the theme. The pillars, according to the newspaper files, were Roy Woodman as King Columbus I and Miss Aida Ros as Queen Isabella.

Apparently the war caused discontinuance of the ball. But when the KC's re-entered the pre-Lenten picture in 1958, the regal titles of King Arthur and Queen Guinevere were established.

The rest, of course, is now a history 10 years old.

Here's retracing "The Golden Era" of KC Carnival royalty:

1958 — W. C. Scranton and Miss Mattie Walker, both of Pascagoula.

1959 — the late Joe Cumbaa of Pascagoula and Mrs. J. H. Bell of Mount Hermon, Louisiana, nee Tante Walker of Pascagoula.

1960 — J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula and Mrs. John W. Boyd of New York City, nee Peggy Murray of Pascagoula.

1961 — C. R. Schexnider of Pascagoula and Mrs. K. W. Martin of Pascagoula, nee Gloria Ersberg.

1962 — Teddy Millette and Mrs. Tommy Harrison, nee Rosalind Mercier, both of Pascagoula.

1963 — Julius Martin and Miss Albert W. Greene, nee Carolyn Spencer, both of Pascagoula.

1964 — Raymond Joseph and Miss Lynda Jane, both of Pascagoula.

1965 — Phillip Scranton and Mrs. Eugene Landell, nee Diane Krebs, both of Pascagoula.

1966 — Dr. George Davis and Miss Tina Cox, both of Pascagoula.

Of all the crowned heads of past Knights of Columbus balls, only a single couple have proceeded from the Carnival ball to a king and queen. [illegible] J. E. Krebs as King Arthur was unmasked as the king in 1960. The honor of Queen Guinevere was bestowed upon Diane.

When questioned [illegible] 1960 dance, pert Miss Krebs declined "I really don't remember much about [illegible] ball." — And, of course, that's when Carnival is all about.

When he was the King, [illegible] the KC ladies were arrayed in the royal splendor of the Pascagoula Country Club Auditorium for Pascagoula. The site was particularly regal in those days when a [illegible] was provided. It was not [illegible] in the days when [illegible] Camelot ball was held [illegible] occasions.

By the time Diane was crowned five years later, the KCs had decided to take advantage of the theatre. Diane now Mrs. Eugene Yandell, reigned as a [illegible] beautiful underwater setting. In water and coral built up at the ceiling and [illegible] and the bottom of [illegible].

The 1965 ball made history for the KCs and left a memory held dear [illegible] ago. It was the first [illegible] in the newly-constructed [illegible] Hall, now the [illegible] many other Carnival [illegible] Mall.

Priests, Nuns Roles In New

By DAVID SMOTHERS

NEW YORK (UPI)—On her father's farm near Sterling, Ill., about 30 years ago, Jean Grennan would sit under her favorite tree and dream of becoming a nun.

—That the worldwide loss of priests from their vocations runs about 1,000 a year. Presumably, hundreds of these would be Americans.

—That there is a slow but steady dropout in the ranks of America's 180,000 nuns—47 from the New York Archdiocese alone last year.

—That fewer young Americans men and women are entering the father of her infant child, and had been excommunicated.

But, Girandola added, he is still a priest. Despite his disbelief in and defiance of the church's law of celibacy, he said, the Catholic hierarchy cannot strip him of his priesthood. Today, Father Girandola is the pastor of his own St. Dismas Church, campaigning openly for an end to the rule of priestly celibacy and administering the Sacraments of the Catholic Church to those who, like himself, have been denied them.

CHURCH SECRET

How many others who have made such decisions are, up to now, a church secret. There are two official figures of how many priests and nuns have left their calling in the United States and elsewhere in the world. But there are some informed guesses.

—That there are now upwards of 6,000 ex-priests living in the

TALK CONTINUES

The talk has not stopped, though, and it is a fact that a large number of the priests publicity renouncing their vows, add a marriage announcement.

The national Catholic Reporter, a lay-edited weekly, reported that a survey of 3,000 "rank-and-file" priests showed 62 per cent believed priests should be free to marry if they wished.

Jean Grennan grew up and became Sister Jacqueline, a special sort of nun: an executive and fund-raiser of corporation caliber, the only female adviser on education to President Johnson, president at 40 of Webster College of Webster Grove, Mo., one of the most brilliant and discussed young educators in the country.

On Jan. 11, "Sister J" called a news conference. From now on, she asked reporters, please call me "Miss Jacqueline Grennan." At the age of 47, she was leaving the Order of the Sisters of Loretto and, with the approval of her order and the St. Louis Archdiocese, taking Webster College out of the jurisdiction of the Roman Catholic Church with her.

It was the same slight, intense "Sister J" the reporters knew, except that her short, curling brown hair was uncovered and she wore two-inch heels and a full-skirted black suit, with a silvery brooch on the left shoulder.

ONE OF NUMBER

Jacqueline Grennan had become one of the mounting number of Catholic priests and nuns who, for reasons of faith, conviction, or rebellion at the discipline and monolithic authority of the church, have given up their vows and entered into what used to be called "the world."

On Dec. 28 in Belleville, Ill., across the Mississippi River from St. Louis, Msgr. Robert G. Wesselman announced he had resigned as chancellor of the Belleville Diocese.

Wesselman, a handsome, genial man of 38, also announced that he had married a divorcee in a civil ceremony and was taking her and her two children to Kansas City, Mo., where he had a job with a War on Poverty project.

"I am convinced that I am no longer called to live and serve in the priesthood as it is currently structured," Wesselman said. He cited as reasons "the slowness of the church in America to implement the renewal initiated by Vatican Council II" and "the failure of the institutional church to sufficiently identify with the poor and with those who suffer same. Bishop Fulton J. Sheen of Rochester, N.Y., asked last week what he thought of defecting priests and nuns, did not sound forgiving.

"When I look at U.S. history, I remember Nathan Hale, not Benedict Arnold," he said.

There are others who send their blessings with their departed brothers and sisters.

One of these is Sister Francetta Barberis, Miss Grennan's predecessor as president of Webster and her longtime friend.

Sister Francetta, 66, is still a Sister of Loretto, but works in lay clothing as an executive of the Job Corps in Washington. She knew well in advance what her friend and protege planned.

"I completely approve of what she has done," Sister Francetta said. "This is a new world and we are part of it. There is a place for the cloister and a place for the habit for those who choose it.

"Each has to find the answer for herself."

Thirsty for some mouthwash, drug furniture buys? There are the seminaries and convents. A 1966 survey estimated the seminary failure in the previous year at 7 per cent. There are no indications that the trend has changed.

If these are symptoms, as they would appear to be, they are symptoms of change in the church as well as in the world the church lives in.

To an authoritarian, dogma-based institution such as the Roman church, many observers feel, admitting the possibility of change is to invite it. Miss Grennan expressed something of this when, in announcing her new estate, she said:

"This action would have been impossible before Vatican II. After Vatican II, a spirit of humanism spread throughout the church."

The second Vatican Council may have spread humanism, but it also started talk on some of the touchiest issues affecting Catholicism.

Pope Paul VI ordered the council to stop talking out loud on one of the church's most troublesome issues, the law—based on historical tradition, not

Old cotton gin to get new civil rights marker

▸ Family has transformed the building into a popular eatery

By ERNEST HERNDON
McComb Enterprise-Journal

LIBERTY, Miss. — The veil will come off a new state historical marker on Nov. 27 commemorating a 1961 civil rights-era slaying at an old cotton gin. The marker outside what is now the Cotton Gin Restaurant will cite the death of voting rights activist Herbert Lee.

"Herbert Lee, a 42-year-old dairy farmer in the Amite County area, became a member of the NAACP in the early 1950s," the inscription will read. "In the fall of 1961, Lee began transporting voting rights activists within the Pike and Amite County area. On Sept. 25, 1961, Herbert Lee was shot and killed while at the local cotton gin."

The building, formerly known as the old Westbrook Gin, is located on Mississippi Highway 584 in Liberty. It was built around 1909.

The idea for a state marker came up in September when the Mississippi Historic Preservation Professional Review Board nominated the gin to the National Register of Historic Places.

"When the gin went up for a national historical site, they asked what happened there," said owner Johnnie Powell. "That was history happened here when he was murdered. When they approved the gin for a historical site, one of the members said we should do something for Mr. Lee."

Powell hasn't received approval yet on the national designation, but she got the go-ahead on the state marker. There were no funds available from the state, however, so she paid $1,790 for the sign herself.

Scheduled at the dedication ceremony is a welcome from Mayor Ricky Stratton and words from a chamber of commerce official, local historian James Allen Causey, Amite County Chancery Clerk Ronny Taylor, children of Lee, and Mary Williams, who was working in a nearby cafe on the day of the shooting.

Lee is survived by a wife, Prince, and eight children, Wilma Lee, Irma Jean, Shirley, Ruby, Roy, Ray, Frank and Herbert Jr. All are expected to attend.

The marker will go on the southwest corner of the restaurant property.

"He was murdered outside by the road," Powell said.

Lee was reportedly shot dead by the late E.H. Hurst, a member of the Mississippi Legislature. Hurst claimed self-defense and was not prosecuted.

Hurst is not mentioned on the marker.

"You can't do anything about what happened," Powell said. "Look where we are now. You have to forgive."

Powell, 71, acknowledged the irony that a cotton gin where a civil rights-era killing took place is now a popular restaurant owned by an African-American family and frequented by whites and blacks.

"I remember the time when black people couldn't walk the street in the daytime in Liberty. Now I own a business," she said.

She recalls when black people couldn't enter a restaurant. Now she owns one. When they couldn't buy a Coca-Cola. Now she sells them. When they couldn't use a public restroom. Now her restrooms and restaurant are open to people of any race.

Powell said she doesn't want to ruffle feathers with the marker, just recognize what occurred.

"That was a terrible day," she said. "But look at us now."

The Powell family bought the property — which housed Avesco oilfield equipment manufacturer for a short time in the early 1980s — in the mid-1980s.

During the Amite County Bicentennial in spring 2009, the gin hosted a civil rights memorial program attended by 150 people, black and white, including members of Herbert Lee's family.

The Powells converted the old gin into a restaurant a year ago. It specializes in down-home Southern cooking. Family members working there include children Tyrone, Lloyd and wife Julia and their children Lisa and Marie, Emanuel Jr., Ricky, and Joye and husband Allen Causey.

"The main idea of turning it into a restaurant was (son) Ricky's idea," said Mrs. Powell, who's planning a bed and breakfast next door. "We had it in our hands. It was sitting here doing nothing. So take it and do something with it. It provides a job for all my family. All my children work here."

Unveiling of the Portrait of Hugo Ernestus Krebs by Miss Joan Portus, a direct descendant.

Joseph Simon de la Pointe, French Naval Officer, came to the Gulf Coast with D'Iberville and Bienville 1699. He was deeded land on Dauphin Island, 1715. Later in 1718, he built "The Spanish Fort".

Hugo Ernestus Krebs arrived in the early seventeen thirties. Married Marie Josephine, daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe. They had six children. Krebs second marriage was to Marie Chauvin Joyuse. They had seven children. Ten generations of Krebs still reside in Mississippi and along the Gulf Coast.

Krebs' will was written, in Spanish, in 1776 in New Orleans. It is believed that he was buried there. History records that he was a surgeon also a farmer, and that he raised cotton, rice, indigo and sugar cane on this property which was called at the time "Krebs Fort". It was here that Bernard Romans recorded a cotton gin, invented by Krebs in 1772. This was twenty years before Eli Whitney invented his cotton gin. Roman's book, "Republic of West Florida" is in the Rare Books Division, Library of Congress. The last descendent that owned and lived in the "Spanish Fort" was Mrs. J. T. Johnson (nee Cecile Krebs) great grand daughter of Joseph Simon Krebs who was the son of Hugo and Marie Krebs.

September 1971, the Spanish Fort building was listed in the National Register of Historic Places, in Washington D.C., thus becoming one of forty-five National Registered Properties in Mississippi.

OLD SPANISH FORT

Old Spanish Fort in Pascagoula was the location Sunday for two important as well as festive events. One was a Flag Day ceremony and the other an unveiling of an oil painted portrait of an early settler, Hugo Ernestus Krebs.

The flag ceremony was opened by Mr. Vincent Ros, chairman of the board of the Jackson County Historical Society. Mr. Ros introduced Rev. Clark McMurray who gave the invocation. Mr. Ros then presented the hostesses of Plantation Home escorted by members of the Pascagoula Chapter of De Molays. The young ladies in their antebellum dresses with their escorts presented the Eight Soverign Flags that had once waved over the area of The Old Spanish Fort. Mr. Ros then introduced Mr. Dave Balduff, Americanism Chairman, of the American Legion Post 160. Mr. Balduff presented the museum with an American flag which was accepted by Mr. George B. Hague, for the historical society. To the sound of Joel Slayter's trumpet the flag was officially raised by members of Post 160.

The guest speaker was Admiral Charles N. Payne, Supervisor of Shipbuilding U.S.Navy who made a patriotic speech calling for courage from all American to maintain our liberty and freedom.

Edward Khayat, President of the Jackson County Board of Supervisors acted as master of ceremonies for the unveiling ceremonies. Mr. Khayat recounted some of the history of the museum and recognized many of Krebs decendents. The portrait of Hugo Ernestus Krebs was donated by Miss Hermina Ernest of New Orleans The portrait was photographically removed from an ivory and gold pendent by Wallace Reeves Studio. Restoration and painting was also done by Reeves.

J. E. Krebs was born in Pascagoula on Lake Ave. His father Ray Flechas Krebs, his mother Rose Ida Stiglets and his brother Victor Ray Krebs moved to Handsboro, Miss. which was the former home of his mother. After living there for about two years the family moved to Bayou Cassotte where J. E. grew up. He always talked about how hard they worked on the farm also how he and his brother worked on the Sumedinger farm during the summer fo 10¢ an hour.

His mother passed away when the boys were 10 and 12. Then they spent a lot of time with their grandparents the E.E. Krebs on Krebs Lane.

When he was in high school at O.L.V. the Nuns helped so much with his early training. Especially Mother Laura. He worked around the school for her and the Nuns home. Mother Laura would put aside money for the work he did and when he graduated from O.L.V. she had enough money to pay for all his graduation expenses.

While he was in high school he lived with Msgr. C. C. Hunter for about two years. Mshr. Hunter was ill and J. E. helped take care of him. He also painted the two story house while he lived there.

While in high school his brother Victor Ray started dating Theresa Gentile and J. E. started dating her sister Rita. After dating Rita for 3½ years they were married at O.L.V. by Msgr. P. J. Carey. They had one daughter Diane. J. E. built his own home and did all the work.

After graduation from high school J. E. went to work for W. Guy Krebs, Sr. doing carpenter work. During WW II he went to work at Ingalls. He entered the Navy and was stationed at Bainbridge, Md. When he returned home he decided to go in the contracting business for his self.

The first building he moved was the O.L.V. Rectory. He later did the remodeling on this home. He then built the O.L.V. High School.

After this the Goverment decided to sell a whole project of Navy houses. He built a trailer and moved the whole project all around this area.

He stayed in the contracting buisness most of his life and built many homes and buildings and also the City swimming pool.

In 1971 he decided to slow down and took a job as Maintanance Supt. for the Villa Maria and Santa Maria Apts. in Ocean Springs and Biloxi.

His favorite sport was fishing and he went any time he could. He was working with the Mississippi Fishing Bank Committee to make fishing reefs in the Gulf.

He was a member of the K. of C. and the Elks and built additions to both of these buildings.

He was the King of the K. of C. Carnival Ball in 1960 and in 1969 the King of the Y.M.B.C. Ball.

J. E. loved to work at the Old Spanish Fort. He was a direct descendant of the Baron Hugo Von Krebs who live there and was one of the pioneer familes in Pascagoula. He restored many of the old graves in the Krebs Cemetery next to the Old Fort.

TRIBUTE TO J. E. KREBS

With deep regret and anguish we report the tragic death of J.E. Krebs, our Maintenance Engineer for both Villa Maria and Santa Maria del Mar Apartments. J.E. Krebs was not a "belonger" to very many organizations. He wasn't an active politician or a civic leader. His picture never appeared over a headline proclaiming the outstanding "this" or "that" of the month or year. Yet, his death marks a great loss to all who knew and loved him. What J. E. was, was a good and decent human being who lived his life modestly. He was a good husband and a good father. He always had a smile, a teasing joke, a cheerful countenance, and he never left you that you weren't a little brighter, a little happier. Evidence of this was the many cakes, pies, and cookies he frequently brought home from residents in appreciation for the many little things he had done for them. J. E. was a "can-doer" and never idle. He was an ardent outdoorsman. He was 100 per cent man, who had little difficulty equating his manliness with a childlike faith in God. He really knew what life and Christianity was all about. In his own way, he left his little part of the world a little better. God must have needed some Maintenance work done in Heaven - He picked the best man.

The thing that goes the farthest

Towards making life worthwhile,

That costs the least and does the most

With heavenly Kindness blent;

It's worth a million dollars

And does not cost a cent.

Letters to the editor

Tribute paid to J. E. Krebs

To the Editor:

J. E. Krebs was not a "belonger" to very many organizations. He wasn't an active politician or a civic leader. His picture never appeared over a headline proclaiming the oustanding "this" or "that" of the month or year. Yet his death marks a great loss to the many Pascagoulans who knew and loved him.

What J. E. was, was a good and decent human being who lived his life modestly. He was a good husband and a good father. He always had a smile, a teasing joke, a cheerful countenance, and he never left you that you weren't a little brighter, a little happier.

I first remember J. E. when I was six years old and he looked nine feet tall. He was a general contractor then and his daughter, Diane, and I bordered on trouble frequently as we played around his equipment and lumber. Only his booming voice kept us in line.

The thing that impressed me most about him was that I never knew a person who did not like him. And I never knew him to say anything against any other human being. His work crew loved him and were loyal to the day he quit contracting and took up a less pressuring job maintaining the Villa Maria and Santa Maria retirement homes. The elderly people there loved him too and he frequently came home with cakes and cookies they had baked for him in appreciation for the many little things he had done for them.

About the only creature I ever saw that feared him was a little fox terrier I had as a child. All J. E. had to do was playfully stomp his foot and that dog would run out of sight. The dog just didn't understand him, because J.E. was as kind to animals as he was to people. I remember the time Diane's pony suffered a heat stroke. Anyone else would have given the animal up for dead, but not J. E. He poured bottles of water with epsom salt down the pony and cooled him with water from a garden hose until he was on his feet. The pony lived for years after that.

J. E. was a model parent. He probably couldn't have told you who any of the leading child psychologists of his day were. He loved his daughter and simply acted accordingly. For example, he always had the time to build a little playhouse or a pony shed for Diane or teach her how to draw blueprints at an early age.

J. E. was a "can-doer" and never idle. He built their home on Willow Street almost entirely with his own two hands and spent years after improving or remodeling as his wife wished. He was an ardent outdoorsman. He was 100 per cent man, who had little difficulty equating his manliness with a childlike faith in God. He worshiped every Sunday and many weekdays at mass with his wife, Rita.

Wednesday, he met a tragic death at a railroad crossing in Ocean Springs. His many unlauded charities and kindnesses to his fellow Pascagoulans and Jackson Countians will never be forgotten. J. E. really knew what life and Christianity was all about. In his own way, he left his little part of the world a little better.

His good example is our legacy.

Fishin' Line

By WALTER FOUNTAIN

The Fishing Banks Committee lost one of its greatest champions with the passing of J. E. Krebs of Pascagoula. He was a staunch member from the start and faithfully attended every meeting held in all the cities of the Mississippi Gulf Coast. He was one of a handful of persevering Pascagoulians who supported the causes of the Fishing Banks.

We could never forget J. E.'s two close "brushes" with a serious accident before he met his tragic death. When we put our very first boat, the 90-foot Gloria Colle, out in the Gulf, it was J. E. who rode the inglorious Gloria to her watery grave and it was he who sledged away the plug from the propellor shaft creating an angry boil of sea-water flowing into the hull that made it very difficult for him to scramble out of the fast-setting hull.

The other occasion was when we placed the first lighted buoy in the Gulf, south of Little Dog Keyes Pass, over our first fishing bank. . The buoy and its much-heavier anchor were cribbed-up on the side of the barge ready to jettison. When the "launch time" arrived and the 14,000-lb. anchor rolled over the side it caused some of the heavy timbers to springup and J.E. was in the way of one of these suffering a serious arm wound.

J. E. Krebs was a dedicated and "giving" worker for fishing banks and it was due to him, to a large extent, that our little group of workers stuck together in some difficult years. We will miss him but the fishing banks we build can be his lasting monument.

Unveiling ceremony, flag celebration held

Unveiling ceremony and Flag Day Celebration were held at Old Spanish Fort Museum in Pascagoula with hostesses in ante-bellum dresses. They were Mrs. Christine Oaks, Mrs. Tressie Caulk, Mrs. Betty Rodgers, Mrs. Emily Legare, Mrs. Aline Gambrell, Miss Iva Williamson from Jackson, and Mrs. Helen Callagan from Jackson.

Vincent Ros, chairman of the board of Jackson County Historical Society, was master of ceremonies and the Rev. Clark McMurray of First Baptist Church gave the invocation. Phillip Kelly, city manager from Pascagoula, welcomed visitors and guests.

The Plantation Home hostesses with escorts from the Pascagoula Chapter of DeMolays, presenting the seven sovereign flags that have flown over the Old Spanish Fort were Janice Gautier who carried the flag of France and was escorted by Kyle Lochart; Sue Adkins carried the flag of England and was escorted by Everett Simmons; Mrs. Lois Adkins carried the flag of Spain and was escorted by Scott McWhirter; Elizabeth McCain carried the flag of the Republic of West Florida and was escorted by Larry Ransom; Lanier Gautier carried the Magnolia State Flag and was escorted by Billy Herrington; Mrs. Dorothy Pierce carried the Confederate Flag and was escorted by French Caldwell; Nancy Gautier carried the American Flag and was escorted by Bern Gautier.

Two other DeMolay members, Steve Willis and Mickey Nickelson assisted with the ceremony. Les Hayes and Guy Blake were in charge of cold drinks and candy.

Americanism Chairman Dave Balduff of American Legion Post 160, assisted by E. J. Granger, presented a new American flag to the fort. Also presented was one from William M. Colmer which had been flown over the Capitol at Washington, D. C. Joel Slayter of Pascagoula High School Band played the trumpet as the new flag was raised.

George B. Hague, vice president of Jackson County Historical Society, accepted the flag.

Commander John F. Szymonik of American Legion Post 160 led the pledge of allegiance to the flag, assisted by an honor guard of eight Legionaires and one Boy Scout.

Ros introduced the guest speaker, Adm. Charles N. Payne, Supervisor of Shipbuilding, U.S. Navy.

Another highlight of the ceremony was the unveliling and presentation of a picture of Hugo Ernestus Krebs. Edward Khayat, president of Jackson County Board of Supervisors, was master of ceremonies and gave a short history of the museum building. He read the names of the living descendants of Hugo Krebs and introduced those present.

Miss Joan Krebs Portas unveiled the picture which was presented by J. E. Krebs. Mrs. Henry Gautier, president of Jackson County Historical Society, accepted the gift and thanked those who helped to obtain it for the fort.

The Rev. Louis Lohan of Our Lady of Victories Church gave the benediction.

port on November 13, 1788.[31] Another daughter, Sarah, was married to David Dupree at St. Stephens on July 22, 1804.[32]

Chaney favored the Spanish government and was rewarded with land grants on the Tombigbee River near Jackson's Creek in 1787 and on the east bank near Nannihubba Bluff in 1794.[33] As was true of other settlers who prospered under the benevolent paternalism of the Spanish government, Chaney asked permission to emigrate to Spanish territory following the expansion of the United States into northern Alabama.[34] Chaney settled in the Feliciana parishes of West Florida. He made out his will on March 28, 1821 at West Feliciana Parish, and he died in the same year which witnessed the transfer of all Florida to American rule.[35]

Another prominent settler in early Alabama was John Baker. He is listed in the 1785 census as a widower, "Jean Baker," who resided on the Tensaw River and directed his three slaves in producing 40 barrels of Indian corn during 1785.[36] In the mystical way of Spanish census reports, Baker appears one year later as a bachelor with no slaves and no crops![37] On January 15, 1787, he joined with other Anglo-American settlers of the Tensaw and Tombigbee valleys in signing a petition asking the government to retain in command at Mobile the popular Pedro Favrot.[38]

After signing his loyalty oath at Mobile on April 14, 1785,[39] he again signed his loyalty oath at the Tensaw post on January 4, 1789.[40] Baker petitioned the Spanish government for a land grant of 1,600 acres on property formerly granted by the British to Charles Walker. He planned to produce tobacco on this land.[41] In 1787, he also asked for a tract of land suitable for grazing his black cattle.[42] According to Gaines, Baker lived on the first bluff above St. Stephens.[43] In 1795, after John Chastang had declined the appointment as commissioner of the second ward of the St. Stephens settlement, Baker was named to that post.[44] He kept a keen eye peeled for land bargains, and in 1801 he bought 800 acres for only $22 at a sheriff's sale.[45] He signed a bond for a friend in 1803.[46] Baker also owned land in Mobile on Royal street and near the Mobile parish church.[47]

When the census was taken for the San Esteban District in 1797, "John Beker" is listed as a 38-year-old American married to a 33-year-old American girl. They had two children, a boy and a girl, and owned twenty cattle and one horse.[48]

It is by no means true that the settlers of lower Alabama were all native to the United States. Many were creole French and had lived in the Mobile District under the successive dominions of France, England and Spain. Francisco Carriére, Louisbourg, La Lancette, and Francisco Dubuisson were of French extraction.[49] Peter Dunn of San Esteban was Irish.[50] Francisco Fontanilla was Spanish, but his wife was German.[51] Mr. and Mrs. Tobias Reams were both German.[52]

In 1722 an English ship captain named Ross found cotton and a gin on a Pascagoula farm belonging to Hugo Ernestus Krebs, a native of Moselle's town of Neumagen in Germany. He left fourteen grown children who settled in the Mobile District, particularly in the western portions near the Pascagoulas and Singing River around Kreb's lake. The farm house was still standing in 1906, at which time it was said to be 175 years old. As in many houses along the Gulf Coast, it was constructed of heavy cypress lumber which was in excellent condition almost two centuries after the house was built.[47] In the census rosters for the Mobile District the name of Krebs or its Spanish equivalent of Kreps appears in the person of Augustin Krebs, who lived at Pascagoula with his wife, children and slaves.[48] Francis Krebs asked the government for a title to Round Island in November, 1783, and the land grant was approved. This 43-year-old settler in 1786 was married to a 40-year-old wife, had two children, three mulatto slaves, and three Negro slaves working their two plantations on which they raised corn.[49] Hugo's son of the same name was married to Luisa LeFlau and lived on Royal Street in Mobile with his daughter Maria.[50] Joseph Krebs was 44 in 1786; he and his 23-year-old wife lived on a plantation with their two children, five mulatto and six Negro slaves and produced corn.[51] Margarita Krebs, who was probably Hugo, Jr.'s widow in 1796, rented her house to the commandant of Mobile for ten dollars a month.[52] Maria Krebs, the widow of Hugo, Sr., lived in Mobile in 1786 at the age of fifty. She had four children and eighteen slaves on her corn-producing plantation.[53] Mary Josephine (Juana) Krebs was the widow of Mobile militia commander Antonio de Narbonne. She died on her plantation, located on the American side of the Southern Boundary Line, on October 14, 1802, at the age of fifty-seven. She had various lots within the town of Mobile.[54]

The Krebs family were fiercely loyal to Spain, apparently because the Spanish government provided them with protection and, in one case, when Joseph Krebs and twelve other Pascagoulas settlers complained against the Indians killing livestock while on the road to New Orleans, the Spanish government provided the Indians with rations to prevent the practice.[55]

Frontiersmen were noted for their mobility, and Ebenezer Fulson was typical of this characteristic. In the 1789 census of the Mobile District, he is listed as a 24-year-old American living with his 31-year-old wife, two children and three Negro slaves. He kept seven horses on his plantation which produced tobacco and corn.[56] His wife was probably the former widow of Samuel Lewis of Natchez, where Sarah White Lewis was married to Fulson prior to their departure for the Tombigbee. Their two sons, Miguel Nathaniel, born at St. Stephens in 1788 and baptized at that post by Father Lamport the following year, and William, both lived with their mother after Fulson moved back to the Homichitto River in the Natchez District in 1789.[57] On March 17, 1791, Governor Manuel Gayoso de Lemos named Fulson "Interpreter of the Indians at Natchez."[58] Fulson was a good choice, for he had lived with the Choctaws fifteen years since the age of ten. His brother lived among the Choctaws, and Fulson had many friendly connections among the Indians.[59] For his duties in persuading the Choctaws to cede the strip of land on which Ft. Nogales was built in 1791, and for counterbalancing the effect of a "white rascal" said to be residing among the Choctaws and trying to set the leaders against the Spanish government, Fulson earned an annual salary of $240, although he was recommended for a raise to $360 soon after.[60]

I, Don Vicente Sebastian Pintado, Surveyor General [bottom of p. 55] of West Florida for his Majesty, certify that the above plan conforms with the one which is annexed to the proceedings promoted by Barthélemi Pellerin, Captain of the Infantry Regiment of Louisiana and Benigno Garcia Calderon, Lieutenant of the same Regiment and agent [rear of p. 55] for the free negro, Charles Asmard, soliciting the survey and bounding of the lands in Pass Christian, and that in continuation of the said original plan the following description is found:

I, Don Nicolas de Finiels, special engineer added to the staff of the town of Pensacola, in virtue of the commission of Don Vicente Sebastian Pintado, Surveyor General of West Florida, given me by his official letter of October 24, 1809, certify that, in consequence of the said commission, I went to the place called Pass Christian, in order to measure and bound the land granted to Barthélemi Pellerin, Captain of the Infantry Regiment of Louisiana, according to what was ordered by decree of September 25, 1808, given by Don Juan Ventura Morales, acting Intendant General of this Province and Judge of Lands and Vacant Lots therein, of which decree the said surveyor general informed me, delivering to me the original proceedings for the exact fulfillment of what was ordered in it, and having cited Jean Baptiste Micaise and Pierre Morin, old residents of this place, in order that they might declare and inform me of the boundaries of the land which belonged to Widow Asmar, which is the same which was ordered measured for the said captain, and they appeared before Don Philip Saucier, syndic of this place, and after having taken the oath according to law, declared that they know the said land perfectly well; that they also know it belonged to the deceased Widow Asmar, and that the said land had for boundaries Bayou Boisdoré [Golden Wood], on the front, Bay of St. Louis as far as the point at which it terminates, and from the said point, running along the seashore as far as Bear Point, which includes the second front, and its depth brings it to Bayou Portages, according to what was expressed in the declaration which is annexed to this legend.

And after having cited Claude Christian Ladner, neighboring landowner on the east of said tract, who, because of being ill, could not leave his house, so he sent me the paper of concession which his father, Nicholas Christian Ladner, obtained from Don Estevan Miró, former Governor of the Province of Louisiana, on the 3rd day of the month of June, 1788, in which the governor said that he granted to Nicholas Christian Ladner, twenty arpents front on the gulf by the [p. 56]

ordinary depth of forty arpents, beginning at the boundary of the land of François Carrier (last husband of Widow Asmar), also the said Claude Christian Ladner informed me that the land of the said deceased Carrier terminated its front at the shore of the little bayou commonly called Bear Point Bayou, which is found near the said point, a little farther to the east; in view of which, I proceeded with the survey, accompanied by the witnesses, Joseph Labat and the free negro, Charlot, residents of this place, and with the assistance of Jean Baptiste Pellerin, Lieutenant of the Regiment of Louisiana, Civil and Military Commandant of the District of Bay St. Louis, agent of the interested party, and I found that the said land, according to the indicated limits, contains seventeen thousand and eighty-four arpents, measured with the perch of Paris of eighteen feet of the same city, counting one hundred square perches per superficial arpent, according to the custom of this province, exclusive of the eight hundred arpents belonging to the free negro called Charlot, by donation from his mistress, Julia de la Brosse, Widow Asmar, afterwards Carrier, on November 5, 1799, which is annexed to the proceedings; and the tract is situated in the aforesaid place commonly called Pass Christian, and is bounded on the north by Bayou Portago, on the south by the beach formed by this part of the Gulf extending from the Gulf of Mexico, on the west by the beach of Bay St. Louis, from the east point of its entrance to Bayou Boisdoré, and on the east by the aforesaid tract occupied by Claude Christian Ladner, resident of Biloxi Bay, which place they call Bear Point, on which side the land terminates at a line which runs north 2° degrees, 10 minutes east of the compass, the needle declining 3 1/2 degrees to the northeast, as clearly shown on the preceding plan, on which are shown the dimensions and directions of the boundaries, the trees and landmarks which serve as natural and artificial boundaries.

And in order that it may be evident, I give the present with the preceding figurative plan, made in accordance with the proceedings which I had taken, and I signed it with the aforesaid [rear of p. 56] agent of Barthélemi Pellerin and the witnesses, Joseph Labat and the free negro, Charlot, at Pass Christian, December 2, 1809. -- NICOLAS de FINIELS -- JEAN BAPTISTE PELLERIN -- JOSEF LABAT -- Mark of the free negro CHARLOT.

This is a copy of the plan and document dispatched on the 30th day of January of this year to add to the title of ownership ordered by the acting intendant and superintendent general of this province, [illegible] issued on the 15th day of the same month and year, which I certify.

Plan No. 1830'

I, Don Vicente Sebastian Pintado, Surveyor General [bottom of p. 55] of West Florida for his Majesty, certify that the above plan conforms with the one which is annexed to the proceedings promoted by Barthélemi Pellerin, Captain of the Infantry Regiment of Louisiana and Benigno Garcia Calderon, Lieutenant of the same Regiment and agent [rear of p. 55] for the free negro, Charles Asmard, soliciting the survey and bounding of the lands in Pass Christian, and that in continuation of the said original plan the following description is found:

I, Don Nicolas de Finiels, special engineer added to the staff of the town of Pensacola, in virtue of the commission of Don Vicente Sebastian Pintado, Surveyor General of West Florida, given me by his official letter of October 24, 1809, certify that, in consequence of the said commission, I went to the place called Pass Christian, in order to measure and bound the land granted to Barthélemi Pellerin, Captain of the Infantry Regiment of Louisiana, according to what was ordered by decree of September 23, 1808, given by Don Juan Ventura Morales, acting Intendant General of this Province and Judge of Lands and Vacant Lots therein, of which decree the said surveyor general informed me, delivering to me the original proceedings for the exact fulfillment of what was ordered in it, and having cited Jean Baptiste Micaise and Pierre Morin, old residents of this place, in order that they might declare and inform me of the boundaries of the land which belonged to Widow Asmar, which is the same which was ordered measured for the said captain, and they appeared before Don Philip Saucier, syndic of this place, and after having taken the oath according to law, declared that they know the said land perfectly well; that they also know it belonged to the deceased Widow Asmar, and that the said land had for boundaries Bayou Boisdoré [Golden Wood], on the front, bay of St. Louis as far as the point at which it terminates, and from the said point, running along the seashore as far as Bear Point, which includes the second front, and its depth brings it to Bayou Portages, according to what was expressed in the declaration which is annexed to this legend.

And after having cited Claude Christian Ladner, neighboring landowner, on the east of said tract, who, because of being ill, could not leave his house, so he sent me the paper of concession which his father, Nicholas Christian Ladner, obtained from Don Estevan Miró, former governor of the Province of Louisiana, on the 3rd day of the month of June, 1788, in which the governor said that he granted to Nicholas Christian Ladner, twenty arpents front on the gulf by the [p. 56]

ordinary depth of forty arpents, beginning at the boundary of the land of François Carrier (last husband of Widow Asmar), also the said Claude Christian Ladner informed me that the land of the said deceased Carrier terminated its front at the shore of the little bayou commonly called Bear Point Bayou, which is found near the said point, a little farther to the east; in view of which, I proceeded with the survey, accompanied by the witnesses, Joseph Labat and the free negro, Charlot, residents of this place, and with the assistance of Jean Baptiste Pollerin, Lieutenant of the Regiment of Louisiana, Civil and Military Commandant of the District of Bay St. Louis, agent of the interested party, and I found that the said land, according to the indicated limits, contains seventeen thousand and eighty-four arpents, measured with the perch of Paris of eighteen feet of the same city, counting one hundred square perches per superficial arpent, according to the custom of this province, exclusive of the eight hundred arpents belonging to the free negro called Charlot, by donation from his mistress, Julia de la Brosse, Widow Asmar, afterwards Carrier, on November 5, 1799, which is annexed to the proceedings; and the tract is situated in the aforesaid place commonly called Pass Christian, and is bounded on the north by Bayou Portage, on the south by the beach formed by this part of the Gulf extending from the Gulf of Mexico, on the west by the beach of Bay St. Louis, from the east point of its entrance to Bayou Boisdoré, and on the east by the aforesaid tract occupied by Claude Christian Ladner, resident of Biloxi Bay, which place they call Bear Point, on which side the land terminates at a line which runs north 23 degrees, 10 minutes east of the compass, the needle declining 3 1/2 degrees to the northeast, as clearly shown on the preceding plan, on which are shown the dimensions and directions of the boundaries, the trees and landmarks which serve as natural and artificial boundaries.

And in order that it may be evident, I give the present with the preceding figurative plan, made in accordance with the proceedings which I had taken, and I signed it with the aforesaid [rear of p. 56] agent of Barthélemi Pollerin and the witnesses, Joseph Labat and the free negro, Charlot, at Pass Christian, December 2, 1809. — NICOLAS FINIELS — JEAN BAPTISTE POLLERIN — JOSEF LABAT — Mark of the free negro CHARLOT.

This is a copy of the plan and document dispatched on the 30th of January of this year to add to the title of ownership ordered by the acting intendant and superintendent general of this province, which I issued on the 15th day of the same month and year, which I certify.

Denis Braud, acting under procuration of Colas, of St. Domingo, sues Lardin on an account due for merchandise shipped him by Colas on March 15, 1761, to be sold in New Orleans.

Petition to Monsieur Dabbadie, Councillor of the King, Commissioner General of the Marine, Intendant of Louisiana:

Denis Braud, merchant of this city, humbly prays and represents: That he was given power of attorney by Sieur Colas, merchant of St. Domingo, for the purpose of forcing Sieur Lardin to render an account concerning a shipment of merchandise valued at 13,859 livres, sent him on consignment by Sieur Colas on March 15, 1761, for the purpose of disposing of same in New Orleans, on a ten per cent commission basis, according to Lardin's acknowledgment written beneath the invoice of said merchandise;

That petitioner made several, but fruitless, demands on Sieur Lardin, the last of which was written beneath the said act of procuration, and served upon him by Bary, Sheriff of the Council, on the 7th of the current month.

Wherefore petitioner prays that it may please Your Excellency to order that Sieur Lardin be summoned to appear before Your Excellency and that he be directed to furnish petitioner with the aforesaid account of sale of merchandise. And justice will be done.

that it was due to the anthrax he had in New Orleans. I certify to having seen him urinate and spit a great deal of blood. I opened the contusion and syringed it with wine and with brandy. I urged the said la Port to unbosom himself to me, telling him that one must have confidence in a surgeon as in a confessor; but he never wanted to tell me anything. He died on October 5th before noon, while praying God and showing the feeling of a good Christian. I certify the present declaration to be true. I declare, furthermore, to have gathered up his clothing and to have put in a trunk his sword and his wearing apparel and to have found also a violin with its case and one cane of hard wood with a black head in the shape of an apple, the whole in the presence of Mr. Donresta, a Spanish Captain, rooming at my house for one month and a half, while he waited for an opportunity to go to Pensacola; which effects I am carrying to and leaving with Mr. Du Cros at his residence in New Orleans to be released when called for.

Widow Portneuf petitions for order directing Villars, tutor of Miss Portneuf, to execute a decision of the Court.

Petition to Monsieur Dabbadie, Councillor of the King, Commissioner General of the Marine, and Intendant of Louisiana:

Madame the widow Portneuf humbly prays and represents: That, by virtue of a decision rendered by the Superior Council between petitioner and Sieur Villars, in his capacity of tutor of Demoiselle Portneuf, daughter of the late Sieur Portneuf, it was ordered that the assets of the community between petitioner and the said late Sieur Portneuf should be divided in equal shares;

That, despite the said order, Sieur Villars did not execute the said partition; and raised objections to credit the community with Sieur Portneuf's salary, which he received; and refused to recognize a negress, still living, as a community asset; and even declined to pay petitioner, out of the share and portion of the late Sieur Portneuf, the sum of 1200 livres due by the deceased to the late Sieur Ferrand, as evidenced by the receipt of Mr. Barry, Captain Aide-Major of Mobile, Sieur Ferrand's testamentary executor, the said sum having been paid during and by the said community.

For all the foregoing considerations petitioner prays that it may please Your Excellency to direct Sieur Villars to proceed forthwith to the said partition; to credit the community with the salary of the late Portneuf; to dispose of the aforesaid negress by judicial sale, the proceeds thereof to be also credited to the community estate; and to pay petitioner, out of Sieur Portneuf's share, the sum of 1200 livres, as the marriage contract between Sieur Portneuf and petitioner positively states that each one of the contracting parties shall pay his or her debts contracted before the community, and of such character was the indebtedness concerning the said sum. And right will be done.

Francais, St. Domingo), and the other for the sum of 300 livres, currenecy also of the Cape; by virtue of the ordered rendered by the Council on March 5th last, the undersigned settled the said succession as follows:

The receipts exceeded the expenditures by the sum of 1547 livres and 6 sols, in former paper currency of the Colony, which, at the present rate of exchange of four for one only represents the sum of 386 livres, 16 sols and 6 deniers:	386–	16–	6–
The undersigned Councillor Commissioner ordered and does order that there shall be paid to Sieur Garic, on his promissory note of 1500 livres, currency of the Cape, equivalent to 1000 livres of the currency of this Colony, only the sum of 332 livres and 8 sols, instead of the said full amount of 1000 livres owed him:	332–	8–	–
The undersigned Councillor Commissioner likewise ordered and does order that the promissory note of Sieur Durel, also in currency of St. Domingo, corresponding to the sum of 200 livres in currency of this Colony, be reduced to the sum of 64 livres and 10 sols, which amount shall be paid to him:	64–	10–	–
Total:	396–	18–	–

And by means of the foregoing payments the said Sieur Ducros shall be fully released towards the said succession.

Nicolas Menelet files suit against the Laporte estate to recover money claimed to be due him.

Petition to Monsieur Dabbadie, Councillor of the King in the King's Council's, Commissioner General of the Marine, Intendant and Presiding Judge of the Superior Council of Louisiana:

Nicolas Menelet, a resident of this city, humbly prays and represents: That there is due him by Sieur Laporte the sum of 1780 livres, namely:

July 15—for his mulatto: for making a jacket and a pair of breeches for a brown boy, 50 livres:	50 – –
For having furnished four ells of lining goods, at 10 livres per ell:	40 – –
Sold and delivered by petitioner to La Porte one jacket and one pair of breeches of dimity for the price of 100 livres:	100 – –
For making a mosquito-bar and furnishing the material, 100 livres:	100 – –
August 5—for making two pairs of breeches of black velvet and for goods furnished, 40 livres:	40 – –
For making one pair of breeches of linen, 10 livres:	10 – –
August 19—for his mulatto: for making one jacket and one pair of large breeches, 50 livres:	50 – –
For boarding his mulatto for two months at the rate of 100 sols per day, making a total of 310 livres:	310 – –
For two months' rental of two furnished rooms at the rate of 150 livres per month:	300 – –
For the rental of one furnished room in the rear of the house: 75 livres:	75 – –
Due by La Porte for three months' rental of a room to Sieur Poiret, who left, as security, a blue laced coat of which La Porte took possession saying that he would pay the rent himself, at the rate of 50 livres per month: making a total of 150 livres:	150 – –
For one pound of gunpowder sold and delivered by petitioner to La Porte the very day of the latter's flight, the said La Porte saying that he was going hunting: 10 livres:	10 – –
Paid by petitioner for account of La Porte to several negresses for what the latter owed them: 20 livres:	20 – –
For four shirts made by petitioner's wife: 40 livres:	40 – –

October 25, 1763.—I request, in the King's name, that the foregoing statement of accounts be presented to Sieur Ducros, in his capacity of Attorney for Vacant Estates, who was entrusted with the assets of the succession of the late Sieur Laporte, the latter having died intestate, so that Sieur Ducros might present his views to the Council, which will render such decision as it will see fit.

New Orleans, October 25, 1763. (Signed): Lafreniere.

Permit to cite.

October 25, 1763.—Permit to summon Sieur Ducros, in his capacity of Attorney for Vacant Estates, at the first session of the Superior Council.

New Orleans, October 25, 1763. (Signed): Foucault.

Citation served.

October 31, 1763.—Citation was served on October 31st by the Sheriff of the Council upon Sieur Ducros, to appear before the Superior Council on the first Saturday of next month of November, at eight o'clock in the morning. (Signed): Bary.

Joseph Ducros, Attorney for Vacant Estates, petitions for permit to dispose of the effects of Laporte at judicial sale.

Petition to Monsieur Foucault, Commissioner of the Marine, Councillor of the Superior Council of New Orleans, acting Intendant of Louisiana:

Joseph Ducros, Attorney for Vacant Estates, humbly prays and represents: That Sieur Pierre Laporte, a native of Pau, in Bearn, died intestate at the residence of Sieur Kreps, inhabitant of the River of the Pascagoulas, who brought to this city the deceased's personal effects, which were deposited in the Registry; that, at the request of the Procureur General of the King, an inventory was made at once of the said effects, which were entrusted to the keeping of petitioner; that said effects consist of wearing apparel and various odds and ends, which could deteriorate and lose value if kept locked up too long.

Wherefore petitioner prays that it may please Your Excellency to allow petitioner to dispose of said effects by judicial sale, to be held before the Commissioner that it may please Your Excellency to appoint, and in the presence of the Procureur General of the King.

New Orleans, 1763. (Signed): Ducros.

Petition granted and sale ordered.

October 31, 1763.—Let the prayer of of the foregoing petition be granted and let the sale be held before Monsieur de La Lande, Councillor of the Superior Council, and in the presence of Monsieur the Procureur General of the King.

New Orleans, October 31, 1763. (Signed): Foucault.

Explanation to examining genealogist

During the Depression in the 30's, the W.P.A. in New Orleans, La. hired a number of people who read, wrote and spoke the French language fluently to translate old French and Spanish documents found in the Archives of th Louisiana State (Library) Museum. (Now in the Cabildo Archives.)

The translations were typed on loose-leaf notepaper and put in black covers. In time these black note books were referred to, for want of a better name, as the "Black Books". People doing research in the Museum were often told to look in the row of "Black Books" to check whether or no the information they needed could be found in them

It was in one of these "Black Books" the succession of Sieur LaPorte was found, showing the deposition by Dr. Krebs regarding the treatment of the said LaPorte.

Thus: Black Book translation in Cabildo Library copied by Doucette Rayner Bolten 10-5-1955.

Succession of Sieur V. LaPorte

Deposition and certificate of Dr. Krebs regarding the health and death of Sieur V. LaPorte. I, the undersigned personally appeared before Attorney General of the King to make a deposition regarding the death of Mr V. LaPorte who was brought to my plantation at Pascagoula (Miss) on September 25 in a carriage by seven Englishmen for treatment. LaPorte was very sick and refused to answer questions or give any information regarding his past life. On the third day, while having his shirt change I noticed a large contusion on his right arm. He told me it was a putrid Anthrox which he had in New Orleans. I certify he urinated and spat bloo I opened the contusion and syringed it with wine and brandy.

Before me, the undersigned authority, this day, personally appeared DOUCETTE RAYNER BOLTEN, known to me to be that person who upon her oath stated that this record is copied exactly as shown in translation of French document Number P 71056--Box 58 10-20-1763 found in Catildo (Library) Museum in New Orleans La.

GOOD WOMAN'S CALL TO REWARD

MRS JOSEPHINE WALKER dies after lingering illness - At 8 o'clock last Sunday morning the soul of Mrs. Josephine Eleanore KREBS, widow of the late Henry Clay Walker, was called by her Maker to that reward promised those Mortals to whom is applied the devine commendation: "Well done, thou good and faithful servent." She was a patient suffer, cheerful and confident in the mercy and wisdom of her God, and dissolution came to her in a calm peacefulness with those she loved around her.

Mrs. Walker was 60 years, nine months and eleven days old at the time of her death, and is survived by three children, seven brothers and sisters besides numerous other relatives.

Her children are Henry Walker and Miss Eugenia Henrietta Walker of this City, and Mrs. D. W. Hopper of Laurel. Her brothers are Allen J. Krebs of Birmingham, Ala., J.A. Krebs, A. E. Krebs of this City and John F. Krebs of Moss Point, and her sisters are Mrs. M. L. Reinecke, Mrs. J. T. Johnson and Mrs. Blanche Frentz, all of this City.

Mrs. Walker was consistent and devout member of the Catholic Church, and died with the consolation and solace of her religion. The funeral was held from the late residence of the Beach at 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon, Rev. Father B. O'Reilly of Our Lady of Victorier church officiating, interment being in the Catholic Cemetery. The love and esteem in which this estimable woman was held by the entire Community was shown in the large number of people who gathered around her bier and followed the Mortal remains to their last resting place. May she rest in peace, and while her loved ones weep in their sorrow and loneliness, her soul may hold that joyous Communion with her Maker.

Last Will and Testament of MARIANA CHAUVIN,
Second Wife of Hugo Hernesto Krebs

This is typical of the wills of well-to-do Catholic French people on the Gulf Coast during the 1700-1800 time period. The date of this will is July 30, 1799 - during the Spanish period of rule.

Translated in 1976 by Evalie S. Cuadrado of Metairie, La., Legal Translator, it is valuable as a family history research item because it describes relationships and locations of property and other important facts.

Except for separating into paragraphs and capitalizing names, the will is printed here as translated from the original will in French by Ms. Cuadrado:

LAST WILL

In the Name of God Almighty and of the Ever Virgin Mary His Blessed Mother who was conceived without the original sin, Amen.

Let it be known that I, MARIANA CHAUVIN, a native of the Illinois Territory in this Province, an inhabitant of the other side of the Lake on Bayou Chifuncte, at present residing in this City, the Widow of Hugo Hernesto Krebs, being ill, but having my full judgement, memory and natural understanding that God has been kind to give me, believing as I firmly believe in the mystery of the Most Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, three different persons and one true essence, in the mystery of the Incarnation of the Divine Word made flesh for our redemption in the most pure womb of the Virgin Mary Our Lady Most Holy, and in all the other articles, mysteries that believes, teaches and preaches Our Most Holy Catholic Apostolic Church of Rome, administered and governed by the Holy Spirit, under which faith and belief I have lived and intend to live until I die, as a Catholic and true Christian; fearing death which is natural, not knowing its uncertain hour, forseeing that mine will come, I therefore want to make my last will, which with the divine guidance that I have summoned I order in the following manner:

I offer my Soul to the same God that gave it to me, created and redeemed it with the courage of His Most Precious Blood, Passion and Death, and humbly beg to His Divine Majesty to forgive it and to take it to the eternal resting place with His chosen ones, the place where it was destined when it was created; the Body I send to the earth which formed it, and when I die I request to be buried with the blessing of the Church in the plot chosen for the faithful, leaving my funeral and burial to the disposition of my Executor to be carried out according to his wishes, as this is my will.

Following my death I order that thirty Masses be said immediately for my Soul with the usual alms, giving the amount of two reals to each of the forced bequests.

I declare to have been married according to the rites of Our Holy Mother the Church with HUGO HERNESTO KREBS, of whom I am the Widow, and from which marriage we had the following children:

HUGO, BACILIO, CECILIO AND TERESA who are living;

RAFAEL AND CARIDAD who died; leaving the former a daughter named BRIGIDA who is about ten years of age;

And the latter leaving five children named FRANCISCO BERNARDINO who is twenty years of age, EUGENIO IGNATIO who is eighteen years of age, GENOVEBA ISABEL, who is sixteen years of age, MARIA LEONORA, who is fourteen years of age, and CILBANO BACILIO who is thirteen years of age; having the remaining children that I have not mentioned died without succession, on account of which I do not have the need to make particular mention.

That following the death of my aforementioned husband inventories are being made before FRANCISCO BROUTIN and no judicial distribution of his estate has taken place, and I have already delivered to my children BACILIO, TERESA, CARIDAD, HUGO AND RAFAEL KREBS certain amounts:

To the first, five hundred and fifty pesos, as evidenced by a receipt executed before Francisco Broutin;

To the second, four hundred and ninety-three pesos in the form of a negro and of a negress;

To the third, four hundred and twenty-four pesos in the form of a negro and of a female mulatto;

To the fourth, five hundred and fifty pesos according to a receipt that he issued in Mobile;

And the fifth, four hundred and sixty-eight pesos in the form of a negro and furnitures, of which no receipt was given, as in the case of the aforementioned TERESA and CARIDAD;

Pending receipt of her share is the aforementioned CECILIA, who has not received anything, and therefore I am making it known that the portion corresponding to her is due her since she became of age which I have been holding in my possession as previously arranged; in order that her share, together with amounts that the aforementioned CECELIA has given to me to meet my needs, together with her deeds and personal attentions have accumulated to the amount of five hundred pesos which I want to be paid to her, together with the inheritance portion that I owe her.

I declare that my step children from the first marriage that my deceased husband had are not only satisfied with me as to the portions that were given to them following the death of their father, but that they are indebted to me for amounts received in excess of what actually corresponded to them, on account of which we have had legal actions before Francisco Broutin, reference of which appears in the succession of my aforementioned husband, and therefore I make mention of same in order that the corresponding amounts be collected from my aforementioned step children.

I declare as my estate a plantation that I have in the other side of the Lake, together with various pieces of slaves of both sexes and different ages, animals and furniture, which is a fact well known to my children and therefore I omit the details.

I declare that I am indebted to Mr. JUAN VENTURA, the Intendant of the Royal Treasury in the amount of two hundred pesos; to Mr. SANTIAGO MOULON in the amount of ninety peses; having other small indebtedness which I order that they be paid with any other debts that may exist as legitimate.

I appoint as my Executors, custodians of my estate, my son BACILIO KREBS and my brother-in-law FRANCISCO DUBUISON, and to all together and to each in solidum I grant the power and authority that I have to carry out this my disposition, without the intervention or knowledge of the courts of Justice, and to which effect they shall carry out the inventories, appraisal and partition of my estate, seeking to proceed in this manner to avoid problems and delays that could result otherwise.

And from the remainder portion of my estate, rights and interests that should belong to me for whatever reason, I appoint and institute as my only and universal heirs my aforementioned children HUGO, BACILIO, CECELIA and TERESA, had with my aforementioned husband;

Old statues to grace halls of archives

By NELL BURKS
Special to the Press Register

Eight statuesque maidens, wearing the hiton, will greet visitors to the Mobile Municipal Archives at its new location to be ledicated at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Renamed the Charlotte and Samuel Eichold Building, the two-story brick building, 57 Church St., formerly was the Mobile 'olice Department Annex. Prior to that, it was he unemployment office for Mobile.

Dr. and Mrs. Eichold gave the funds to enovate the building. The archives formerly 'ere located at the Brookley Complex.

Four of the maidens hold lamps of learning; ne, the Roman goddess Ceres, holds a sheaf f grain in one hand and a cluster of olives or rapes in the other, and a sixth gestures with ne hand outstretched. Two are positioned, ne on each side of the door to the conference oom, with their heads bowed and their arms olded modestly.

If they seem familiar, yet unfamiliar, and give the guest a feeling of eerie "deja vu," it is because they graced Bel Air Mall when it opened in the late 1960s, creating a beautiful decor.

Made of iron, they then were painted white and many thought them made of plaster.

Not so. The maidens were cast of iron at the "Founderies du Val D'Osne, 58 B.D. (for Boulevard) Voltaire, Paris," and two of these foundry labels are still attached. When they were in Bel Air Mall, one could still read, on additional attached pedestals, "Arrondissement" with a Roman numeral, an administrative subdivision of Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. Jay Altmayer, who acquired them from a New Orleans antique dealer for the Bel Air Mall Corp., with an additional three for themselves, believe they were created during the reign of Napoleon III.

History described his 19-year court as the "most glittering court in Europe."

Some believe the statues were created for the first Paris International Exposition in 1855, then moved to the gardens of the Palace of Versailles, outside Paris.

During the second restoration of Versailles, between the two world wars, an understood to have been financed by Rockefeller money, it was decided not to restore th entire gardens. These statues were acquire by Walter Chrysler, according to Altmaye and graced his gardens on Long Island.

They then were given to the Archdiocese New York, which sold them.

What would such goddesses as Cere goddess of Mother Earth and agriculture, t doing in such a place?

Her sister, Venus, graces the Altmayer residence, Palmetto Hall, in Spring Hill, ar two are in the Altmayer garden.

In 1982, the statues were removed from th mall and given to the city of Mobile by the B Air Corp.

An editorial in the then Mobile Magazir described them as a "munificent gift for th city of Mobile."

"Langan Park, Mobile's municipal outdoor retreat, is to have an amphitheater," reads the itorial.

"What a perfect setting for these statues," the editorial says, and suggests that a statue on ch side of the planned theater could delineate the action. Other statues, positioned on pedtals, could be arranged with an avenue of shrubbery as a dramatic promenade to amphitheater ating.

"Another opportunity for Mobile to have something unique,' it reads.

Altmayer asked, "What happened to the chandelier?"

It too, graced the entrance to the mall.

Reads the editorial, "Too bad the chandelier is leaving town. We would have wished it for bile's Municipal Theatre."

The statues, which seemed to have disappeared, were discovered in an old shed and under water Magnolia Cemetery by Jay Higginbotham, director of the archives. The statues have elicited erest. Don W. Wilson, archivist of the United States of America, and Edwin C. Bridges, directo he Alabama Dept. of Archives and History, will speak at the ceremonies.

JOSEPH HELAIRE KREBS

Friday night last, Scranton lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens in the death of Joseph Helaire Krebs.

His house caught afire about 10 o'clock and his death was caused by the shock sustained. He was removed to the residence of Mr. R. J. Louchridge, and died in a few moments. Mr. Krebs, however, was in feeble health, having just recovered from a prolonged and serious illness. He was 68 years old and unmarried.

He was a gallant Confederate soldier, being a member of Twigg's Rifles, 27th Miss. and having taken part in numerous battles. His devotion to the Confederacy was never abated.

DEATH MR. HELAIRE KREBS.

Died at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Alice Sarrazin, in Scranton, Miss., on September 7, 1900, Mr. HELAIRE KREBS, in the eighty-first year of his age.

The deceased was the son of Helaire Krebs and Irene Berluchause, and born May 18, 1819, at Pascagoula, Miss., and married at the same place on April 20, 1839, Miss Marie Louis Krebs.

There were twelve children born of this very happy marriage, nine of whom are living. Also as a result of this union there were sixty-four grand children and twenty-two great grand children.

Mr. Krebs was educated in the private schools of his native town, and by private tutors at home.

The funeral took place from the Catholic church Saturday morning, proceeding to the cemetery at Pascagoula, where his remains were laid to rest, Rev. Father Hipple officiated.

He was a devoted and consistent member of the Catholic church, and led a useful and exemplary life. His exalted virtues and noble traits of character adorned his long life and sheds honor upon his many descendants, to whom we extend our sympathy.

His piety assures us that he has earned the Christian's Blood Bought reward, and awaits a glad re-union with his loved ones in that Bright Beyond, where we trust we will all meet again. Requiescat in pace.

Marching to Krebs' different drumbeat

I was ashamed this past week when I discovered I knew nothing about Pascagoula native Albin J. Krebs' legacy as a newspaperman.

During my teenage years in Pascagoula, I dreamed of becoming a rock star, not the social reformer Mr. Krebs obviously had his sights on while a young man here in the late 1940s.

As editor of the Ole Miss newspaper his senior year, Krebs stood against racial injustice and demanded equality. He put that in print 11 years before the National Guard was called in during James Meredith's historic enrollment.

That took guts and more bravery that many of us only dream of having. I feel an ulcer coming on if I misspell someone's name or tack on an extra zero on a monetary figure.

I pride myself on having a pretty firm grasp on Mississippi's history, but Krebs' actions and illustrious career was news to me, and that was upsetting because he did so much for so many, which is why we journalists do what we do.

Brad Crocker

Krebs' editorial resulted in crosses being burned outside his dormitory and other threats from his fellow students, including catcalls and boos as he received his diploma.

Rocky Byrd, an Ole Miss football player from Pascagoula, was among those who rallied around Krebs and forced bigots to rethink their possible retaliations.

But Albin Krebs stayed defiant in a time in Mississippi, and the Old South, when such views could land you in the morgue. He stuck to his guns and we're all better off because he did.

His family's stories about him inspired me to take pride in being from Pascagoula but also to remember how important my job is.

After reality smacked me around in the California rock world, I eventually attended college and got a degree from USM in English, not journalism, because I wanted to be a music critic.

The other aspect of Albin Krebs' career involved his role as an editor at The New York Times, where he met with many presidents, entertainers, artists, celebrities, world leaders and so many more people in the news from the mid-20th Century until his retirement in 1989.

His life included eating red beans and rice with Louis Armstrong and his wife and talking guns with President Harry S. Truman, to mention only a few instances.

In short, Krebs covered the people who helped make America great, entertaining and controversial, much like the way in which he was viewed at Ole Miss.

And by doing that, he became, in his own way, one of those historic people as well because he was truly a worldly man.

I revere Albin Krebs and envy him at the same time because I wanted to be part of the same world he lived in.

His sister, Anne Mansfield, said Albin worked his way through college. After his wife and son died during his stint at the Times, he would work holidays for people who had families.

His flair for writing was second-to-none. He could get to the guts of a story and present it in a fashion that many journalists aspire to having.

When you couple Krebs' social work, which continued throughout his lifetime, with his panache and love for telling the life stories of so many important people, you can't help but envy the man.

I wish I could have met Mr. Krebs before his death last year. I'll settle for the next best thing — his work — and I recommend anyone looking for a good and worthy read do the same.

His nephew, Circuit Judge Bob Krebs, said Albin never lost his sense of place and was proud to be from Pascagoula and maintained the principles he learned here all his life.

I did want to change the world when I was younger, but became complacent with covering my hometown.

But now, with Albin Krebs and other local news pioneers like Ira Harkey to look up to, I may get back around to it after all.

United States Coast Guard Academy cadet Benjamin Krebs is serving aboard the USGC Sockeye, based in Bodega Bay, Calif.

The Sockeye has multiple missions of law enforcement, search and rescue and homeland security. It's an 87-foot Marine Protector Class patrol boat with responsibilities 200 miles offshore and in the San Francisco Bay area.

Krebs

Krebs completed his junior year at the USCG Academy in New London, Conn. He is on the dean's list with a 3.28 GPA for the winter/spring semester and will wear a gold star to signify his achievement during the 2005 fall semester. He also earned his fifth silver star for military excellence, making the Commandant of Cadet's list.

Krebs is a member of the academy Bear baseball team that had its third successful season, playing two rounds of their conference tournament. He was a starter at second base and saw duty in the outfield as well, registering a .290 batting average for his junior season.

While on the Sockeye, Krebs has qualified as in port officer of the deck, quartermaster of the watch and SEOPS — special emergency operations — that prepares the individual for basic damage control.

Krebs enters his senior year, first class year at the academy this fall, and will serve Hotel Company as operations department head. His duties will be to oversee 10 other first class cadets as they perform liaison duties with the other cadet companies at the academy.

A 2002 graduate of Pascagoula High School, he is the son of Jimmy and Jeannette Krebs of Pascagoula.

IN SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES.

JUNE 10, 1842.

Ordered to be printed.—To accompany Senate bill 276.

Mr. HENDERSON made the following

REPORT:

The Committee on Private Land Claims, to whom was referred the petition of the heirs of Hugo Krebs, made the following report:

The heirs of Hugo Krebs, of the city of Mobile, petition to be confirmed in their title to a certain town lot in said city, which they and their ancestor are reported to have possessed continuously since the year 1785. Their claim was presented to the first land commission established for that district by the act of 1812, and reported on by Commissioner Crawford, in his report No. 11, but was so vaguely represented as to defeat its confirmation. In pursuance to the act of the 2d of March, 1829, organizing the land officers at St. Stephen's into a commission for the investigation of such and similar claims in that district, this claim was again presented, and being investigated, was specially and separately reported on by said commissioners, on the 21st of January, 1839, and recommended for confirmation. This report was duly communicated to the Senate by the Secretary of the Treasury on the 28th of February, 1839, and has remained without definite action till the present. The committee are entirely satisfied with the justice of the report, recommend it for confirmation, and report a bill for that purpose.

World War I veteran has many memories

By SHARON STALLWORTH

At the age of 86 years, life-long Pascagoula resident Joe V. Krebs has many memories of this area as it used to be. And though industry has proliferated and population increased several times over, a lot of things remain the same.

For example, many Pascagoulans, especially those around 10 or 11 years of age, have heard vaguely disquieting rumours of the 'haunts' of Longfellow House. These ghosts supposedly take the form of tortured slaves (or perhaps, damn yankees). Krebs recalls as a young boy, going soft-shell crabbing along the beach and "running like hell" past the Longfellow House, which was then known as the Buskin place. The haunts then took the same form as the haunts nowadays with the slaves reportedly being tortured with lead poured in their ears.

Krebs also recalled a fellow from New Orleans, name of Major Hesse, who used to come to Pascagoula and stay on the beach at a ballroom-cum-hotel. (The ballroom was closed down when shenanigans there threatened the staidness of other, more settled residents.) Major Hesse had a spyglass with which he examined the moon when it was full. He prophesied to the then-12-year-old Joe, "One day, someone's going to visit up there."

"We thought he was about half-cracked," says Krebs.

Krebs also remembers when hospital facilities in Pascagoula were not exactly up to the standards they now employ. "There was this old black woman named Chloe that used to be the midwife here," he said. "She would just go around to whoever needed her." Of Krebs' seven children, he says only the last two or so were born Singing River Hospital.

He saw the first plane to fly over Pascagoula, "round about 1906 or so. Scared the chickens." He fought in World War I against Kaiser Wilhelm in Germany with six or seven other volunteers from Pascagoula. There was no draft at the time.

Krebs held several different jobs in Pascagoula before his retirement. "I've been lucky," he said. "I always had a job, even during the Depression. I made $250 a month then as a supervisor and that was good money for the time."

He built ships at Plago's, which built ships for the Italian government before it sold out to another builder and became known as Ingalls Shipbuilding. He was one of the first proponents of the Gulf Coast Research Lab and proudly displays a certificate of recognition from that establishment. Finally, he built bridges, some 40 of them in Jackson County, he estimates, until his retirement 16 years ago.

Today, Krebs still builds boats — small fishing skiffs. Length of time until completion varies, however. "I work until I get tired, then I quit."

He also raises chickens in the backyard of his Lanier Street home, which he and his wife built together, and he makes fishing nets — 144 of them in the past six and a half years.

Krebs knows of no reason for his longevity. "Smoking didn't kill me," he said, displaying his pipes. "But I've never inhaled a breath of smoke in my life. Maybe that had something to do with it."

Of the many Krebs in the Jackson County area, most are some progeny of Joe Krebs, being one of his seven children, 28 grandchildren or seven or eight great-grandchildren. From a busy and full retirement, he looks back on a busy life.

No spring chicken

Joe Krebs helps fill his retirement years by making fishing nets b hand. In six and a half years he has finished 143 nets, and he the last touches on number 144. (Staff Photos by Jon A

Time-worn tombstones mark Pascagoula pioneers' home

By Regina Hines
Jackson County
Bureau Chief

Several generations of Pascagoula's pioneer family, the Krebs, have been born and buried at the site of what is now called Old Spanish Fort.

Their ancient family cemetery to the north of the only remaining building of this original settlement, is a mingling of both past and present.

The time-weathered tombstones, some barely legible, date as early as 1813, contrasting to the shiny marble newness of those erected in our present day.

The name Old Spanish Fort, misleading in determining the origin of its first owners, was orginally built by the French Admiral Joseph Simon de la Pointe to protect the land holdings of his sister, Duchess deChaumont, a favorite in the court of Louis XIV.

The fortress and its several out buildings on peaceful Lake Krebs were completed in 1718, but were destroyed over the years. The only remaining building, a carpentry shop, which has also been used as a residence by later Krebs generations, is now a museum leased from Jackson County board of supervisors.

The progenitor of the Krebs family, Baron Hugo Ernestus von Krebs, born in Newmagen, Germany in 1714, married the daughter of Admiral de la Pointe, Marie Josephine, after he arrived in Pascagoula in the early 1730's.

Eight children were probably born of this marriage and six of his marriage to Marie Chauvin de Joyeuse of New Orleans, following the death of Marie Josephine.

Graves of the first generation are not found in this cemetery. It is thought Marie Josephine Krebs was buried in the parish cemetery in Mobile after her death in 1751 and Baron von Krebs was buried in New Orleans, sometime between 1776 and 1778.

The earliest grave in the cemetery, which was neglected over a period of many years, is that of Marie Louise Dupont Krebs, wife of Joseph Krebs, oldest son of Baron von Krebs and Marie Josephine, who died in 1813.

Later graves, many of them unmarked, are those of the family of Carlos Rene, son of Joseph, and his wife Marie Dupont. Under the protecting limbs of an equally ancient oak and nestled in springtime among colorful azaleas, the old tombs with their French inscriptions can tell many stories.

Evident is the high infant mortality rate of colonial days. One very long grave tells in French that there lies the seven children of Rene and Marie Krebs "touse decedes en bas age," all deceased in infancy. Other graves near that of Rene and Marie indicate they had other children who lived to maturity.

Here is also buried Cecil Krebs Johnson, great-granddaughter of Joseph Krebs, last owner and occupant of the fort's last building, who died in 1915.

The old tombs, built of handmade brick, using the traditional head and foot markers, were crumbling and overgrown with weeds and foliage in recent years, according to Mrs. Henry Gautier, museum director.

In 1967, however, a descendent of Louis Augustin Krebs (son of Hugo and Marie Josephine Krebs), J.E. Krebs of Pascagoula, and his wife, Rita, became interested in restoring the old marker and refurbishing the grave sites.

Krebs worked untiringly rebuilding the brick tombs, piecing together broken markers, and planting and clearing away from around the old graves, Mrs. Gautier said. His work came to an end last spring with his untimely death in a truck-train accident.

Mrs. Gautier noted that recently the board of supervisors had erected a high fence around the cemetery and gates which provided only walking access to protect the area.

Plans are being made to erect a wrought iron gate at the cemetery's entrance in keeping with its French atmosphere. It is Mrs. Gautier's hope that this quiet spot, rich in information on the founding families of Pascagoula, will one day be recognized by the National Register, as part of Old Spanish Fort, for its historical importance.

JACKSON COUNTY OUTSTANDING CITIZENS AWARD

RECOMMENDATION FORM

Name of Nominee: MRS. J. E. KREBS, NEE RITA GENTILE

NAME OF SPONSOR: THE JACKSON COUNTY GENEALOGY SOCIETY

Please use the space below to tell why your organization has recommended this nominee.

Lest we forget:

During the past ten years or more, one member of the Jackson County Genealogy Society, Mrs. J. E. Krebs, nee Rita Gentile, with her husband, Mr. J. E. Krebs made headstones with inscriptions, and placed them in the historic Krebs Cemetery for the deceased members of the Krebs families buried there since 1718, and whose tombs deterioated, and for many whose graves were destroyed.

Mrs. J. E. Krebs has researched, compiled, and published with the help of the Genealogy Society's members, THREE JACKSON COUNTY CEMETERY BOOKS. Her FOURTH book will be published this year.

Mrs. Krebs researched and catalogued over 100 old land marks dating from 1718 to 1870 in Jackson County.

Mrs. Krebs has made several hundred photostats of important Jackson County records, and tables of the oldest Jackson County Families since 1718, for the archives departments of our Jackson County Libraries.

Pas man runs gamut

By JAMES STEVENS
President Mississippi Coast Historical and Genealogical Society

Among the more than 64 Pascagoula men who lined up Oct. 2, 1861, in that Mississippi coast town were sworn into the Confederate Army was one Pvt. Joseph H. Krebs. Known as "Twigg's Rifles" in honor of Maj. Gen. (USA and CSA) David E. Twiggs who had a home in Pascagoula, the company under Capt. Hiram Bruno Griffin remained five months through the winter guarding the eastern end of the coast. Mississippi Sound was blockaded by a strong U. S. Naval force and on Dec. 4, 1861, 1,991 Union soldiers, the first to invade the state, were landed at Ship Island.

Many naval clashes occurred in the sound with the USS New London having spectacular success in capturing the trading vessels operating between Mobile and New Orleans. Pascagoula was an important lumber and turpentine shipping port at the mouth of the Pascagoula River as well as a popular resort for city people. With Mobile or New Orleans considered the main point of attack by the Federal Navy and Army, Pascagoula guarded the land route and a force there protected western approaches to Mobile.

Alarms were many with patrols protecting against Union launches making landings to get water, seize cattle, help escaping slaves, steal fishing boats, etc. One member of Twiggs' Rifles was captured two months after on Nov. 28, 1861, and held as a prisoner of war 10 months until exchanged Sept. 25, 1862. This was Pvt. John M. McInnis, later to be elected 2nd lieutenant.

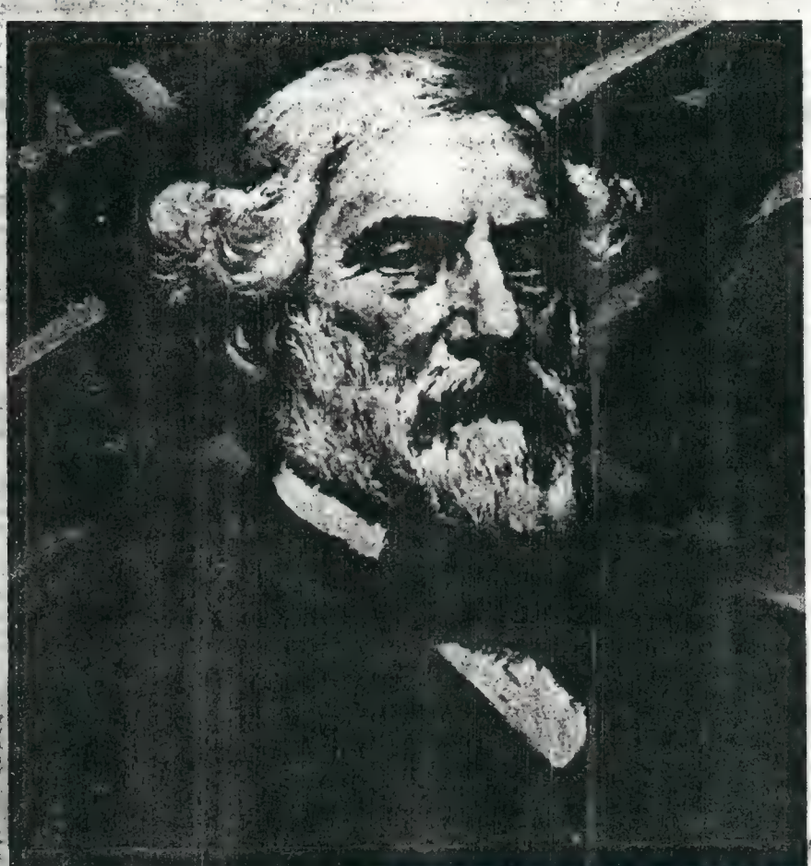
Abandonment of Ship Island by Confederate forces Sept. 16, 1861, had led to use of its harbor by increasing numbers of northern ships. Small coastal merchant steamers would run through the sound at night delivering supplies and goods to the villages on the coast and, under convoy, carrying men and war materials between Mobile and New Orleans. Daring Confederates landed on Ship Island to report on military activities there. Biloxi was raided Dec. 31, 1861, by a Federal naval force of three small ships carrying 100 men plus 45 Marines and two armed launches. Amid great excitement by courier and signal, word was spread all along the shore of this raid and everyone with a shotgun was asked to go to the beaches prepared to fight off any other invasions.

When the northern ships returned to Ship Island and in the weeks following no further aggressive action was taken by the growing military there, fears quieted and distant political decisions were made, asking for coast defenders to go inland to stop northern armies attacking from Kentucky.

Many Mississippi companies had been hurried to Pensacola early in 1861 when war broke out. Finally in January 1862, a regiment was authorized by President Jefferson Davis to be organized there at Pensacola composed of Mississippians and numbered about 27. It was formed by Col. Thomas Marshall Jones (West Point 1853 and ex-1st lieutenant U. S. Army) consisting of 10 companies from Oktibbeha, Jones, Lincoln, Leake, Covington, Perry, Lauderdale, and Monroe counties and lastly the "Twiggs Rifle Company" from Jackson County. This, now Company L, 27th Mississippi Regiment Infantry, had gone to Fowl River, Cedar Point, protecting the land area nearest Grant's Pass connecting Mobile Bay with the Mississippi Sound.

From Feb. 24, 1862, when they left their families and neighbors to go to the Mobile Bay region, began three years of travel, fighting and camp life. That summer they moved to Chattanooga, marching through the middle of that state into Kentucky to fight September 16 and capture Munfordville. Three weeks later at Perryville, Company L had its first casualties while driving the Yankees back a mile.

General Bragg moved his army back through east Tennessee to Chattanooga but returned in December where the 28th Company L stationed in a brigade line of battle was in a dense cedar forest. For two days there was skirmishing with the Federals and on the 31st the brigade attacked. The 27th Regiment was immediately swept



Confederate general

A native Virginian, Robert E. Lee resigned from the United States Army when his home state seceded from the union on April 20, 1861. On April 23 he assumed command of the military and naval forces of Virginia. He then became a military adviser to President Jefferson Davis and was made a general. Although the cause he championed was lost, Lee was the greatest general in the war. His military genius hampered though it was by lack of men and material, was a principal factor in keeping the Confederacy alive. After the war Lee became president of Washington College (now Washington and Lee University). Painting of Lee was done by William Smith and is a part of the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Co.'s historical art exhibition "Faces of Freedom."

of troubles during war

by a heavy artillery fire but "as often as their ranks were shattered and broken by grape and canister did they rally, reform and renew the attack . . . They were ordered to take the batteries at all hazards and they obeyed the order." One entire company of Federal sharpshooters posted in a log house near the battery was captured. Among the casualties here was Pvt. Joseph H. Krebs, who while advancing through a cornfield in this Murfreesboro fight, was shot in the shoulder. On Jan. 1, 1863, he was put in a hospital.

During October after Perryville they had marched through a heavy snowstorm. They had only their Gulf Coast clothes, which were of little protection nor did they have blankets. Now, after Murfreesboro, they had to march through a freezing rain in January to Shelbyville, Tenn., to go into winter quarters.

January 2 they fought again to protect their own artillery. This was after crossing the river and being recalled to go over the river the second time that day and go into immediate attack.

That spring they moved to Lewisburg, Tenn., where in a match drill of companies of Walthall's Brigade on May 25, 1863, Company L under command of Lt. William Welch took first honors. Most welcome to the men was the prize of 90 days' exemption from duty. Lieutenant Welch's big prize, however, was to come back at the end of the war as the only surviving officer.

Following their three months of rest, Company L on September 18 heroically fought at the Battle of Chickamauga. Part of their success was the 27th Regiment's capture of 400 United States regulars and a battery. Part of their trouble was being outflanked the next day by U. S. Gen. George Thomas, moving several miles and fighting on the Chattanooga Road Greatest defeat for Company L was in "the battle of the clouds" or on top of Lookout Mountain, where as most all tourists know, you can look right down into the city of Chattanooga. In this hard to understand fight they were in regiment line of battle when they were attacked with the enemy "seeming to force everything before them as though there was no resistance." After delivering two volleys, the defending line in front of them broke, and great numbers of Federal troops flanked them causing in Company L the wounding, capture and within a week the death of Lt. Samuel W. Johnson, death of Hugh Goff, capture of Capt. H. B. Griffin and Lt. John M. McInnis plus 16 men.

Those who were left fought the next day later in the evening of Nov. 25, 1863, at Missionary Ridge.

After a five-month winter so-called rest, the 27th Regiment began activity at Resca, Ga., in the over three months series of battles for Atlanta. There were by the end of July only 430 men left in the 27th and 24th Mississippi regiments.

Among the casualties in early September 1864, was when a cannonball struck Pvt. Joseph H. Krebs in the ower third of his right thigh. He was admitted September 3 to the Floyd House and Ocmulgee Hospital at Macon, Ga. This second wound, aside from being painful, made him lame and therefore of no use to an army where walking was a necessity, so onSeptember 10, he was given a "furlough" and advised to go home to Pascagoula if he could.

Travel at that time was most difficult throughout the South and warravaged or destroyed bridges, railroads, vehicles, animals, etc. For a wounded man, needing rest and care, it took months — four for Pvt. Joseph H. Krebs.

While he was slowly trying to go west and south to the Gulf, the remnants of Company L and the 27th Regiment went north to Resca once more and taking casualties (James Simmons killed) at Snake's Creep Gap on October 12, then to Florence, Ala., early in November; to the terrible slaughter at Franklin, Tenn., on November 30, where Brantley's Brigade was no stronger than a single regiment, yet in that night battle in the trenches lost 76 killed, 140 wounded, and 21 missing. On to Nashville they moved, repulsing a Federal attack December 15, but being forced to join in Gen. Hood's retreat out of Tennessee and to Tupelo, Miss., December 26 -- the first time Company L had been able to get even into this most northern section of their home state in almost three years. The men of Company L were given a 15-day furlough at Meridian to visit their homes in Jackson County.

At this time back home the Union Army was making an attack toward Mobile from Pascagoula and had reached Franklin Creek on the Alabama line.

Into the United States Army Field Hospital at East Pascagoula on Jan. 5, 1865, entered C.S.A. Pvt. Jospeh H. Krebs seeking needed medical treatment for the injured leg and was on their official records reported as "lame from an old wound." For fourther treatment he was sent as a "Prisoner of War to New Orleans by order of the Provost Marshal." Next entry reads that he was placed "in confinement on Ship Island."

So he had made the full circle from his early concern about Ship Island during the exciting day of 1861, his enlistment to defend the Coast and his home, marching through four states, fighting uncounted skirmishes and many battles, getting wounded twice, to his return to Ship Island as a prisoner of war for the last four months of the war between the states. His name was on a list to be transferred May 1, 1865, to Vicksburg for release but he undoubtedly came ashore at Biloxi or Mississippi City to reach Pascagoula.

His "Twiggs Rifles" Company L, 27th Mississippi Regiment Infantry, after their furlough went to Montgomery, Ala., on to Augusta, Ga., and then to North Carolina. The Feb. 28, 1865, muster roll showed one first lieutenant, two sergeants, and four privates present.

Company L was made a part of Company G of the 24th Mississippi Regiment which was surrendered April 26th, 1865, at Greensboro, N.C.

The entire commercial landings for Mississippi in 1975 was 308,502,000 pounds, worth about $15,220,000, according to the National Marine Fisheries. The record catch of 400,576,000 pounds occurred in 1971.

Some of the 458 free blacks living in Mississippi in 1820 were on the coast. These blacks had an uneasy freedom, however, for they were not allowed to have weapons or ammunition without a license, and they could not sell liquor to slaves. By 1822, free blacks were required to register and carry a certificate proving that they were free. By 1831, a black who could not obtain a license indicating his good character, had to leave the state.

Files filled with genealogies of old Jackson County families and historical notes are the jewels in the genealogy collection of the Pascagoula Public Library.

These files are growing daily as library staff and members of the Jackson County Genealogical Society add church and school histories and other interesting items frequently. An old document and photo file are some of the new additions. The impressive Mississippi area, containing many county histories, is also growing.

The varied book and census collection is enhanced with obituary indexes of local newspapers for the modern period. Microfilmed newspapers of the Moss Point-Pascagoula area spanning the past 100 years are found on the first floor.

Among the many quarterlies representing several Southern states, is a set of the New Orleans Genesis, from 1962 to the present time, donated recently by Mrs. Rita Krebs. Mrs. Krebs, a longtime officer of the Jackson County Genealogical Society, was one of the people who helped compile the family files years ago.

Indentical copies of the historical collection of former Moss Point city official F.W. "Bob" Cirlot are housed in the genealogy section of the Pascagoula Library and at the Moss Point Library. These volumes consist of clippings, pictures, writing and memorabilia gathered by Cirlot, an excellent picture of Jackson County's past.

The names of people in the area who can help with research are posted on the bulletin board in the section, which is located on the second floor of the beautiful new library and regional headquarters on Pascagoula Street. REUNION POLICY

Increasing interest in genealogy is probably the reason that more families have annual gatherings.

Due to our space shortage, this column does not use specific family reunions, such as the descendants of James Smith and Mary Jones, who lived in Laurel, Miss., in 1870. We will carry announcements of large meetings of family or surname associations, composed of people who are not necessarily descended from a specific couple, such as the Rose Association.

We will also run queries to help families find other members to have a reunion. For instance, if a group of great-grandchildren of James and Mary Smith do not know any other descendants to plan a reunion, we will run a query asking for other descendants to contact them.

News of reunions that we receive are given to the proper department of this newspaper.

QUAVE ANCESTORS

Mackie Quave of Channel 25, WOLO-TV in Columbia, S.C., is descended from the Cuevas family of Cat Island. His father was George M. Quave, but he knows little about his heritage. Hopefully one of the many Quave descendants on the coast, will write him. His business address is P.O. Box 4217, Columbia, S.C. 29240.

MIMS-SMITH-JARRATT

Mickey Paulk, 12500 John Williams Road, Pascagoula, Miss. 39567, is seeking descendants of Archaelaus Jarratt and Elizabeth Mims, daughter of David Mims and Agnes Weldy of Goochland County, Va.

Does anyone know whether a genealogy on this family that was being written by Mrs. Anne Mims Wright of Jackson when she died in 1936 was ever completed, or what happened to the manuscript, if it was not?

Mrs. Paulk wonders whether Thomas Mims of Flower-de-Hundred by the James River in Virginia was the immigrant ancestor of this same Mims family.

David Mims' parents were Thomas Mims Jr. and Pollyanna Martin, who wed in New Kent County, Va., in 1698/99.

Please send all correspondence to this column to Branches and Twigs, The Mississippi Press, P.O. Box 849, Pascagoula, MS 39567.

Discovered court documents tell of early history

By REGINA HINES
Mississippi Press Staff

SEPT. 25, 1987

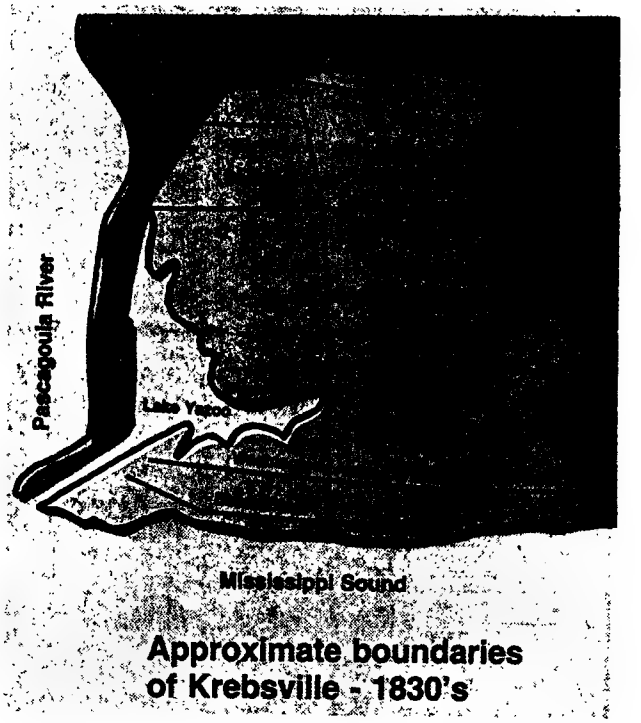
Much of Jackson County's early history went up in smoke during courthouse fires in the 1800s. But two thick files of court documents discovered in the custody of Harrison County officials, now answer many questions about Pascagoula's settling families.

In an unprecedented move, Harrison County Chancery Clerk G.N. Creel has given these original documents to the Vincent Ros Local History and Genealogy Department of the Pascagoula Public Library.

Copies are being made of the court cases for public research. The originals will be preserved and safeguarded, said Jane C. Bryan, library director.

Without the persistence of Betty Rodgers, an officer of the Jackson County Genealogical Society and former library employee, and Harrison County Deputy Tax Assesor and historian Nap L. Cassibry, the little-known files might have continued to languish in the Harrison County Courthouse as they have for more than 130 years.

Cassibry found them when he was abstracting old court documents for historical journal articles. He realized that the testimony in the cases — both land disputes among the heirs of two of Pascagoula's early families, Frederic and Krebs — contained invaluable information on ancestors of many people in present-day Pascagoula.



Approximate boundaries of Krebsville - 1830's

With Mrs. Rodgers' urging and assistance, Cassibry gained permission to have the documents donated for safekeeping to the library. Certified copies of the files are still being kept at the Harrison County Courthouse at Gulfport.

"This is history of Pascagoula and its people that heretofore has not existed," Cassibry said. The suits were filed in the mid and late 1840s, but supporting douments presented to the court are dated as early as 1829. Because of fires, insects and thefts, there are few original documents in the Jackson County Courthouse predating 1875.

The two court actions together tell the story of Krebsville, a town platted in present-day southwest Pascagoula by Hilaire Krebs, one of the grandsons of Hugo Ernestus Krebs, the progenitor of all the Krebs and related families in Pascagoula.

The suits take place after the deaths of Hilaire Krebs and Louis A. Frederic, a Frenchman who migrated first to Demopolis, Ala., then to Jackson County. There he married Emilie, the daughter of Valentine Delmas. Frederic was possibly the only man in the area who could read and write well enough to handle paperwork. He operated the first school and first post office from a home that stood at the western extremity of Delmas Avenue until the late 1970s. Most of the people of village depended on him to write documents and read for them and some were afraid of him because of the power he held over them.

The heirs of Frederic maintained that Krebs promised their father a share of the profits and land for his help in platting Krebsville and assisting with the deeds and sales. They present a power of attorney authorized by Hilaire Krebs, which the court eventually finds is invalid. The testimony, in the form of written interrogatories, presents a fascinating plot and characters that would be a perfect television mini-series.

Frederic's role in the founding of Krebsville and whether Hilaire owed him money is the primary point in the first case is styled the Heirs of Fredericks (sic.) vs. the Heirs of Krebs. The second, styled the Heirs of Fredericks (sic.) vs. J. Baptiste and wife, was against Eugenie Krebs Baptiste, the daughter of Antoine Krebs and his wife and first cousin, Bridgette, and Eugenie's husband, Jacob Baptiste. Antoine was Hilaire's brother.

In this complicated suit, the Frederic heirs seek to settle the ownership of the land of the late Antoine's estate. The underlying question is the eligibility of Eugenie's brother, Augustine Krebs to inherit Antoine's property.

The thick files contain the statements and signatures of such people as John Grant, whose two sons married into the Krebs family; surveyor Jacques Sarrazin, Ursin Raby, Thomas Rhodes, Celestine Dupont, Malcolm McRae, Josephine Delmas, Rene Krebs, Jean Baptist Baudreau IV, Elizabeth Hughes and Hilaire's widow, Irene Krebs, and others. They discuss names, dates, relationships and happenings in the small community.

PASCAGOULA HERITAGE — Betty Rodgers of the Jackson County Genealogical Society and Nap L. Cassibry of Gulfport look over the original Jackson County court files which have been donated to the Pascagoula Library. When the documents are copied, the copies will be available for research purposes.

Cassibry said the cases were kept in Harrison County, because the cases were heard by the Superior Chancery Court of South Mississippi, which convened in the old courthouse in Mississippi City. During the 1840s, court cases of this nature were heard either in Mississippi City, or in Paulding, Jones County, he said. When the county seat was moved to Gulfport, the files were removed with the other records.

Rodgers said the copies will be placed in the future in the Vincent P. Ros Room as part of a growing collecting of documents being gathered to promote the study of local history.

A decision on how the originals will be preserved will be made in the future.

"They have come home to tell their story," said Cassibry. "Krebsville is (Pascagoula's) first known name. This was genesis. The place where it all began," he said.

Pascagoula river plantations in which he illustrates in some detail the plantation of the Sr. De la Pointe and the Chaumont Concession (see figure 17).[31] This drawing is somewhat earlier than the one of the Chouachas, for a notation on the back records that it "came with the letter of M. de La Chaise of the 30 October, 1726." The Krebs house at Pascagoula, already mentioned, is said to have been part of this De la Pointe plantation (see figure 18), but it is not readily identifiable from Dumont's sketch. It is significant that in both the properties illustrated here, two-storied, galleried buildings are shown as had been shown in the 1719 sketch of Dauphin Island whereas such buildings did not at first appear in New Orleans.

In New Orleans, building techniques advanced through the various forms of wood construction to half-timbered structures with brick-between-posts. Not until 1730, when Pierre Baron built a new prison on the Place d'Armes was the first all-brick building constructed.[32]

This was followed in 1732 by great brick barracks buildings flanking the public square[33] and other private houses of brick. The heavy weight of these all-masonry structures presented structural difficulties and eventually buildings with a first story of brick and the upper one of brick-between-posts came to be favored.

One of the most significant structures of brick-between-posts was the large, three-story convent built for the Ursuline Nuns when they arrived in the colony in 1727 (See figure 19).[34] Ignace François Broutin, who had become acting engineer-of-the-King after Pauger's death in 1726, designed the building; Pierre Baron re-designed it in his own favorite style, where the handsome timber framing of the brick-between-posts construction was left exposed as a picturesque decorative element. Impractical in the damp climate, the convent soon deteriorated and had to be replaced by a new building. Broutin designed this new all brick building in 1745; Bernard Deverges, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana after Broutin's death in 1751, completed it in 1752. This impressive, dignified, Louis XV style building still stands, the only known building surviving intact from the French colonial period (see figure 20). Inside, the great cypress staircase, constructed of heavy timbers with decorative carvings of acanthus leaves and its wrought iron handrail, was reused from the earlier convent of 1727-1734 (see figure 21). This is perhaps the earliest artifact of French colonial production in Louisiana.[35] The lead

Five Generations Mourn Passing Of Mrs. Moore

Mrs. Corrine Krebs Moore, 90, died Sunday at her residence on S. Pascagoula street where she made her home with her son Rex Moore and daughter Miss Eva Moore.

Mrs. Moore had been confined to her home for several years from the effects of a broken hip and to her bed for the past year following an attack of flu.

A native and lifelong resident of Pascagoula, she is believed to have been the oldest living native of the city. The daughter of H. M. Krebs and Louise Raby Krebs, she was born June 17, 1861.

In 1878 she married William Council Moore of Pascagoula and they were the parents of 11 children, seven of whom survive. All live within the city.

Survivors are two daughters, Mrs. Edna Moore Krebs and Miss Eva Moore; five sons, W. C. Moore, H. B., F. W., Ernest D., and Rex A.; 32 grandchildren; 38 great grandchildren and one great-great granddaughter.

At Easter time a picture was taken of Mrs. Moore and four generations of her descendants, all girls.

Rosary was said by Msgr. P. J. Carey at Fails Chapel Sunday evening and funeral services were held at Our Lady of Victories church Monday with requiem mass by Father Carey. Interment was in Machpelah cemetery.

Pall bearers, all of whom were grandsons, were F. Bernard Torries, H. B. Moore, Jr., J. A. Moore, G. F. Moore, E. M. Kohls and Francis Krebs.

Out-of-town relatives attending were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Chamblis and Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Goodman, of Mobile; Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Goff, Augusta, Ga.; Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Krebs, Childersburg, Ala.; C. B. Krebs, Bogalusa; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Torricelli, Biloxi; Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Walker, New Orleans, and Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Delmas, Hattiesburg.

AMOUNT OF INSURANCE

Mr. Joseph C. Krebs,
431 Porter Ave.,
Pascagoula, Miss.

March 30, 1929.

You are hereby notified that the Supreme Lodge of Liberty Life Assurance Society at its meeting on March 29th and 30th acted favorably upon the proposal submitted to it by the Board of Directors and voted to convert the Society into an old line stock life insurance company. The enclosed clipping from the January-February-March issue of The Record explains this proposal in detail and also contains a copy of the Alabama law under which the conversion will be made.

The name by which the Society is now known does not properly describe an old line life insurance company and the Supreme Lodge changed the name to Liberty National Life Insurance Company. The Company will be a continuation of the Society and the rights of the present members will not be affected by the change. The Company will continue to issue the Perfection Endowment certificate and the positions of those members holding this form of certificate will not be disturbed in any way.

Under the Alabama law the right to subscribe to the capital stock is reserved exclusively to the members for a period of ninety days, each member being entitled to subscribe to that proportion of the capital stock which his or her insurance bears to the total amount of insurance in force. Under the Resolution of the Supreme Lodge a sufficient amount of capital stock was authorized to provide for one share of stock for each $500.00 insurance in force.

The amount of your insurance is shown above and this regulates the amount of stock set aside exclusively for you. For example: If you hold $1000.00 insurance you are entitled to two shares of stock; if you hold $2500.00 insurance you are entitled to five shares of stock. The par value of each share is $5.00, but as the law requires that a surplus be paid in, the stock is to be sold for $7.50 per share, thus creating a surplus of fifty per centum of the capital. The capital and surplus will go into the treasury of the Company and there will be no promotion expense.

Any member wishing to exercise this option should detach the Stock Purchase Warrant appearing below, fill it in and return it to the Society with remittance for the amount of his allotment at the rate of $7.50 per share. This must be done prior to July 1st, 1929. All checks are to be made payable to Southern Bank and Trust Company, Trustee, and payments will be held by the Bank until the conversion has been completed.

It is the wish of the Supreme Lodge that in so far as possible the stock may be owned by the present members of the Society. Any member who fails to exercise this exclusive right within ninety days will forfeit all right to purchase stock, and the Board of Directors will sell such stock at the price named above. Whether or not any member subscribes to the stock of the Company will in no way affect his rights under his certificates of insurance.

Fraternally yours,

Attest:

President.

Frank P. Samford
Secretary.

INTERIM CERTIFICATE AND BINDING RECEIPT

This INTERIM CERTIFICATE, issued to Joseph G. Krebs, pending the delivery of a Permanent Certificate or Certificates.

Witnesseth: That the above member has made application to exchange his Certificate or Certificates No. 72854 for an American Experience Division Perfection Endowment Certificate(s) for $ 500, effective April 1-1928

It is understood and agreed that the certificate applied for provides for the following benefits:

1. Payment of the full amount of insurance in the event of death. By specified direction of the above named member, the death benefit under this certificate will be paid
   (a) according to Installment Option No. ——
   (b) in one lump sum.
2. Cash Surrender Values after two years.
3. Cash Loan Values after two years.
4. Paid-Up Insurance Values after two years.
5. Extended Insurance Values after two years.
6. Participation in all surplus in excess of Legal and Contingent Reserves.
7. Payment of twice the face of the certificate, or (if the member has elected double indemnity) triple the face of the certificate, if death results from specific travel accident.
   (Provided member pays the extra dues therefor and application for disability and double indemnity is approved the certificate will provide for:
8. Regular Total and Permanent Disability benefit as embodied in Certificate.
9. Payment of twice the face of the certificate if death results from accident.
10. If the certificate applied for is a Perfection Endowment Certificate, it will have the same position in its class and division as the certificate surrendered held at the time of the surrender, and shall provide for maturity as a Contingent Endowment when it becomes the oldest certificate in its group and a death occurs therein.

CHRONIK VON

Die Winzergemeinde Neumagen (126 m ü. M.), dem römischen Noviomagus, im Kreis Bernkastel (Rheinland-Pfalz), ist eine alte Siedlung und ihre Geschichte ist in zahlreichen Urkunden bis ins Altertum zu verfolgen. Kaiser Konstantin der Große gründete hier um 300 n. Chr. ein Kastell mit 14 Türmen, dessen Umfang sich heute noch im Straßenzug verfolgen läßt. Es sind auch noch Stücke der römischen Mauer zu sehen. Auf den Resten der röm. Burg siedelte sich das Geschlecht derer von Neumagen an. Wirico von N. baute eine neue Kirche, die am 19. Oktober 1190 eingeweiht wurde. Eine berühmte Sehenswürdigkeit ist die von Erzbischof Beomund von Warsberg (1286–1299) erbaute Kirche mit sehenswertem gotischem Chörchen. In der Umgebung bilden die Ausoniushöhe, der Tempelkopf und der Wallfahrtsort Eberhardsklausen mit der sehenswerten gotischen Kirche einen starken Anziehungspunkt.

Neumagen-Dhron an der Mosel

von Heinz Cüppers

In der Reihe der Moselorte, die durch wohlklingende Namen bester Weinlagen bekannt sind, nimmt Neumagen insofern eine Sonderstellung ein, als die Örtlichkeit sich rühmen kann, bereits unter Kaiser Konstantin dem Großen zu einer wehrhaften Befestigung an der Mosel ausgebaut worden zu sein. Für den Altertums- und Geschichtsfreund aber verbindet sich mit Neumagen schen Pergamon einbrachte. In den Jahren 1877 bis 1885, auch noch in den folgenden Jahren bis 1967 wurden aus den Fundamenten einer vermeintlich mittelalterlichen, tatsächlich aber schon in konstantinischer Zeit errichteten Befestigungsmauer und aus zahlreichen Häusern der mittelalterlichen Ansiedlung dieser einmalige Schatz geborgen. Wenn auch die wertvollen Häusern und Gartenmauern eingelassene Fra mente und die an mehreren Stellen aufgericl teten Kunststeinabgüsse von dem hohen Alt dieses Moselortes, dessen Reiz auch darin besteh daß das mittelalterliche Ortsbild im Kern d Siedlung noch mit vielen alten Hausfassaden, d Pfarrkirche und der Peterskapelle, mit roma tisch verwinkelten Straßen und Gassen dem B sucher und Kunstfreund reizvolle Anblicke da bietet.

Chronik von Neumagen Mosel

Deutschlands ältester Weinort

Die Winzergemeinde Neumagen (126 m ü. M.), dem römischen Noviomagus, im Kreis Bernkastel (Rheinland-Pfalz), ist eine alte Siedlung und ihre Geschichte ist in zahlreichen Urkunden bis ins Altertum zu verfolgen. Kaiser Konstantin der Große gründete hier um 300 n. Chr. ein Kastell mit 14 Türmen, dessen Umfang sich heute noch im Straßenzug verfolgen läßt. Es sind auch noch Stücke der römischen Mauer zu sehen. Auf den Resten der röm. Burg siedelte sich das Geschlecht derer von Neumagen an. Wirico von N. baute eine neue Kirche, die am 19. Oktober 1190 eingeweiht wurde. Eine berühmte Sehenswürdigkeit ist die von Erzbischof Beomund von Warsberg (1286–1299) erbaute Kirche mit sehenswertem gotischem Chörchen. In der Umgebung bilden die Ausoniushöhe, der Tempelkopf und der Wallfahrtsort Eberhardsklausen mit der sehenswerten gotischen Kirche einen starken Anziehungspunkt.

The outline of the house is still original as well as the small windows above. Above the bricked up side front door there is carved in stone the name of the builder 'Johannes Thommel' and the year 1618. Our house is regarded by the government as an'ancient monument'.
We enclose a photo and a negative of the house 'Römerstraße 92'. We are astonished about your great interest of searching the Krebs families over a period of centuries.
Would it not be possible that you or/and some other members of your family visit the country of your ancestors. In Neumagen there are some nice hotels where you can stay comfortably. We should take care for showing you the sights of the beautiful Mosella valley. The oceans nowadays are no longer any obstacles. You are heartily welcome.

Yours sincerely,

5th June, 1975

Dear Mrs. Krebs,

We, the occupants of the house Römerstr. 92, Neumagen, have received your letter some weeks ago. Would you, please, excuse that you had to wait for an answer so long. We are wine-growers and owners of a firm. So it has not been possible for us till now to make inquiries about your ancestors and probably even the ours.
This house built in 1618 by Johannes Thommel is inhabited by a Krebs family to this very day. That's we - Paul Krebs, Elisabeth Krebs, his wife, his son Bernhard and his daughter Marita Krebs.
It has been proved that our house is the family house of all Krebs families in Neumagen. At present there are about twenty families with the name 'Krebs' in Neumagen, whose ancestors originate in this house.
I adressed to our pastor, Rev.Mr. Friedrich to get birth and death documents of our ancestors. I heard from him that there is a record-officein Trier where you can find very ancient birth and death documents.
We'll try to visit these archives as soon as possible and- if(possible(- we'll inform you. It will be difficult to find real estate documents about our house because it is nearly 360 years old.

A burgher of Neumagen, Mr.Heinrich Milz, an assistant master, - died ten years ago - had pursued family research. His books and all his documents had been sent to the University of Saarbrücken (Saar). There is the possibility to find out further details about the Krebs Family.

This master often told us our house was the oldest house of Neumagen and the family house of all the Krebs families. Consequently over many generations backwards there must have been a male heir the constant owner of the house.

Old cotton gin to get new civil rights marker

▸ Family has transformed the building into a popular eatery

By ERNEST HERNDON
McComb Enterprise-Journal

LIBERTY, Miss. — The veil will come off a new state historical marker on Nov. 27 commemorating a 1961 civil rights-era slaying at an old cotton gin. The marker outside what is now the Cotton Gin Restaurant will cite the death of voting rights activist Herbert Lee.

"Herbert Lee, a 42-year-old dairy farmer in the Amite County area, became a member of the NAACP in the early 1950s," the inscription will read. "In the fall of 1961, Lee began transporting voting rights activists within the Pike and Amite County area. On Sept. 25, 1961, Herbert Lee was shot and killed while at the local cotton gin."

The building, formerly known as the old Westbrook Gin, is located on Mississippi Highway 584 in Liberty. It was built around 1909.

The idea for a state marker came up in September when the Mississippi Historic Preservation Professional Review Board nominated the gin to the National Register of Historic Places.

"When the gin went up for a national historical site, they asked what happened there," said owner Johnnie Powell. "That was history happened here when he was murdered. When they approved the gin for a historical site, one of the members said we should do something for Mr. Lee."

Powell hasn't received approval yet on the national designation, but she got the go-ahead on the state marker. There were no funds available from the state, however, so she paid $1,790 for the sign herself.

Scheduled at the dedication ceremony is a welcome from Mayor Ricky Stratton and words from a chamber of commerce official, local historian James Allen Causey, Amite County Chancery Clerk Ronny Taylor, children of Lee, and Mary Williams, who was working in a nearby cafe on the day of the shooting.

Lee is survived by a wife, Prince, and eight children, Wilma Lee, Irma Jean, Shirley, Ruby, Roy, Ray, Frank and Herbert Jr. All are expected to attend.

The marker will go on the southwest corner of the restaurant property.

"He was murdered outside by the road," Powell said.

Lee was reportedly shot dead by the late E.H. Hurst, a member of the Mississippi Legislature. Hurst claimed self-defense and was not prosecuted.

Hurst is not mentioned on the marker.

"You can't do anything about what happened," Powell said. "Look where we are now. You have to forgive."

Powell, 71, acknowledged the irony that a cotton gin where a civil rights-era killing took place is now a popular restaurant owned by an African-American family and frequented by whites and blacks.

"I remember the time when black people couldn't walk the street in the daytime in Liberty. Now I own a business," she said.

She recalls when black people couldn't enter a restaurant. Now she owns one. When they couldn't buy a Coca-Cola. Now she sells them. When they couldn't use a public restroom. Now her restrooms and restaurant are open to people of any race.

Powell said she doesn't want to ruffle feathers with the marker, just recognize what occurred.

"That was a terrible day," she said. "But look at us now."

The Powell family bought the property — which housed Avesco oilfield equipment manufacturer for a short time in the early 1980s — in the mid-1980s.

During the Amite County Bicentennial in spring 2009, the gin hosted a civil rights memorial program attended by 150 people, black and white, including members of Herbert Lee's family.

The Powells converted the old gin into a restaurant a year ago. It specializes in down-home Southern cooking. Family members working there include children Tyrone, Lloyd and wife Julia and their children Lisa and Marie, Emanuel Jr., Ricky and Joye and husband Allen Causey.

"The main idea of turning it into a restaurant was (son) Ricky's idea," said Mrs. Powell, who's planning a bed and breakfast next door. "We had it in our hands. It was sitting here doing nothing. So take it and do something with it. It provides a job for all my family. All my children work here."

On March 30, 1457, the cardinal Cusanus wrote a letter from Brixen (the town where he was bishop) to the administrators of Bernktstel-Kues, telling them about his plans to build up a hospital under the name of St. Nicholas, the Holy Bishop .By that time, the house had already been completed. The hospital itself with the exception of the chapel had been finished by May 1, 1453. The main act of foundation with the hospital rules, saying that the house should give accommodation and support to 33 (which is Christ's lifetime) needy men aged over 50 years (among them 6 clergymen and 6 noblemen) dates from December 3, 1458.

Church and churchyard could not be consecrated before the cardinal's death. Most probably, this consecration took place on July 22, 1465; after this date, the first prebendaries were taken in. (The costs for the whole building were 10.000 Rheinische Goldgulden). The architect is unknown. Supervisor of the building was the canon Theoderich von Xanten, who later became the first headmaster.

Essentially, the hospital has been preserved as it was built up in the 15th century. Not before 300 years later, headmaster Stephanus Schoenes, living with full heart in Baroque and Rococo, had some additional building up made. In the years from 1748 to 1778 the front to the yard was given a wonderful portal made of Risalit; especially, Schoenes constructed the Baroque aisle to the Moselle. In it, we find in the first floor a beautiful convention hall and summer dining room for the ecclesiastical prebendaries, in the upper floor a new headmaster's dwelling with rooms for quests. This expensive reconstruction and additional building were probably supervised by the court architect from Treves, Johann Georg Seiz.

Both parts of the building, the Gothic main part and the Baroque Moselle aisle, are harmonized with each other very fine. The older Gothic part stands out for the „bold conception and clearness of the disposition and the beauty in its rooms, as well as for the solicitude in its Late Gotic in the country around the Moselle" (Hans details; it is the widest homogeneous building of the Vogts). This old part, with a somewhat heavy impression, through the Baroque front to the Moselle gets a pleasing supplement and contrast which give the whole body of the building a brighter „sound".

INTRODUCTION

We are here in the CUSANUS-STIFT, a foundation of the famous scholar, bishop and cardinal NIKOLAUS KREBS. He was born in 1401 in Kues as a son of a wealthy Moselleboatsman and vine-dresser. He died in 1464 in TODI/ITALY.

According to his birthplace here in Kues he has been called CUSANUS or DER CUSANER (= The man from Kues), corresponding to the usage in the scholary world at that time.

The sign of the crawfish (= KREBS) on many of the coast of arms, keystones and articles for daily use here in this house shall be a steady remembrance of his true surname.

As an all-round scholar (jurist, theologian, philosopher, astronomer, mathematician, scientist, medical man, ecclesiastical politician and promoter of the oecumenical idea) he was in his time the most outstanding man of mind in Germany (and in the whole area around the Moselle).

SIGHTSEEING

The building which was built up in the years from 1451 to 1458 as a home for 33 old men (33 was Jesus Christ's lifetime) is still in its original form, Thus it is - together with the chapel - the biggest still preserved Gothic construction on the Moselle. Through 500 years not alienated from its original purpose, it is the home for old men with the longest tradition in Germany. (Every old man has his own room).

The CLOISTER in an exellent manner connects unity and mulitplicity (whose relationship was one of Cusanus' main philosophical topics). The different forms of vaults in the four passages of the cloister combine as harmoniously as do the different numbers of windows (4 - 5 - 6 - 7) and the constantly changing traceries for the representation of Cusanus' „CONCORDANTIA CATHOLICA" (Catholic Concordance).

The big PAINTINGS along the WAY TO THE CHAPEL are of the year 1775. They show the sense of the foundation in the acts of charity (to feed the hungry, to give the thursty to drink, to dress the naked, to free the imprisoned, to shelter the stranger, to visit the sick persons, to bury the dead). The persons shown are inhabitants of the hospital and citizens of BERNKASTEL-KUES of that time.

The CHAPEL is a precious stone of Late-Gothic architecture. The room for the believers has the form of a cube - a picture for the new Jerusalem in JOHN'S REVELATION.

The COLUMN IN THE MIDDLE - for the first time built in that way in the Rhineland - is a sign for Christ as center and support of the city of peace. Eight-cornered in the shaft, it splits up without capital to twelve groins-symbol for the apostles.

The KEYSTONES in the vaults are in the two squares at the back commemorative stones for Cusanus' brother Johannes (crawfish) and his sister Klara (portrait of the Holy Klara); in the front squares for himself (crawfish with the cardinal's hat and the Easter lamm - which is the coat of arms of his cathedral town Brixen - with the miter). Inbetween, we find the coat of arms of that time's sovereign, Arch Bishop Jacob von Sierck (died in 1456).

In the ALTAR ROOM, the keystones show the Pope's coat of arms (key with papal tiara), St. Nicholas (protector of the house), St. Peter with keys and chains (as a hint towards his title and burial church St. Pietro in Vincoli in Rome), the Holy Virgin and, just above the altar, the head of Christ.

Under the MEMORIAL SLAB in the chancel (a donation by his secretary, Peter Wimer von Erkelenz, of the year 1488), the HEART OF CUSANUS was buried in a lead box. The mulit-partite brass-slab is a true copy of the marble-slab which covered his tomb in St. Pietro in Vincoli in Rome. It shows Cusanus' head with the miter, and on the right and left the crawfish with the cardinal's hat.

The epigraph beneath the picture says „Dilexit deum - timuit et veneratus est - ac illi soli servivit" : „He loved God, feared and venerated him - and served him only".

The precious ALTAR PICTURE is a donation of Cusanus of the year 1460 - a work by the „Meister des Marienlebens" of a Colognian school. Beneath the Cross, Cusanus as the donor kneels down, behind him his brother Johannes. The picture shows the crowning with the Crown of Thorns, Christ's death on the Cross and the entombment - with the home landscape as background.

The CHOIR STALLS and the SIDE ALTARS date from the Baroque period. The windows behind the altar are of the year 1952, being substitutes for the ones destroyed in March 1945, when the bridge across the Moselle was blown up.

They show in the center Christ the King; on the left the legendary Holy Bishop Nicholas. In the right window we see in the upper half the cardinal Nikolaus Cusanus as the protector of his foundation, and in the panes in the lower half on the left side the scholar, on the right side the diplomate before Constantinopel; then his decoration with the miter, at last a sketch of his tomb in Rome.

Before we leave the chapel, we should have a look at the TOMB OF CUSANUS' SISTER, Klara Krebs. It is an extraordinarily fine and living picture of a young woman. - The great FRESCO on the right side dates from around 1460. It shows Jesus Christ with the Madonna and John the Baptist, and the apostles at his feet. In the lower middle, we see the rising from the dead: on the left, the blessed as individuals on their way to Heaven; on the right the crowd of dammed being pushed down to hell.

Numberings on reverse of postcard.

1. Nicholas of Kusa - painting from the Chapel at Nicholas Hospital - said to be colateral ancestor of Hugo Ernestus Krebs (attributed to Krebs scholar, Master Milz, whose papers are now deposited at Trier archives.)

3. Interior of Nicholas' library. Note portriat on wall and globes, astrological instruments etc. on shelf below. This room is behind Gothic windows adjacent to chapel, second level.

4. Another view of the Library.

5. The Castle (Burg Eltz) at Cochem on the Mosel. Hugo Ernestus Krebs could hardly have been born here since the castle was destroyed during the "Orleans War" (1689) and not rebuilt until the 19th century, when it was restored in 14th century style, accounting for the many turrets and pinnacles.

6. Trittenheim on the Mosel. Birthplace of Anna Charitas Fritsch, wife of Hugo Ernestus' Krebs' father, Johan Krebs, and mother of Hugo.

7. Vineyard Chapel at Trittenheim. This is a fairly new Chapel and probably not in existance during Anna Charitas' day.

8. Cathedral at Trier.

Bernkastel-Kues
A Town and its Story

The earliest traces of human settlement in the Mosel valley were left behind by a Stone Age clan some 6,000 years ago. Celts moved in, c. 500 B. C. They mined iron in the Eifel, and their waggons, on the way south, crossed the Mosel at the Kueser Werth, where there was a ferryman in residence. Traders set up in business as well: first of all Celts, then Romans and, finally, Franks. About A. D. 650, the site was royal property. In 993, it was held in feudal tenure by Adalbero of Luxemburg. He built a castle here, naming it after his heraldic animal, the bear. "Barenkastel" gave way to "Bernkastel" or, colloquially, "Bärekessel". Here grew a township wing in 1017 by building a new castle and which a successor took over in 1280 and gave a town charter in 1291. This forced Bernkastel to build a town wall, c. 1300. It was only after 1350 that work was started on the High Gothic PARISH CHURCH OF ST. MICHAEL, which was later enlarged and embellished. The town enjoyed its heyday c. 1600. Its water supply came from the artistic MARKET WELL, 1606. The TOWN HALL, 1608, is still surrounded by splendid old half-timbered houses of that period. Particularly worth mentioning is the SPITZHÄUSCHEN, 1583. The Thirty Years' War spared Bernkastel, but the castle was destroyed by fire in 1692, and the French used the town wall as a quarry for the construction of their Montroyal fortress. A half millennium of spiritual rule ended without further losses in 1794. Bernkastel became French, then Prussian in 1815. The new masters promoted local wine-growing and improved the roads. Kues was then joined to the Koblenz-Trier railway line and united with Bernkastel in 1905. The link is by the first road bridge over the Mosel outside of Koblenz and Trier. The wine trade as basis of its prosperity was joined by tourism, and hotel buildings now line Bernkastel's riverfront. Behind them, the charm of the town centre is preserved as by a magic hedge. Having sustained only slight damage from the bombs of the last War, there has been little incentive to modernize the historic town. Kues, situated on the Mosel's left bank and first mentioned in 1057, grew in an age-old area of settlement. A Neolithic village was excavated here in 1962. In the Middle Ages, Kues attained fame and renown thanks to its wine-growers and experienced river boatmen. The housing shortage after the Second World War gave Kues a boost, since the only sites for further building in Bernkastel-Kues are located on the left bank of the Mosel. The "Kueser Plateau" proved to be an ideal site for the MITTELMOSEL-KURKLINIKEN. Local government reform added further districts to the town, viz. the wine town of WEHLEN and the wine-growing village of ANDEL. The town received a further economic boost in 1964, when the canalization of the Mosel was completed. Since then, Bernkastel can be reached by ships of up to 1, 500 tons.

Round and about the Market Place

Early November, there is a rumbling of young wine in the barrels. Pearls rise in the cloudy must, the fermenting new wine (Federweisse). Vineyards not suitable for late vintages (Spätlesen) have been cleared. From the town's cellars emerges a delicate fragrance, not a perfume but a premonition of many an intoxication. The visitors have all gone, which is more the pity as this is a delightful time for sauntering through old, yet ever young Bernkastel with its narrow lanes, its picture-book market-place bathed at noon in the silver light of shortening days. This is the time to make your rounds in the heart of the town, starting from the town hall (Rathaus) on which the sun looks down with a glassy eye. Visibility is clouded by the dank autumnal haze rising from the banks of the Mosel. Subdued today are the bright colours that had enlivened in summer the richly carved wood of noble half-timbered houses. Michael's fountain has ceased splashing, and its wrought-iron Renaissance grille is now parched. No bar of music now issues from the Spitzhäuschen behind the town hall, not even the cry of some tipsy wine-drinker. The narrow-chested façade has ducked into the dark lane like a child escaping from a scolding adult. Church bells ring. The patter of feet in the alley precedes a young woman with a basket. She is in a hurry, since the forenoon – how come? – has simply flown. The square in front of the town hall is patiently awaiting visitors. They will be crowding each other in only a few weeks when the "Medieval Christmas Market" is opened. Then the scene regains its old colour, the dark green of the Christmas trees contrasting with the bright awnings over the stands and booths to make a festive tableau. Should the snow come too early, it smothers all but a few dabs of colour, though the picture will be brightened by the glittering, sparkling resplendence of many lights now reflected in the white coverlets on the projecting cornices, dormer windows and window sills. Even in the dark slush underfoot there is a gleam like that of diamonds lying in the mud.

How different the market place in the early morning of a summer day! When the traffic is still inanimate, the sky is bathed in a pristine blue, tiny clouds rouse themselves dreamily on the river meadows where they had spread overnight as ground haze. Geraniums wink from tubs and window-boxes, their brilliant red uttering a blast that awakes the merry colour of the half-timbered façades. The square gradually fills with people heading for work. Down from the hills comes the vanguard of the maelstrom, the cars of the early shift. The old houses placidly brave the storm. They were here first, have vested rights. You can feel it: they are proud, know they are worth looking at, one as much as the other. Archangel Michael on the market fountain (MARKTBRUNNEN) cannot take his eyes off the richest of them. He has been there since 1606. The Adler pharmacy is now seven storeys high if you count the attic under the roof-ridge. The three main storeys have three windows placed right over one another. The lowest roof floor likewise has three windows, but the side windows are narrower and move up a little closer to the middle window. The groundfloor, too, has one display window on each side of the door. The façade design is tightly organized, reflecting the strictness of Baroque architecture. Since nearly all houses in the town date from that period or later, we find the same pattern at every step in Bernkastel. What is different about the Adler is the odd movement affecting every white panel in the façade. Then there is the richly carved and colourful woodwork, which also lifts the structure out of the general run of its many well-preserved contemporaries and successors. Anyone who fancies making comparisons will find material enough in the intimate, festive market place. At right angles to the seven-storeyed patrician house, not cheek to cheek, but deliberately separated by a narrow space, is a six-storeyed half-timber building. It is not only slimmer in the façade, but is less ambitious as a climber than its neighbour. Still, it is not inferior in quality, and it, too, boasts colourful carving in its beams. The design is strictly symmetrical, is quieter and uncluttered. Its windows vary in height, width and arrangement, giving free rein to a playful fancy and sense of fun.

For a long time, the town hall (RATHAUS) was the only stone building in the line-up of residential and business houses, all half-timbered structures. Respect dictated the distance kept by the burghers' houses from the seat of authority. Not without reason. The groundfloor of the town hall was once an open arcade where the court used to meet in the open to hand down judgments of life and death. Only when this was discontinued were the openings closed with wood and glass. The result was a cosy room, today's Ratskeller.

Rear fountain ▷

For those able to read symbols, the front of the Rathaus, dated 1608, is the town's ledger. Two perpendicular columns of figures, credit and debit as it were, are crossed and subdivided by four horizontal lines. These have to correspond exactly for the budget to balance. The oriel in the main floor does not fit into the scheme but was a necessary political extra, for this is where proclamations were read aloud to the populace to give them legal effect. In printed form they would have reached only the smaller, literate fraction of the citizenry.

Boldness indeed was shown by the merchant opposite who dared adorn his own handsome half-timbered house with a central oriel. At such a spot, this might have been deemed presumptuous. But oriels apparently came into fashion in those days. The building at the corner of Market and Karlstrasse, a half-timbered house of high quality, suggests this. It has placed itself rather rudely in front of the dainty SPITZHÄUSCHEN, 1583, and lar area adorned with a modern BÄRENBRUNNEN (Bear Fountain). Before the Gate, the Grabenstrasse (Moat Street) and Hinterm Graben mark the site of the former wall. The latter can only be built up on one side: facing the town. On the other side, there is the steep slope of the DOCTORBERG. At the Kapuzinerkreuz, the Hinterm Graben street is joined at a steep acute angle by the Alte Römerstrasse. The name betrays its special status, which is confirmed by a half timbered façade with much character. From of old, this has been the town's business thoroughfare, and it still invites the visitor to take a stroll, do some shopping or have a nibble or sip of something. Behind the slight bend within reach of the Bärenbrunnen it is called the Moselstrasse and descends to the river bank. This is where it used to meet the now forgotten Mosel ferry. In the other direction, its continuation, now called Burgstrasse, sets about climbing the Hunsrück hills, as does the continuation of Hinterm Graben. The first height is reached at Longkamp. In Roman times this was already a defensive camp for the important access to the age-old Mosel ferry. In the town below, the Burgstrasse is lined and picturesquely enclosed by slightly elevated chapels. One more pointer for visitors appreciative of fine house façades: between the Graacher Tor and the little Bärenbrunnen square, the old town receives the respects of Late Biedermeier, last century's bourgeois style in Germany. The way these houses are looked after is a credit to the inhabitants and a joy for the visitor. Amidst the crowded townhouses, the KURFÜRSTLICHE AMTS- UND KELLNEREIGEBÄUDE (Electoral Offices and Cellars) has made itself at home and found ample elbow-room. After 1661, it was the seat of secular authorities and the air here is still redolent of wine. Its spacious cellars were used for centuries to store the collected wine tithe. Ten percent of citizens' income was at one time enough to keep the state has set its corner oriel right before the Burgomaster's nose. Nonetheless, the municipal authorities would certainly have had the powers to stop the construction of the oriel if they had felt so inclined.

Particularly charming, in spite of its modest girth, is the corner house where the market enters the little lane that links it with the Old Roman Street. As you look up, this house pushes each storey out a little further into the already confined light and air space of the alley. A lover and his lass living across from one another up there would have little trouble touching hands across the gap. Two stone house-fronts at the market are successful substitutes for former half-timbered façades.

The heart of Bernkastel has always been closely linked with its road network. Passing through the GRAACHER TOR (gate), all that is left of the medieval TOWN WALL, the Graacher Strasse performs a graceful curve in approaching the town hall. Half way there, it widens to form an intimate triangu-happy. Even 200 years ago, this sufficed to settle all the subject's obligations toward authority. Happy days! The wine stored in the old vaults today got there more voluntarily, but not tax-free. Still, there has been no decline in the quality. The sample the visitor is offered makes the descent worth while and will lend wings to the heart of the same visitor climbing up again.

Burg Landshut

Adalbero, son but not heir of the Count of Luxemburg and brother of the Empress Kunigunde, had the expensive wish to become Archbishop of Trier. Tolls being a favorite source of income for the nobility of the time, Adalbero, too, added a toll station to the Mosel ferry on the old iron road. Metal from the foundries in the Eifel had to cross the Mosel on the way south, and the river also bore wine-ships downriver. Either way, the tolls would earn ready cash. Adalbero had a bear in his coat-of-arms and named the profitable customs post 'Bärenkastell' or 'Bero's Kastell', which gave rise to 'Bernkastel' or, colloquially, even 'Bärekessel'. To Adalbero's dismay, Poppo became Archbishop. He destroyed the 'Bear's Castle' in 1017, reducing his rival to penury.

Around 1200, a certain Count von Blieskastel illegally rebuilt the toll station. Not much later, Archbishop John I burnt down the offending building. The third structure on the castle hill or Schlossberg was started by Archbishop Heinrich von Vinstingen in 1277, and it was never conquered. His successor, Boemund II, who reigned from 1286 to 1299, obtained for Bernkastel its charter as a town and gradually converted the castle's interior to make a palace. A visit from Emperor Maximilian in 1512 earned it the honorary title of 'Landshut'. It became the favorite summer residence of the lords of the land, but was still able to withstand serious attack. It was finally destroyed by fire in 1692. 'Fine paintings, rare and precious things' worth 70,000 thalers in the coin of the time, and worth two hundred times as much today, were lost in the flames. The castle remained a ruin, even when it was the property of the Hohenzollern from 1839. The inn within its walls has a fine view of an incomparably beautiful landscape. This is reward enough for the ascent. More leisurely access is possible from April to October by the 'Burg Landshut-Express' bus; departure on the hour down at the Moselgestade.

St. Nicolaus Hospital (Cusanus-Stift)

In Germany, it is only in Bernkastel-Kues that a hospice has survived which was set up by a pious founder 500 and more years ago. In all that time, St. Nicolaus Hospital has lived from the yield of its own vineyards. The founder's younger brother acquired the first of them in 1447. The home for 33 needy elderly men was completed in 1457. The foundation document dates back to that year. In its story since then we can read a continuous tale of charity and brotherly love.

It was in the village of Kues 1401 that Nicolaus saw the light of the world as the son of the wealthy river-boatman, Johann Krebs. At a very early age he had gained a command of the knowledge of his time, and was theologian, jurist, philosopher and naturalist. He took his name, Nicolaus Cusanus, from his place of birth, and his likeness has survived in the altar-piece which he himself commissioned for the chapel of the St. Nicolaus Hospital. At 31, he was council father in Basle, and while he was papal emissary in Constantinople a few years before the Turkish conquest, he tried again to negotiate the reunification of the Western and the Eastern churches. He then became cardinal, Bishop of Brixen, curia prefect and vicar-general in Rome. He died in Italy in 1464. His entire fortune, including his priceless library, he left to the Cusanus Stift. Owing to its well-planned unity of construction, the building in Kues is regarded as a gem of late medieval architecture. On a site on the banks of the Mosel, two wings of an enclosed cloister provide access to a number of almshouse cells. The cloister also leads to two vaulted halls, the sick ward and the refectory, and to the staircase kitchen and chapel. The latter's stellar vault rests on one single centre column. A fresco-painting on the north wall beside the entrance respresents the Last Judgment. The east wall opens to the elongated choir, which is dominated by the rich altar piece with side wings. The Crucifixion was painted in festive colours by the famous Cologne "Master of the Life of Mary", whose name has not been handed down to us. Here he has immortalized Cusanus as donor. Before the altar, the Cardinal's heart was buried under a brass slab. His bones rest in Rome. Clara, his only sister, had her tomb in front of the altar to Our Lady closed with a stone slab bearing her carved likeness. Rococo was the inspiration behind the fine appointments of the convention hall in the groundfloor. The apartment of the rector upstairs was embellished by the 18th cen tury, which also provided the library, the sanctuary of the Cusanus-Stift, shelves and pictures. Like most of the almshouse rooms, this apartment, too, is situated in the upper floor of the building. As in the case of the chapel, the cross vault of this quiet room, too, rests on one centre column. Of Cusanus' estate the library has 314 manuscripts from seven centuries, i.e. from the 9th to the 15th., including those of his own works. The library also has a rich collection of early editions, for Gutenberg invented printing only 14 years before Cusanus' death. The Cusanus-Stift is kept alive by the yield of 75,000 vines. The list of its properties boasts illustrious sites: Kueser Weissenstein and Kardinalsberg, Bernkasteler Badstube and Lay, Wehlener Sonnenuhr, Graacher Himmelreich, Lieserer Schlossberg, Brauneberger Juffer. What prospects for a cellarman! In winter (Nov. 1 to April 15), St. Nicolaus Hospital is open every day except Monday between 2.30 and 5 p.m. In summer (April 16 to Oct. 31), it can be viewed every day except Monday between 10 a.m. and 12 noon, and from 2.30 to 7 p.m.

Birthplace of Cardinal Nicolaus Cusanus

Sheltered by the "Kueser Werth", which used to be an island but is now the outer mole of the yachting harbour, stands a stone house with spiral stair tower. Until 1925 it adjoined another building called the Pulverturm (powder tower). The surviving structure, too, looks very much like a fortified building. The overall complex had to be served by ferry at one time. The landing place was screened from drifting ice and high water by the off-shore island. When Burg Landshut was completed in 1320, the fortified structure was given up, and it was offered to private purchasers. That is how Cusanus' father, Hennen Krebs, became owner of the Pulverturm in 1401. In the same year, his son Nicolaus was born in the house next door, which Krebs also owned. The latter was a wealthy sailing master and certainly a ferryman as well, which earned him a steady income. His two sons studied, and his daughter's dowry sufficed for a son in law who became mayor of Trier. A museum since 1980, the house tells the splendid life of that all-round genius, Nicolaus Cusanus, who grew up there. Opening times as for the Cusanus-Stift and the Mosel-Wein-Museum.

Bernkastel-Kues and the Wine

It amounts to an article of faith whether a Celt or a Roman was the first to plant a vine at the Mosel. In any case, it was a success and soon found imitators. Romanized, the Mosel Celts gladly became a nation of wine-drinkers, wine-growers and wine dealers. The Franks came, saw and scared both Romans and Celts about 450 A. D. They were not content with a wine-tasting, but zealously drank their way through whole cellars to emerge with a liking for grape juice. Versed Celto-Roman vintners helped them acquire experience of their own with the plant on the stake, with its fruit, the grape, and with the beatific final product, the wine. Floor mosaics are clear evidence that the Romans were partial to red wine, and the newly trained Frankish wine-growers in the Mosel valley were true to the red for centuries. The first white wine appears to have been made from the Elbling, while the Riesling, the classic grape for Mosel wine, is first mentioned in the wine registers of this river valley in 1562, viz. at Trittenheim, having presumably been imported from other wine-growing areas. Be that as it may, it made steady progress thereafter and grew to unfold all the exquisite nuances of flavour inherent in the refreshing Riesling and varying deliciously from vintage site to site. Over the last 2000 years, many varieties of vine have occupied the sunny slopes at Bernkastel, Kues and thereabouts that have cooperated with Nature to produce excellent wine: BERNKASTELER DOCTOR, KUESER KARDINALSBERG, WEHLENER SONNENUHR – the names are enough to set the connoisseur's nose and tongue a-quiver with agreeable suspense. Certain vintages are highly concentrated solar energy stored in green bottles and promising heavenly pleasures to come. The top growths are joined by glorious neighbouring sites, e. g. at Bernkastel: BADSTUBE, SCHLOSSBERG, BRATENHÖFCHEN; on the Kues side: ROSENBERG and WEISENSTEIN; in Wehlen: NONNENBERG. Anyone desirous of devoutly enjoying his small glass or "Fläschelchen" here has an excruciating choice to make. Consider the tempting signboards of wine-rooms boasting fine-sounding names. Besides the Ratskeller or town hall restaurant, there are a great many of cosy inns all over town. Just take a look round. The town's tourist office lists twenty of the best under the heading 'Gaststätten'. Names of wine are easier to note if you have an ear for history. The 'KUESER KARDINALSBERG' recalls the town's greatest son, the cardinal whom we have already met. Of the 'BERNKASTELER DOCTOR' we are told that Boemund II, Archbishop from 1286 to 1299, lying mortally ill in a room of the Bernkastel castle and given up by the physicians, cured himself by imbibing the grape-juice from the vines growing on the slope alongside the castle. In gratitude, the lord spiritual awarded the curative wine the doctor's title it still bears. Famous cellars like that of the St. Nicolaus Hospital in Kues and the Kurfürstliche Kellnerei (Electoral Cellars) in Bernkastel now see to it that the wine devotee of the 20th century is preserved from one tormenting complaint: thirst. Should he need some convincing before carousing, he will find the arguments he needs at the Mosel-Wein-Museum in Kues. The entrance is on the street side of the Cusanus-Stift, and the museum is open from mid-April till end-October, every day except Monday, viz. between 10 a. m. and noon, and between 2.30 and 5 p. m. Nor should the visitor miss the annual wine festival on the first weekend in September. One week later, the local adult education institute, the Volkshochschule Bernkastel-Kues, puts on a wine seminar. No merrymaking, yet a festive occasion marks the vintage starting not before October here in the Middle Mosel area.

Ein Hospital als "Weinkulturelles Zentrum"

Die Stiftung von Nikolaus von Kues - Eine Fundgrube für Weinfreunde und Historiker

Von Dr. Helmut Gestrich

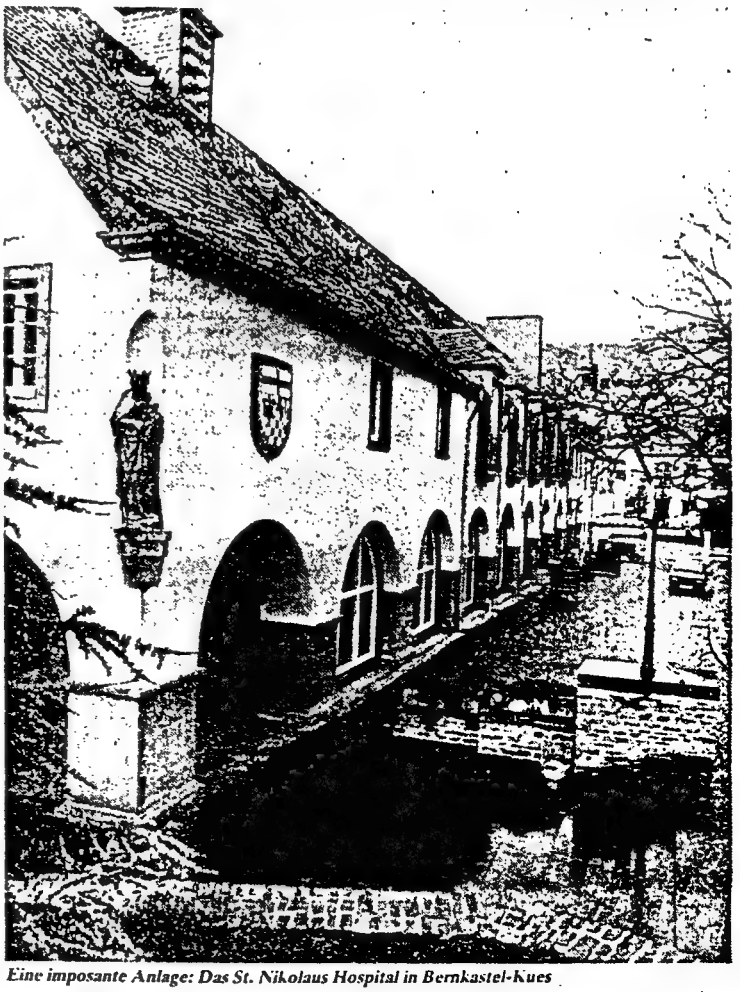
Er hat die schöne Doppelstadt an der Mosel durch seinen Namen und sein kirchenpolitisches Denken in aller Welt berühmt gemacht: Nikolaus von Kues, der Kardinal, der als einer der ersten Humanisten in Deutschland gilt. An den 1401 in Kues, dem heutigen Stadtteil von Bernkastel-Kues, Geborenen erinnert nicht nur der gleichlautende Name sondern vieles mehr (siehe dazu auch untenstehenden Artikel). Schon am Eingang des alten Winzerdorfes Kues fesselt das prächtig renovierte Geburtshaus dieses Mannes die Blicke der Besucher. Aber das ist nur der Anfang. Einige hundert Meter weiter begegnet der Gast dem St. Nikolaus-Hospital, kurz Spital genannt, eine klosterähnliche Anlage, die Ruhesuchende, Historiker und Weinfreunde gleichermaßen fesselt.

So lädt gleich hinter dem Eingangstor zum Hofraum die Weinprobierstube des hospitaleigenen Weingutes ein. Unweit davon entfernt befinden sich das Kelterhaus und das wirklich sehenswerte Mosel-Weinmuseum. Das Hospital selbst ist ein stattlicher Bau mit hohen Fenstern und einem Portal, über dem die Statue des Namenspatrons des Cusanus und des Hospitals, des heiligen Bischofs Nikolaus von Myra, sowie das Wappentier des Nikolaus von Kues, der Krebs und der Kardinalshut, von einem Engel gehalten und von zwei Löwen umrahmt, zu sehen sind. Diesem barocken Eingangstor folgt ein gotischer Kreuzgang von einzigartiger Großzügigkeit und Klarheit. "Ist das ein Kloster?", fragen viele. Die Antwort: "Nein und ja": es ist ein Altenheim für 33 ältere Mitbürger und als solches seit seiner Einweihung im Jahre 1465 bis heute ununterbrochen im Dienst; es ist also kein Kloster, und doch hat ihm sein Stifter, der Kardinal Nikolaus von Kues, eine klosterähnliche bauliche Gestaltung und eine innere, einem Kloster entsprechende Ordnung gegeben. Das unterscheidet das Hospital von vielen anderen und zum Teil älteren Einrichtungen: Nikolaus wollte den alten Menschen nicht nur ein Dach über dem Kopf geben, er gab ihnen ein zeitliches Zuhause, in dem sie sich auf die ewige Heimat vorbereiten sollten. Deshalb wurde auch die wunderschöne Kapelle zum Mittelpunkt der Anlage und jeder Bewohner erhielt eine "Zelle" - wir würden heute sagen "ein Einzelzimmer". Das tägliche Chorgebet war genauso üblich wie die tägliche Gabe Wein.

Der Wein erinnert wiederum an den ersten Eindruck beim Betreten des Hospitalbezirks. Er spielt eine überragende Rolle, denn die Stiftung ruht auf dem Grund und Boden aus dem elterlichen Besitz des Kardinals, und das waren Weinberge in den berühmtesten Lagen der Mittelmosel. Landwirtschaft und Weinbau waren die wirtschaftliche Grundlage des Hospitals bis in unsere Tage. Heute ist das Weingut verpachtet; der Landkreis Bernkastel-Wittlich hat es einbezogen in ein Weinkulturelles Zentrum im St. Nikolaus-Hospital, zusammen mit dem Weinmuseum der Mosel, der Weinprobierstube, dem Festsaal und demnächst der Weinbauschule.

Doch zurück ins Hospital. Zwei Räume haben dort eine unnachahmliche Ausstrahlungskraft: die Kapelle und die Bibliothek. Die Kapelle als religiöser Mittelpunkt des Hospitals sagt auch viel über den Stifter aus. Da ist der berühmte gotische Flügelaltar, etwa aus dem Jahre 1450, und auf ihm hat sich der Stifter kniend vor dem Kreuz malen lassen. Im Altarraum ruht unter einer Messingplatte sein Herz. Er, der seine Stiftung in der Vollendung nie sah, ordnete in seinem Testament an, daß sein Leib zwar in seiner Titularkirche in Rom, sein Herz aber in seinem Hospital zu Kues bestattet werden sollte.

Die Bibliothek ist eine der kostbarsten Privatbibliotheken der Welt. Sie enthält 314 Handschriften aus dem 9. bis 14. Jahrhundert, davon 270 aus dem Nachlaß des Nikolaus von Kues sowie 132 Wiegendrucke aus der Zeit der Erfindung der Buchdruckerkunst. Der Bücherbestand ist ein Spiegel der geistigen Breite und Tiefe seines Eigentümers. Natürlich ist die Hl. Schrift in vielen Handschriften vorhanden, ferner Werke der Theologie und Philosophie, Handschriften der berühmten Rechtbücher des Mittelalters sowohl des Kirchenrechts wie des weltlichen Rechts. Die Astronomie und die Mathematik sind ebenso vertreten wie die Mystik jener Zeit. Eine besondere Kostbarkeit sind die eigenen Werke von Nikolaus von Kues.



Eine imposante Anlage: Das St. Nikolaus Hospital in Bernkastel-Kues

Ein Moselaner als Reformator in Rom

Wer an die Mosel kommt und dabei einen Abstecher nach Bernkastel-Kues unternimmt, der wird spätestens dort auf den Namen Nikolaus von Kues treffen. Dieser Mann hat nicht nur bedeutende kulturelle und historische Spuren in der kleinen Doppelstadt und im Trierer Land hinterlassen, sondern philosophische Thesen aufgestellt, die seiner Zeit jahrhundertelang voraus waren. Seine größte Bedeutung erlangte er jedoch als Kardinal der römischen Kirche, besonders als Reformator sowohl in den deutschen Landen wie an der Kurie in Rom.

Hier nun ein kurzer Abriß über das Leben dieses Mannes (1401-1464), der in Bernkastel-Kues eine bedeutende Stiftung hinterlassen hat (siehe dazu auch nebenstehenden Artikel) und herausragende Akzente in der verwertete sie zur Stützung seiner staatsrechtlichen Gedanken. Ein Auftrag des Ulrich von Manderscheid, der Erzbischof von Trier werden wollte, gab ihm dann die Gelegenheit, auf der großen weltpolitischen Bühne des Baseler Konzils aufzutreten. Er tat das mit soviel Geist, daß er sich bald auf dem Konzil in die Reihe der bedeutendsten Persönlichkeiten vorschob.

Immer neue Aufgaben wurden ihm übertragen. Mit seinem großen Werk "De concordantia catholica" griff er in die fundamentale Auseinandersetzung zwischen Papst und Konzil ein. Als Konzil und Papst die Ostkirche zu einem Unionskonzil nach Italien baten, wurde Nikolaus von Kues Mitglied der päpstlichen Delegation, die 1438 die Repräsentanten der oströmischen Kirche nach Italien Kues auf den deutschen Reichs- und Fürstentagen für die Anerkennung Papst Eugens IV. durch die deutschen Fürsten. Es gelang ihm tatsächlich, die Einheit der Kirche wieder herzustellen. Dafür wurde er zum Kardinal ernannt. Am 11. Januar 1450 erhielt er den roten Kardinalshut. Wenige Wochen später ernannte der Papst ihn zum Bischof in Brixen in Tirol. Doch bevor er sein Bischofsamt antreten konnte, beauftragte ihn der Papst mit einer besonderen Mission: er erteilte ihm die Weisung zur Reform der Kirche in den deutschen Landen. Was Nikolaus von Kues als päpstlicher Legat in den Jahren 1450 und 1451 leistete, war großartig: er reiste, predigte, visierte, gab Anordnungen, reformierte Klöster und Ordensgemeinschaften, schlichtete Streit. Er war in vielen Dingen seiner Zeit voraus. Seine Ideen sind im nächsten Jahrhundert erspart geblieben.

Erst 1452 konnte Nikolaus von Kues sein Bischofsamt in Brixen antreten. Er wurde ein bedeutender Bischof seiner Diözese, geriet bei seiner Reformtätigkeit jedoch in den Gegensatz zum Tiroler Landesherren, Herzog Sigismund. Papst Pius II. berief ihn 1459 zur Kurie nach Rom, wo Nikolaus von Kues bald höchstes Ansehen genoß. Auch in Rom setzte er seine Reformtätigkeit fort und verfaßte zum Beispiel eine Generalreform für die römische Kirche. Zahlreiche Gelehrte kamen in jenen Jahren zu ihm. Doch immer wieder finden wir ihn im aktiven Dienst der Kirche. Mitten in dieser Aktivität traf ihn im Sommer 1464 eine schwere Krankheit und am 11. August dieses Jahres der Tod.

Dieser Mann, dessen Leben ist. Was an dieser Philosophie fesselt, ist die Erkenntnis, daß ein Denker des ausgehenden Mittelalters Erkenntnisse, Wahrheiten und Zusammenhänge geschen hat, die für die Menschen im 20. Jahrhundert Schlüssel zum Verständnis der Welt sein können. Wenn ein gebildeter Mensch gefragt wird, wer denn das mittelalterliche Weltbild widerlegt und das Tor der Neuzeit aufgestoßen habe, so wird er entsprechend seinem Schulwissen antworten, das seien Galilei, Kopernikus und Kepler gewesen.

Doch eigentlich war es Nikolaus von Kues, denn das wird spätestens jedem dann deutlich, wenn er sein philosophisches Werk "De docto ignorantia" liest. Da heißt es im 11. Kapitel des 2. Buches: "Da die Erde nicht Mittelpunkt sein kann, kann sie gezählt werden) den christlichen Offenbarungsglauben mit modernen Gedanken zur Naturwissenschaft in einer wunderbaren Weise verbunden, so daß erst die moderne Wissenschaft unserer Tage Wege weisen kann, in denen der unheilvolle Gegensatz von Naturwissenschaft und Offenbarung beendet wird.".

Wir können Ihnen, liebe Leser, hier keinen Abriß über das Denken des großen Moselaners geben. Was Sie aber spuren sollten, wenn Sie die Cusanus-Statten in Bernkastel-Kues besuchen, ist der Eindruck, daß hier ein Geist gewirkt hat, der in der Geistesgeschichte so bedeutsam ist, daß man von ihm eingefangen wird. Verstehen Sie jetzt, wenn wir Ihnen raten: trinken Sie in der Probierstube des St. Nikolaus-Hospitals eine oder mehrere Fla-

Im Jahre 1401 wurde Nikolaus von Kues in diesem Haus geboren. Allerdings sah das Haus zur Geburtszeit des Cusanus anders aus als auf diesem Bild. Nachdem es nämlich nach dem Tode des Vaters durch das Testament des Kardinals Nikolaus von Kues in das Vermögen des St. Nikolaus Hospitals gekommen war, verfiel es und mußte im Jahre 1570 von Grund auf erneuert werden. Ein Jahrhundert später wurde es an Privatleute verkauft und erfuhr im Laufe der Zeit manche Veränderung. Das Bild zeigt den Zustand vor etwa 100 Jahren.

Die Cusanus-Gesellschaft, zu deren Aufgaben die Erhaltung und Pflege der Cusanus-Stätten gehört, erwarb 1973 und 1977 die beiden Haushälften, restaurierte das Haus im Stil des 1570 erneuerten Gebäudes und stattete es mit einer ständigen Dokumentation über Leben und Werk des Nikolaus von Kues aus. Die festliche Einweihung fand am 5. Dezember 1980 statt. Die Stadt Bernkastel-Kues und die Cusanus-Gesellschaft teilen sich nunmehr in die Aufgabe der Erhaltung dieser Cusanus-Stätte.

Die Dokumentation im Geburtshaus zeigt im Erdgeschoß eine Dia-Reihe über das Leben und Werk des Kardinals. In beiden Geschossen sind zu sehen: Bilder seines Geburtsorts, des von ihm gegründeten Hospitals, Bilder seiner Kirchen, aus seinem Studium, von seinem Aufstieg beim Konzil von Basel, von der historischen Reise nach Konstantinopel, Urkunden und Bilder von seinem Ringen um die Einheit der Kirche, von seiner großen Legationsreise durch die deutschen Lande und seinen Reformbemühungen. Die Zeit als Bischof in Brixen ist ebenso dargestellt, wie die letzten Jahre in Rom. Das Abbild des Grabmals in St. Peter in den Ketten zu Rom leitet über zum geistigen Erbe. Die Cusanus-Gesellschaft will in einer Bücherecke ihre Aufgabe der Erschließung des geistigen Erbes des großen Theologen, Philosophen, des Kirchenmannes und Denkers Nikolaus von Kues darstellen.

Das Haus will aber nicht nur Museum in dem Sinn sein, daß darin Bilder und Urkunden ausgestellt werden. Das Geburtshaus des Nikolaus von Kues soll eine lebendige Stätte der geistigen Begegnung werden. Mehrmals im Jahr werden Kunstausstellungen alter und moderner Meister gezeigt. Wie Nikolaus von Kues um das richtige Menschenbild gerungen hat, so soll das Ringen der Kunst um die Darstellung von Mensch und Schöpfung gezeigt werden.

In dem stilvollen Säulenraum des Obergeschosses finden Sonntags Musik-Matinées der Kreismusikschule Bernkastel-Wittlich statt. Insbesondere junge Menschen erhalten hier die Gelegenheit, ihre Fähigkeit einem musik- und kunstliebendem Publikum vorzustellen. Das Angebot wird durch Dichterlesungen und Vorträge bereichert.

Letztlich ist geplant, das Haus zu einer Stätte der Begegnung und des Gesprächs zwischen den Religionen zu machen. Nikolaus von Kues hat in seinem visionären Werk „De pace fidei" den Versuch gewagt, die Weltreligionen zu einem Gespräch zu vereinen: Frieden im Glauben, Einheit in der Vielfalt! Sollten wir nicht in einer Welt, die von Waffen starrt, den Versuch unternehmen, die geistigen Grundlagen für den Frieden zu erarbeiten? Das Geburtshaus des Nikolaus von Kues lädt dazu ein.

EINLEITUNG

Sie befinden sich in der Stiftung des berühmten Gelehrten, Bischofs und Kardinals Nikolaus Krebs, geb. 1401 in Kues als Sohn eines wohlhabenden Moselschiffers und Winzers, gest. 1464 in Todi (Italien).

Nach seinem Geburtsort Kues heißt er in der Gelehrtenwelt, der damaligen Sitte entsprechend, einfach Cusanus oder der Cusaner.

Der Krebs auf zahlreichen Wappen, Schlußsteinen und Gebrauchsgegenständen des Hauses hält den Familiennamen in dauernder Erinnerung.

Als vielseitiger Gelehrter (Jurist, Theologe, Philosoph, Astronom, Mathematiker, Naturwissenschaftler, Mediziner Kirchenpolitiker und Förderer der Ökumene) war er der hervorragendste Geistesmann Deutschlands seiner Zeit und des Mosellandes überhaupt.

BESICHTIGUNG

Das Gebäude, 1451 - 1458 als Altersheim für 33 alte Männer (nach dem Lebensalter Christi) erbaut, ist in der ursprünglichen Form erhalten und damit zusammen mit der Kapelle die größte erhaltene gotische Anlage an der Mosel. Durch 500 Jahre nicht zweckentfremdet, ist es das Altersheim mit der ältesten Tradition in Deutschland. Jeder Alte bewohnt sein eigenes Zimmer.

Der Kreuzgang verbindet in hervorragender Weise Einheit mit Vielheit, um deren Verhältnis Cusanus sich in seiner Philosophie bemüht hat. Harmonisch vereinen sich die jeweils verschiedenen Formen der Gewölbe in den vier Fluren des Kreuzganges, ebenso die verschiedene Zahl der Fenster (4 - 5 - 6 - 7) u. das stets wechselnde Maßwerk zur Darstellung der „Concordantia catholica" des Cusanus.

Auf dem Weg zur Kapelle zeigen die großen Tafelgemälde aus dem Jahre 1775 in den leiblichen Werken der Barmherzigkeit (Hungrige speisen, Durstige tränken, Nackte bekleiden, Gefangene erlösen, Fremde beherbergen, Kranke besuchen, Tote begraben) den Sinn der Stiftung.

Die dargestellten Personen sind Portraits von damaligen Bewohnern des Hospitals und Bürgern aus Bernkastel-Kues.

Die Kapelle ist ein Edelstein spätgotischer Baukunst. Der Raum für das gläubige Volk ist ein Würfel - ein Abbild des neuen Jerusalem in der Geheimen Offenbarung des Johannes.

Die Mittelsäule (erstmalig so im Rheinland) - ein Zeichen für Christus als Mittelpunkt und Stütze dieser Stadt des Friedens - achteckig im Schaft, spaltet sich ohne Kapitell in großer Harmonie auf in zwölf Rippen - Symbol für die 12 Apostel.

Die Schlußsteine im Gewölbe sind in den beiden rückwärtigen Quadraten Gedenksteine für seinen Bruder Johannes (Krebs) und seine Schwester Klara (Bildnis der hl. Klara); in den vorderen Quadraten für ihn selber (Krebs mit dem Kardinalshut darüber und Osterlamm (Wappen seiner Bischofsstadt Brixen) mit dem Bischofshut. Dazwischen das Wappen des damaligen Landesfürsten Erzbischof Jakob von Sierck † 1456.

In dem feingegliederten Altarraum zeigen die Schlußsteine das Papstwappen (Schlüssel mit Tiara), St. Nikolaus (Patron des Hauses), St. Petrus mit Schlüssel und Ketten (Hinweis auf seine Titel- und Grabeskirche St. Pietro in Vincoli in Rom), die Madonna und, über dem Altar, den Christuskopf.

Unter der Grabplatte im Chorraum (eine Stiftung seines Sekretärs Peter Wimar von Erkelenz aus dem Jahre 1488) ist das Herz des Cusanus in einer Bleikapsel bestattet. Die mehrteilige Messingplatte ist eine getreue Kopie der Marmorplatte, die in Rom in St. Pietro in Vincoli über seinem Grabe lag. Sie zeigt uns den Kopf des Cusanus mit der Mitra, rechts und links den Krebs mit dem Kardinalshut.

Die Inschrift unter dem Bildnis lautet: Dilexit deumtimuit et veneratus est - ac illi soli servivit. (Er liebte Gott, fürchtete und verehrte ihn und diente ihm allein).

Das kostbare Altarbild ist eine Stiftung des Cusanus aus 1460 - ein Werk des «Meisters des Marienlebens» der Kölner Schule. Unter dem Kreuz kniet Cusanus als Stifter, hinter ihm der oben schon genannte Peter von Erkelenz. Das Bild zeigt Dornenkrönung, Tod Christi am Kreuz und Grablegung vor dem Hintergrund der heimatlichen Landschaft. (Ein stilles Verweilen vor diesem Bildnis lohnt sich).

Chorgestühl und Seitenaltäre stammen aus der Barockzeit. Die Fenster hinter dem Altar wurden 1952 an Stelle der durch die Sprengung der Moselbrücke im März 1945 zerstörten Fenster angeschafft.

Sie zeigen in der Mitte Christus den König; links den von vielen Legenden umwobenen hl. Bischof Nikolaus. Im rechten Fenster sehen wir in der oberen Hälfte den Kardinal Nikolaus Cusanus als Patron seiner Stiftung. und in den unteren Scheiben links den Gelehrten, rechts den Diplomaten vor Konstantinopel; dann seine Auszeichnung mit dem Kardinalshut und schließlich eine Skizze seines Grabdenkmals in Rom.

Vor Verlassen der Kapelle beachten Sie bitte noch links das Grabmal der Schwester des Cusanus Klara Krebs, ein außerordentlich feines und lebendiges Bildnis einer jungen Frau. - Rechts ist das gewaltige Fresko aus der Erbauungszeit um 1460 beachtenswert. Es zeigt uns den Weltenrichter mit Maria und Johannes dem Täufer und, zu seinen Füßen, den 12 Aposteln. Unten in der Mitte schauen wir die Auferstehenden: links vom Beschauer die Seligen als Einzelperönlichkeiten auf dem Weg zur Himmelsburg, rechts die Masse der Verdammten; die vorher vornehm gekleidet, nackt in den weitgeöffneten Höllenrachen gestoßen werden.

BERNKASTEL-KUES

Das Sankt-Nikolaus-Hospital in Kues, kurz auch Cusanus-Stift genannt, gehört zu den ehrwürdigsten Stätten Deutschlands. Es ist der Herzschrein der Heimat am Moselufer, darin nicht nur das Herz des Stifters, des großen deutschen Kardinals und Gelehrten Nikolaus von Cues, ruht, darin auch seine Stimme, deutlich vernehmbar, seit fünf Jahrhunderten bis in die Gegenwart fortwirkend tönt. Hier wird seit 500 Jahren das Vermächtnis des Cusaners unverändert erfüllt, unter allen testamentarischen Stiftungen in Deutschland eine einmalige Kontinuität. Hier ist sein Ruf von der concordantia catholica in Stein gebaut, hier ist seine Lehre von der coincidentia oppositorum, von der Eintracht in der Vielheit, in gebauter Anschauung sichtbar gemacht. Das Cusanus-Stift ist die schönste Frucht, unversehrt und unübersehbar, aus dem Leben und aus der Lehre dieses Mannes Nikolaus Krebs aus dem Winzerdorfe Kues.

CHAUVIN DE JOYEUSE

From: LOUISIANA HISTORICAL QUARTERLY Vol. 18, No. 3., P.697

Records of the Superior Council of Louisiana -- June 10, 1747

Krebs 2nd wife

Succession of Marie Anne Danis, widow of Philippe Chauvin Joyeuse. "Petition by Mr. Raguet, acting as Procureur General of the King, stating that he has been notified of the death of the Widow of Sr. Philippe Chauvin and that, though she has left no goods worth being sealed and inventoried, it would be suitable to list and describe the clothes and apparel for her use in the house where she died, as she leaves four children, two with her brothers in Illinois, and two other minors in this city. Councillor Nicholas Chauvin de Lafreniere, Councillor on this case, accompanied by M. Raguet and the clerk of the Council, went to her house where Marianne Chauvin, her daughter, affirmed that nothing had been carried away nor secreted.

"The list of articles found at the house includes kitchenware, bedding, a chest, the contents of which was remitted to the daughter to make clothes for the children, papers, statement of debts of deceased, etc., the whole left in charge of Sr. Chantalour. Moreover, there is a young negro, aged twelve or thirteen, now ill with the prevailing sickness, measles.

"Signed Chantalou; Lafreniere; raguet.

"Discharge to Sr. Chantalou, who has produced the effects entrusted to him.

"Signed: Lafreniere "

Vol. 18, No. 3

June 28, 1747 "Papers belonging to the succession of Widow Chauvin.

"April 28, 1734. Marriage contract of Philippe Chauvin, son of Jules Chauvin and Angelique Derounsay, a native of Montreal, Canada, with Delle Marianne Danis, daughter of Charles Danis and Dorothee Mesciouerata, a native of the Parish of Notre Dame of Kaskaskia, province of Louisiana. This is a collated copy signed by Jerome, notary. Sr. Louis Chauvin, brother of the groom, was present and the mother and stepfather (Sr. Turpin) of the bride.

"July 1, 1747. Receipt to Madame Joyeuse (Chauvin) for four months rent at 18 livres and two hens, the sum of 72 livres and 20 sols. Signed: La Veuve Beaupre.

"Letter, dated March 14, 1747, written to Madame Joyeuse by Charleville, announcing that he has 1400 livres to remit to her from succession.

"July 1, 1747. Sale of effects of succession of Widow Chauvin Joyeuse, returns amounting to 240 livres which were turned over to Sr. Lafreniere.

Signed: Lafreniere: Chantalou; Raguet

"Statement of debts of the above succession, amounting to 20 livres, 3 sols. "

Dear Butch,

How very glad I was to hear from you ... and, yes - we are cousins! At least, your wife and I are. This is an interesting thing about the Daspet St.Amand connection perhaps being also a Krebs.

According to and using any and all written information that I can get my hands on - I find that the spelling originally in the Alsace/Lorraine portion of Germany from which the first immigrant came, the name was spelled: Kreps - but, those who speak German say that the name is pronounced: "Krep", with no "s" on the end. Then, as you say - the Spanish sometimes spelled it with a "C" - Creps and Kreps (you'll find all these spellings in the old records) ... but, when the land grant was given to Etienne and Margaret (Peggy) Krebbs in Winston County, Mississippi, the name was spelled in the American style just as it sounded: "Crapes". You are knowledgeable about the spelling and pronunciations (and the Gulf Coast is the best possible place to be for this family's research) - and, as best I can determine, Etienne (Stephen) Krebs left Mobile before 1824 - apparently went into the Indian Country around Winston County (he took his younger brother, Placide, with him) - and, from all research by other members of this family, their Uncle - Louis LeFlore was living in the vicinity of French Camp, Miss. Now - this name of LeFlore is interesting ... the father was Jean Bautiste LeFleau ... you know enough French to know how this name was pronounced = LeFlo ... and that is the way it was sometimes pronounced and written. But - again the different spellings made a difference ... the Choctaws do not have an "r" in their language - but, any American living in that part of Mississippi where this family lived, pronounced it with an "r" = LeFlore. There is also in early records a family named: LaFleur ... but, our's is not this family ... our's is: LeFleau - and, as best I can determine, this name means a scourge. I'm still working on this family - most interesting.

Your wife's line (quickly) is this:

Johann Krebs, b. ca 1670 - at Neumagen en Mosel
m. 14 February, 1702... Anna Charite Fritsch, dau. of Reiner Fritsch
d. 12 October, 1751 and Catherina ? b. 24 Mar. 1682
d. Neumagen - Trier their son: Hugo Ernestus Krebs

b. 15 May, 1714 - Neumagen (Treves)
2nd: m. after 7 November, 1751 - Marianne Chauvin dit Joyeuse (see records for Chauvin)
d. This date is speculative - the records at New Orleans' St.Louis Cathedral were destroyed in a fire in 1788. But - think we can almost put a date of 1776-78 for this death.

his son: Hugo Daniel Krebs
b. 23 September, 1754, bap. St.Louis Cathedral, New Orleans
m. 21 February, 1786 in New Orleans - Louisa LeFleau (see later records)
d. 1814 in Mobile (These records are not extant - but, I have some land/legal papers that state April 1814).

his son: Etienne (Stephen) Krebs
b. 23 December, 1786 - Mobile
2nd: m. circa 1824 - Margaret Fillecutcha, a half-blood Choctaw Indian, Winston Co. Miss.
d. 25 September, 1870 - Winston County, Miss.

This couple were parents of 15 children - I will try to enumerate them. I have contacted all the known descendants of these children, and Barbara Quinton Hale, who lives in Louisville, Mississippi is the daughter of Zane Quinton.

The article in the Winston County History is erroneous in some places ... the name of the wife of Etienne (Stephen) Krebs was Margaret (Peggy) Fillecutcha ... her mother's name was Polly. We are sure that the original name was Mary, and there are those searching for this family that insist that Mary (Polly) was a Folsum. I don't have that proven as yet - but am working on it. So - Peggy Fillecutcha Krebs would have been only half Choctaw (if her father was a full Blood, which I suspect that he was) - and, I have some records from the Oklahoma Historical Society in which your wife's immediate ancestor: Stephen Krebs, Jr., made a statement that his mother was half Choctaw.

An 1850 Census of Winston County, Miss. gives the name of those Krebs' children living at home - and, they had a comfortable list of assets. But, after the War, these assets were nil, and the final papers on the settlement of Stephen (Etienne) Krebs listed him as a pauper. The final settlement was so sad - all the children except two (mine and a younger sister) had left home - some for the Choctaw Nation West (Oklahoma), one to Texas who took the 'baby' with her (and, descendants of this 'baby' are still trying to determine if this is their progenitor), and most of the males of this family were dead - two in the War, one by yellow fever, one killed by a slave ... and the family left in Winston County, Mississippi was your wife's = Stephen Krebs, Jr. The land on which they lived and all the personal belongings were sold at auction to pay the bills which included shoes for the family, pork and bacon to sustain them, and seed corn for planting and the doctor's bill for attending to the last illness of the mother = Peggy.

I, too, have wondered about the land in Mobile left to the surviving children of Louisa LeFleau Krebs (I have a copy of her will) ... and subsequent legal papers that are obtainable from the National Archives stated that it was given to a Krebs cousin!!!

I really would like to know the location of that land in Mobile, and at one time, a researcher in Mobile insisted that I go to the Land Office and search these records. Well - we were on a limited stay in Mobile and I never did pursue this lead. But - if you are able to go to Mobile and can find any information as to where this land and home were located, would love to have that information. If you want these legals from National Archives, will send you a copy.

Interestingly enough, when I first started this research and went to Mobile, those there were not too interested in anyone with Indian ancestry ... but, as time and records have shown, most of the old families in the Mobile/Gulf Coast area do have Indian ancestry and got their start because of this. The Choctaw people lived in Mobile before it was settled by the French and called Fort Conde'. But, now - they are beginning to be aware of this past history, and research is a little easier. Too, several books have been written about this period of history and is most enlightening! My Mother was and is an enrolled Choctaw in Oklahoma (the Dawes Commission Rolls in 1903), but alas! I am not on the rolls - born in 1922. I only wish I were in order to keep this record going.

Again - many thanks for writing to me, and if there is any record or copy that I have that will help you, be glad to send it. Rita Krebs in Pascagoula was the first one that I contacted and she was such a help to me. Give her my very best regards. Also - the Library in Mobile has been a big help - I know that you have searched their records.

I am so glad to have contact with you and your wife - and, again, yes - we are cousins.

Hope to hear from you again,

Sincerely,

faith, and which signature must not be annulled, and further asked the Court to punish GILLARD for his wrong doings. GILLARD claimed that he is a member of the Army, so he cannot be tried by a Civil Court, but by a military tribunal. CHARPIOT claimed that GILLARD forged the commission as Corporal of Artillery, and he should be dishonorably dismissed and tried by the Civil Courts. The Civil Court sent copies of these proceedings to the Military Tribunal for its opinion as to GILLARD'S standing as an Army man. This case is incomplete.

Case of HONORE LANDREAUX - Attorney for ROSALIE PICOU DESLONDE
vs.
COCHRAN and RHEA
Re-Possession of Land

There is a copy of a Power of Attorney of MADAME ROSALIE PICOU DESLONDE, in favor of HONORE LANDREAUX, copy of an act of Donation of BELTRAN GRAVIER to ROSALE DESLONDE and a copy of an Act of Sale of Property of JUAN GRAVIER in favor of COCHRAN and RHEA, hereto attached.

LANDREAUX appeared in Court asking that COCHRAN and RHEA vacate the lot belonging to MADAME ROSALIE DESLONDE within 24 hours, leaving the buildings constructed thereon, which BELTRON GRAVIER donated to said ROSALIE. Petition was accepted by the Court that this case be taken to JUAN GRAVIER, directly from whom they bought the land in good faith. GRAVIER asked the Court to allow him to return the lot without the buildings thereon which he will demolish, charging petitioners for his expenses and costs of Court, as he sold it by mistake in good faith, believing it his own, and which she should have claimed before the buildings were finished. Petitioner answered that she did not act in bad faith, asking the Court that the land be returned with all buildings thereon, charging GRAVIER with the cost of Court. The Court after hearing all evidence, etc., passed the following sentence. That the land belongs to ROSALIE DESLONDE, without any rights to the buildings constructed on it, unless she purchases same, or to pay for the cost of demolishing. Court costs to be paid by both parties, DESLONDE and GRAVIER. The Court reserves to COCHRAN and RHEA their right of acting in the protection of their interests, as they may find it most convenient. Said judgment was accepted by both parties.

BASILIO KREBS
Re: Collection for debts.

JUAN ARCHINARD appeared in Court stating that BASILIO KREBS is owing him three hundred nine (309) pesos, and is unable to collect same. He asked the Court to proceed against him. The Court accepted this claim and ordered action against KREBS. CHARLES PARENT was commissioned by the Court to contact KREBS at his farm and residence and while he did not pay, he recognized the claim.

Pascagoula Library's genealogy section now has nearly complete sets of the quarterlies New Orleans Genesis and Deep South Quarterly of Mobile following the donation of back issues by Miss Dora Cirlot and F.W. 'Bob' Cirlot of Moss Point. The issues fill in the gaps of a previous set donated by Rita Krebs of Pascagoula.

Another exciting gift to the library recently is the original journal of the Sumrall family, the day-by-day description of the family's wanderings in the last century from Jasper County to Jackson County. A photocopy will be placed in the family files, said Jean Strickland of the library.

ite La Combe in Saint Landry Parish. All of these neighbors proved to be related, by blood or marriage.

As previously mentioned, the neighboring Marguerite de La Morandière was by birth a Gradenigo. By the time the 1850 census taker found her living next door to Marguerite La Combe, she was long since the widow of Captain Étienne Robert de La Morandière, to whom British forces had surrendered Fort Panmure of Natchez during the American Revolution. Her in-law relationship to the Voorhies-La Combe family was a double one. In 1803 her sister Agata Amata Gradenigo had married Cornelius Voorhies, who was soon to be appointed parish clerk of adjacent Attakapas and then sheriff of Opelousas. (Agata and Cornelius subsequently became the grandparents of the noted justice of Louisiana's supreme court, Albert Voorhies.) In 1825 Marguerite and Agata's niece, Azelie Gradenigo, married Bennet P. Voorhies, another kinsman of Cornelius and Sarah.[61] The association between the De La Morandière-Voorhies family and the Vasbinders dates back at least to 1809, when Cornelius Voorhies and James Vasbinder [Sr.] served as witnesses to each other's deeds for property, including a tract adjacent to the De La Morandières;[62] and the association of the latter family with the Ouachita Hooks dates at least to 1803 when Jacob's brother George of Ouachita both bought and sold slaves with the Opelousas Gradenigos.[63] A neighborhood analysis of the various parish censuses further revealed that Marguerite de La Morandière was not only the next-door neighbor of Marguerite La Combe in 1850, but she was similarly the 1820 neighbor of Marguerite's mother Sarah Voorhies, Widow La Combe.[64]

The identity of the James Vasbinder who came to adulthood about 1830, and subsequently migrated to Texas, proved even more significant—albeit more difficult to determine due to the nature of existing records. As previously noted, Saint Landry's church registers have been published in abstracted form; however, the abstracts are severely abbreviated, some detail is edited out "for privacy," the original order has been destroyed by entries being rearranged in alphabetical sequence under the name of one principal party, and the publications carry no index by which "buried" names can be easily retrieved. Users are also at the mercy of the various individuals who compiled the card index from which the publication was produced, because access to the unedited originals is not available and erroneous readings are a problem. Under these conditions, a word-by-word reading was made of the five volumes (3,417 pages) covering Marguerite's years in Saint Landry Parish; in the process the baptism and first marriage (church ceremony) of James Vasbinder were located in three entries, as follows:

WERBAINER, Jims (Jims & Celeste BORES) b[orn] 9 Sept. 1809
HARBINDER, James of Opel. (James & Sarah BORES) m. [church marriage] 10 Aug. 1830, Caroline BIM
BIHM, Caroline (Jacob) m. [marriage license] 24 July 1830, James HASBINDER[65]

In short, James Vasbinder resided next door to the Balls in Texas for a logical reason: he was Margaret's half-brother. The circuitous route that had been used to backtrack Margaret (Hook) Ball from Texas to her Louisiana

24. Jacob Bihm, son of Jacob Bihm and his wife Marie Ritter, married 24 October 1808, Susanne Le Jeune, daughter of Joseph Le Jeune and wife Patsy "Perine" Hay. Through her (Anglo-American) Hay ancestry, Susanne was a second cousin of the previously mentioned Charles Bundick and also of Charles's brother Philip, whose daughter became Susanne's daughter-in-law. 27. The reader will note Sarah's name given variously as Sarah and Celeste, as well as Sally (nickname for Sarah), in the documents discussed in this paper. A note should be made here with regard to a cultural peculiarity of her time and place. In Catholic society an individual's official name was the name under which he or she was baptized; and infants have been traditionally given, at baptism, the name of one or more saints. In short, their official given-names were saint names. The arrival of Protestant "Americans" in Louisiana presented a predicament for the clergymen who were being asked to administer sacraments to individuals bearing non-saint names; they often compromised by assigning to a newcomer a saint name that seemed to be of close similarity. Hence, the previously mentioned Patsy Hay (see note 24) was identified in clerical

HARRY J. KREBS

Died - Pascagoula lost a life long citizen Sunday in the death of Mr. Harry J. Krebs, who died in College Hill Sanitarium in Mobile Sunday morning, Jan. 10, at 6:45, after an illness of some months. He had been in the sanitarium for the past three months and his death was not unexpected.

The funeral was held from his late residence of the deceased, 431 Porter Street, on Tuesdy afternoon, Jan. 12, at 3:30 o'clock, with interment in Machpelah Cemetery. Father Hunter of the Church of Our Lady of Victories, performed the last offices of the church, Mr. Krebs having been a Catholic all his life. A long line of cars, conveying a large number of relatives and friends of the Krebs family, followed the remains to the grave, which ws almost hidden by the large number of beautiful floral offerings, sent by friends from many towns.

Mr. Krebs was 62 years of age, was born and reared in Pascagoula and lived here all his life. In his early days he was chief deputy sheriff and jailor, under the late Arthur H. Smith. A kind Providence allowewd him to live to see his son, J. Guy Krebs, elected as sheriff of the county, but his last illness prevented him seeing Guy installed as a county officer. Deceased has been in business here since early manhood, his last business being that of the Krebs Meat Market, which he relinquished to his son several months ago on account of ill health.

Deceased is survived by his widow and four children, as follows: J. Guy Krebs, of Pascagoula, Lewis H. Krebs of Kansas City, Mrs. R. G. (Stella) Butler of Pascagoula, and Mrs. Mabel Nielsen of New York City. There are also several grandchildren and a large connection of other relatives.

Died - The sudden death of the above citizen of Pascagoula, the news of which came by wire Thursday morning, was a great shock to the many friends of deceased in this community,where he has lived, with few months exception, since about 1905. Mr. Hibbler's death was sudden, occurring in a Shreveport, La., hotel just after he had come in from a trip into the country around Shreveport on his real estate business, and after he had eaten a hearty supper and apparently was feeling as well as usual. The funeral will take place in West Point, Miss., the boyhood home of deceased, today Friday, at two o'clock p.m.

T. G. Hibbler, Tol, as he was known to his intimate friends was one of the best known men in Pascagoula, being always a booster in real estate and having abiding faith in the future of this section. He was born in West Point, Miss., fifty-one years ago, and graduated in the law department of John Bose, superintendent, said that water was over the tracks for twenty miles outside of Montgomery and until he flood subsided it would be impossible to repair the track. The regular passenger service between here and Montgomery will be maintained except that the New York limited trains No. 37 and 38 have been annulled. Trains on this road ran irregularly Thursday but Mr. Bose stated that the passenger service between New Orleans and Montgomery would be normal Friday. No tickets he said, would be sold for points on the other side of Mobile.

DEATH OF B. B. KREBS.

Mr. B. B. Krebs, a prominent citizen of this community, died at his home at East Side Wednesday evening at 6:45 o'clock, following a brief illness of pneumonia, aged 65 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ophelia Bishop Krebs, and twelve children: Mrs. George Murrill, of Mobile, Mrs. Tony Ankerson, of Mobile, Mrs. William Brondum, Mrs. George Sides, Messrs. John, Joseph, Hugh, Lloyd, Otis and Leo Krebs, and Misses Hannah and Vivian Krebs of this city, eleven grandchildren and a large number of relatives throughout this community and in Alabama. Mr. Krebs was a man of sterling character, highly respscted throughout the county and a devoted member of the Catholic church. He was a contractor by profession being regarded as one of the most proficient builders in this vicinity and standing high in the estimation of his co-workers. The funeral took place from his late residence at 2:30 Friday afternoon, proceeding to Our Lady of Victories Catholic church, and thence to Machpelah for interment, Rev. Father B. O'Reilly, pastor, officiating. A large number of relatives and friends attended the services at the home and cemetery, and many beautiful floral offerings attested the high esteem in which he was held.

...trance from ... supervision of ... and Leona Nelson, ... former, the first grade ... about 17, have been assigned to Miss Nelson, who takes the second grade in the forenoon and the first grade in the afternoon, leaving Miss Meriwether about 70, whom she takes in morning and afternoon divisions.

At the Beach, to relieve the two teachers somewhat, an assistant, Miss Cox, has been employed for the forenoon of each day. She gives full time to the second grade, dismissing them at noon, thus affording the other teachers more time for individual attention.

Stoves have been installed in all the schools now and the reasonable comfort of the pupils in bad weather is assured. A fire drill has been instituted at Central and will be systematically carried out. A fire escape should be provided at the auxiliary school as soon as possible for the safety of the pupils on the second floor. (This has since been provided.)

There has been very little serious sickness among the pupils. Only one serious case is reported—Corinne Vaughn, who has pneumonia. The attendance as shown from the summary, has been good. The discipline has been good, resulting in good order. The spirit of the children toward their work is fine and I feel that I can conscientiously commend the resplts.

I will state in conclusion that I have kept in close touch with all the schools, visiting all the white schools at least once a week, sometimes oftener, and have visited the colored school at least twice a month. Conditions in the colored school have improved since last session. The patrons of this school deserve to be commended for building a concrete walk from the front gate to the school.

Respectfully submitted,

P. S. WALKER,
Superintendent.

The city school trustees meet monthly on Monday before the first Tuesday in the month, at 7 p. m., in the office of the superintendent at the Central School. At these meetings the trustees will hear complains or suggestions. Such matters must be presented in person or by writing.

During this period France and England were giving Italy all the aid they could, while Italy was paying the United States for her ammunition and $100.00 per ton for coal which she needed in her munition works. It was the inability of Italy to procure raw materials for her munition works that caused the collapse of Italy in Oct 1917

This work will be pushed to completion, being conducted from now on at Mr. Paterson's expense.

I hope that mature reflection over the situation in which the public utilities of the city actually are, will convince the people that a reasonable franchise authorizing rates based upon and proportioned to the greatly increased cost of labor and materials is not only just but necessary to enable any Company to operate those utilities.

Golden Wedding Of Mr. And Mrs. E. E. Krebs Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Krebs celebrated their golden wedding anniversary Sunday, April 27, with a reception at the home of their grandson and granddaughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ray Krebs.

Decorations were carried out entirely in yellow flowers throughout the house. In the center of the table stood a lovely three tiered wedding cake, appropriately decorated for the occasion.

Mrs. V. R. Krebs and Mrs. J. E. Krebs, both granddaughter-in-law of the celebrants, received the guests. During the receiving hours, punch and cake were served by Misses Catherine Buffet, Juanita Gentile, Janice Gentile and Joan Walker of Pascagoula; Miss Mary Flechas of Gulfport and Miss Victoria Flechas of Laurel.

On April 28, 1891, Miss Victoria Flechas became the bride of E. E. Krebs. The ceremony was performed at Our Lady of Victories church with Father Oliver officiating. The bridesmaids were, Miss Elizabeth Kee, Miss Virginia Flechas and Miss Blanche Charpeaux, all residents of Pascagoula at the time. Miss Charpeaux is now Mrs. Blanche Frentz of New Orleans. Mr. and Mrs. Krebs are both life long residents of Pascagoula. They have one son, Ray Krebs, and six grandchildren.

Out of town guests for this happy occasion were, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gregor, Misses Margaruete and Helena Murrill, Mrs. Lillian Murrill, Hunter S. Murrill, Jackson K. Murrill and George De Angelo of Mobile; Miss Victoria Flechas and Miss Dorothy Ann Martin of Laurel; Miss Anais Walker of Biloxi and Miss Mary Flechas of Gulfport.

M. E. Alexander, postmaster at Moss Point, stated yesterday afternoon that there was considerable interest in the purchase of both bonds and stamps in Moss Point.

ROTARIANS OF MOSS POINT HEAR OF CLINIC

Director Of Rotary's Crippled Adult Hospital In Memphis Tells Of Work Being Done

Wallace Chapman, a member of the Biloxi Rotary Club and a director of the Tri-State Clinic for Crippled Adults at Memphis, Tenn., was the principal speaker at the meeting of the Moss Point Rotary Club held today at noon at the Moss Point Community House.

Mr. Chapman in an interesting address told of the great work being done at this clinic, which is operated by the Rotary Clubs of Mississippi, Tennessee and Arkansas as a charitable institution. He outlined the procedures to be followed in getting patients into the institution. He spoke of the method of locating the cripples who need treatment to restore them to normal life; what to do to get them into the hospital and what to do after they are there. In each case, he outlined the procedure to be followed giving concrete examples, and case histories.

In this institution thousands of crippled adults have been restored the use of arms and limbs and cured of other mal-adjusted conditions. All surgical work in connection with the treatment of the patients sent there and diagnosis of their cases, is done free of charge by members of the clinic's staff.

Mr. Chapman also spoke of the work being done to aid crippled children in the state. This, however is handled through the Mississippi State Welfare Department in Jackson. The Rotarians can help in this work too, he stated, by following almost the same procedure as is used in locating and aiding the adults.

The members of the club voted to change the customary practice of giving a contribution of one cent for each year of his life, on the anniversary of his birthday and in the future the birthday gift will be five cents for each year. This money is placed in a special fund for carrying on the work of aiding crippled children.

The junior Rotarian for the month of May, selected from the senior class of the Moss Point High School, was introduced at the meeting. He is Harvey Hedegard of Paul Charbonette of Hattiesburg

Pascagoula Office Of MSES Has New Manager, F. H. Land

Jackson, Miss., May 1.—Two Mississippi Coast offices of the State Employment Service were substantially enlarged last week, according to Director Raymond L. Sullivan, to facilitate the referral of workers for jobs growing out of the national defense program.

At Pascagoula, where the employment service is largely responsible for securing labor for the continually expanding shipbuilding industry, and for the construction of a large housing project, the MSES has moved its office into larger and better equipped quarters, and raised it to Class I rank, with Fred H. Land, formerly of Jackson, as manager.

Manager Land is well qualified for his important post as head of the Pascagoula office, Director Sullivan commented in announcing his appointment, by his outstanding record as employment interviewer and counselor for the MSES since 1937.

Head of the Biloxi office is N. D. Gordon, who also has been with the MSES since 1937. Mr. Gordon was an interviewer in the Gulfport district office until July, 1938, when the Biloxi branch was opened under his charge.

"The public employment service is strictly a referral agency," Sullivan stated, doing no hiring whatsoever. It is the job of this agency to locate workers to suit the employers' needs, and through the public employment service's 1500 local offices, the entire Nation may be searched if necessary."

Business Woman's Circle Organized By Presbyterians

The Business Woman's Circle of the Presbyterian Church was organized Wednesday evening, April 22, at the home of Mrs. Ralph Hollister. Nine members were present and the following officers were elected: Mrs. Ralph Hollister, chairman; Mrs. Irma Evans, secretary-treasurer; Miss Maude Alice Murphy, Bible leader; Misses Catherine West and Kathleen Kell, program leaders. After the business meeting, Mrs. Hollister served her guests refreshments while a social hour was enjoyed.

Will of MARIE KREBS, the original being in French, here is translated from the French, and attested by Clerk of the Chancery, Wm. Denny to be a true copy: made at East Pascagoula, State of Misssissippi, County of Jackson:

This is my will:

I, undersigned, widow REME KREBS, born MARIE DUPONT, in sound mind having all my mental faculties, declared by the present act and signed by my own hand:

I name my beloved son JOSEPH H. KREBS my universal legatee. I willingly declare that: my last wish is that my son, Joseph H. Krebs will enter immediately after my death, in possessioon of all the furniture and objects without excepting one thing that is today my property aand belonging to the house - belonging to my son in which I reside today - the same Joseph H. Krebs will rightly enter in possession of all the animals, namely: horse, cows, calves, carriage, cart, plow and all the garden tools; in a word; all the objects furniture, animals, clothing, without exception that are today my property.

In consideration off which I sign with my hand before witnesses the present will, this day the nineteenth of April of the year eighteen hundred and eighty one.

Signed, Marie D. Krebs.

DEATH OF MR. H. M. KREBS.

Died at his home in East Side on Tuesday morning at 9:30 o'clock Mr. Helaire M. Krebs, aged 86 years and 4 days. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, proceeding to the Church of Our Lady of Victories, thence to Krebs cemetery for interment.

The death of Mr. Krebs removes from our midst one of the oldest settlers of Jackson county, having been born and reared in this city. Mr. Krebs in his early life followed the mercantile business here. He was a Confederate veteran, having served throughout the war in the Fifteenth Alabama Cavalry under command of Capt. Harry Maury.

Mr. Krebs is survived by his wife, six sons, Amelian, Ben F., Chas. L., R. R., Ed. E., Harry J., and one daughter, Mrs. C. A. Moore, besides a number of grand and great grandchildren. To the afflicted ones in their bereavement we extend sincere condolence.

THE PRENTISS LITERARY SOCIETY'S FIFTH ANNIVERSARY.

The fifth anniversary of the Prentiss Literary Society of the Central High School was celebrated Thursday night, Nov. 18th, by a splendid literary program rendered by the members of the senior class, interspersed with musical numbers under the direction of Miss Glennie Clark, directress of music in the city schools.

George Hague, '11, president of the society, presided, with Miss Bessie Gatti, '12, as secretary. The program was as follows:

"History of the Prentiss Literary Society," Miss Myrtle Lewis.

Declamation, "The First View of the Heavens," Will Champlin.

Recitation, "The Famine," Miss Frances Kell.

Debate, "Resolved, That Money Has More Influence Over Mankind Than Education." Affirmative, Tom Swartwout and Miss Maggie Cottrell; negative, Miss Rosa Champlin and Harold Gautier. The committee of judges, consisting of Hons. Guy D. Dean, L. E. Evans and C. E. Chidsey, decided in favor of the negative.

The musical program was participated in by Misses Glennie Clark, Irma Valverde, Rosa Champlin, Maggie Cottrell and Clara Baskin and Byron Clark.

The exercises were witnessed by a large and appreciative audience and the program from beginning to end was faultlessly carried out and reflected great credit on the young people as well as the school work of their department.

Later in the season the societies in the lower grades will give an entertainment in which their work will be fully exemplified.

Louise Krebs Kite

□ Louise Krebs Kite, 87, 1517 3rd St., Gulfport, died Wednesday, Jan. 9, 1991, in Gulfport.

Mrs. Kite was a native of Pascagoula. She was a member of Broadmoor Baptist Church and formerly very active in the Grace Memorial Baptist Church in Gulfport. She was a seamstress, formerly employed with Hewes Bros. Department Store and J.C. Penney in Gulfport.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Johnny Kite; a son, John A. Kite Jr., and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Krebs.

Survivors include a daughter, Mrs. Dorothy A. Camp of Gulfport; four sisters, Mrs. Johnnie Mae Borzik of Long Beach, Miss Elma Krebs and Mrs. Leona Torjusen of Gulfport, Mrs. Mildred Bardwell of Texas City, Texas; a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Dottie Kite of Vancleave; three grandchildren, John A. Camp of Fremont, Calif., John Andrew Kite III of Vancleave and Perian Kite of Gulfport; and two great-grandchildren.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Saturday at Riemann Funeral Home chapel in Gulfport, where friends may call from 12:30 p.m. until service time. Burial

Edgar E. Krebs

Edgar Emanuel Krebs, 63, retired plumber, was found dead about 10:20 p.m. on Saturday, Dec. 25, at his residence, 1306 32nd Ave., Gulfport, by J. W. Lofton.

A coroner's jury empaneled by Frank C. Hightower, Harrison County coroner, returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

The body is at Riemann Funeral Home in Gulfport where friends may call after 8:30 a.m. Tuesday. The funeral service will be held at 10 a.m. Tuesday at the chapel with the Rev. P. S. Dodge, Providence Baptist Church, officiating. Interment will be in Evergreen Cemetery.

Mr. Krebs was born in Pascagoula on June 26, 1902.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Genevieve Krebs, Saucier; two sons, Arthur E. Krebs, Long Beach, Calif.; and Edgar R. Krebs, Corpus Christi, Tex.; seven grandchildren; one brother, Werdna R. Krebs, Gulfport; and six sisters, Mrs. Leona Torjusen, Miss Elma Krebs, Mrs. Louise Kite, Mrs. Johnnie Mae Borzik, Gulfport; Mrs. Myrtle Hover, New Orleans; and Mrs. Mildred Bodwell, Texas City, Tex.

KREBS, ROBERT A.

Robert A. Krebs, a native of Pascagoula, who has been a resident of Gulfport for the past 20 years, was killed Friday at Gulfport and Mrs. Orial Jarrett, is in the Harrison county jail with a docket charge of murder against her in connection with the shooting.

It is alleged that Mrs. Jarrett and her husband, Robert P. Jarrett, who have been living in a car and trailer in which they had come to the coast, were allowed to live in a camp of which Krebs had charge. It seems that there were no witnesses to the shooting which the woman claims she did after a dispute over money matters in which Krebs slapped her.

Krebs is survived by his wife, Mrs. Annie Krebs; two sons. W. R. Krebs and E. E. Krebs, Gulfport; six daughters, Mrs. A. B. Torgusen, Mrs. J. A. Kite, Mrs. S. A. Hover, Miss Elma Krebs, Miss Johnnie May Krebs, Gulfport; Mrs. J. F. Dardwell, Yazoo City; his mother, Mrs. A. R. Krebs, New Orleans; four sisters, Mrs. Joseph Jemson, Ft. Neches, Tex.; Mrs. Will Caron, New Orleans; Mrs. D. D. Weaver, Houston, Tex.; Mrs. Aristide Harrington, Memphis, Tenn.; two brothers Kenneth and Sink Krebs, Houston Tex., and 10 grandchildren. ch.

From miniature painted on ivory of which enlarged photographic oil reproduction hange in the Old Fort & Museum at Pascagoula.

Crude cotton gins existed on many Southern plantations in the late 18th century, but Hugo Krebs' obviously superior machine would have qualified him for the title "inventor" of that device. Instead, his refusal to tell Romans how his machine worked left the way open for Eli Whitney, a Yankee tutor on a Georgia plantation, to claim that accolade in 1794. From Franklin L. Riley, School History of Mississippi, 1915. Courtesy, Gulfport Library

Dear Betty,

Thanks so much for the papers you sent. So far I haven't had the time to really go over all the papers we got at Mobile & Pascagoula, just get them filed into folders this week.

I am enclosing some group sheets that I hope you file at the library, I noticed you didn't have any group sheets in the folder. Also see if you can get the address from the enclosed sheet. I cut the top off when I copied it there at the library and would like to get in touch with the lady to see about MARIE JENNE LaFLEUR, maybe 1 of my lines.

Thanks again for the papers.

Sincerely,

Peggy

LOCAL NEWS.

—On and after April 11, 1887, fast freights, Nos. 71 and 72, will have a coach attached between Mobile and Scranton, for the accommodation of passengers,—leaving Mobile at 8:[illegible] p.m., arriving at Scranton at 11:10 p.m.; returning leave Scranton at 1:26 a.m., arriving in Mobile at 4:35 a.m.

C. Marshall, Supt.

—The drouth is ended.

—Plenty of rain and cool east wind.

—Mayor S. R. Thompson visited New Orleans Monday.

—Mr. E. D. Mansfield, our city marshal, was a visitor to Mobile this week.

—The game law so far as it relates to the hunting of deer, expired on the 15th inst.

—Capt. H. Colle, who has been quite ill at his home in this place for a week or ten days, is, we are glad to state recovering.

—Capt. P. K. Mayers and wife are stopping at Blount Springs, Ala., for recuperation. They will return this (Friday) evening.

—The wedding bells threaten to ring. It is never too late to do good. The old shoe fitteth best and pincheth not. The good shoemaker never stoppeth short of a mate.

—A party of Scranton gentlemen went out to the eastern islands on a fishing and hunting jaunt aboard the two masted schooner of Mr. M. V. B. Carey's last week. They had good luck and a gay time.

—We are requested to call a meeting of the fruit and vegetable growers of Scranton and vicinity to be held at the Court-house Monday evening at 4 o'clock to consider the question of organizing a fruit and vegetable growers association.

—After a vacation of several weeks Master Willie J. Parker, of this place, returned this week to his studies in the A. & M. College at Starkville.

—If that interesting chap, "Chip-[illegible]" will "get his hair cut" we will pay for it if it takes our last nickle. [illegible]

—Our ship yards are crowded with work. Ship owners are finding out that work can be done here [illegible] than at Mobile or any [illegible] and are taking advantage of the difference. Several large vessels of Mobile, among them the Alabama and Anderson, have recently had their work done [illegible]

[illegible] less than cost and place them on the market at the actual cost of placing them in its depository. Each person becoming a member of the auxiliary is to pay an initiation fee of one dollar. The funds thus raised are to be applied to purchasing from the parent society a supply of bibles to be sold as before stated. This stock is to be placed at some book house, and when they are sold the proceeds to be applied to purchasing another stock and so on ad infinitum. An executive committee of the auxiliary will attend to the selling and repurchasing, and report progress at each meeting of the auxiliary, which need not occur more than once a year.

We commend this project to every God loving and charitably inclined citizen of Jackson county. Every family ought to be supplied with a bible and it is the duty of every christian as well as christianity to see that the poor are supplied with them, and no better opportunity for so doing could be thought of than that now proposed by the American Bible Society.

We are authorized to state that there will be a mass meeting at the Presbyterian Church at Moss Point next Sunday night for the purpose of organizing a county auxiliary. All interested are cordially invited to attend. Remember it is undenominational.

A number of names have already been enrolled. Some nine or ten were obtained here though the congregation Sunday night was small.

—Cage Barnett, the notorious colored burglar who has been wanted in Mobile for some time and who was a frequent visitor to this place last winter, was captured and taken to Mobile on the 14th inst. He was tried before Mayor Owen and two cases of burglary and one of larceny made out against him, for which he was held in default of bonds of $300 in each case, and on another charge of attempted robbery was committed without bail. Cage was chased from here several times by Sheriff Clark and posse but was always successful in making his escape. He was charged with several house breakings and was thought to be responsible for nearly all the burglaries here last winter. Capt. Thomas R. Jernigan, who was appointed to a Chinese mission last year by President Cleveland which office he now holds in China. Our young friend goes to Newton to bid farewell to his mother and two most loveable sisters who will leave for China to join his father in a short time.

—Buy the best ice and ice cold beer by the cask or keg, from Hudson Bros., sold at New Orleans prices and delivered free.

—On Monday, October 3, 1887, a Garden Party will be given at the Hebrard Place, now occupied by Mr. M. Matlock, for the benefit of St. Mark's Episcopal Mission, Scranton, Miss. Music and refreshments throughout the evening. Admission 10 cents, children 5 cents. All are cordially invited to attend.

—After a long and painful illness Miss Corinne Krebs, of this place, died last Monday at the residence of her brother, Mr. H. M. Krebs. Miss Krebs was an aged maiden lady and having been for some time in a low state of health her death was not unexpected. The funeral took place Tuesday evening from the residence of her brother, attended by many friends and acquaintances. We extend our sympathy to the sorrowing relatives.

—Miss Corinne Girard and brother, Master Ernest Girard, of Scranton, formerly of this place, are visiting Mrs. A. R. Murphy. Master Ernest leaves in a few days for the Gulf Coast College, of which school he is a pupil.—Mobile Item.

COUNTY BIBLE SOCIETY.

Moss Point, Miss., Sept. 30, 1887.

Editor Democrat-Star:

Dear Sir: On last Sabbath Rev. J. W. McLaurin, superintendent of bible work in Mississippi and Louisiana for the American Bible Society, preached in the Methodist Church in this place, and at the close of the service organized (partially) an auxiliary bible society for this county with Mr. Moses Goff as President, Dr. H. L. Howze, Vice President, Mr. Mack Evans, Secretary and Mr. Dan McLeod, Treasurer.

Every person who pays any amount, however small, becomes a member of the society for one year.

The object of the parent society and of all its auxiliaries is to increase the circulation of the Word of God, by sale and donation. On next Sabbath night another meeting will be held in the Presbyterian [illegible]

I am wondering if it is all right for me to print up a few offset copies of the Baron's "photo and use them in some future family history – I also might tint a few, if I can work it out, in the original colors –

I am enclosing copies of the Krebs and La Pointe Senac charts with I am including in my new book "Saga of Felix Senac" which I have just finished and am now in process of binding and mailing out. The data I included was as much as I could get on a single page so as to show the relationships of persons in the "Saga" biography. I have Zillion's more Krebs, etc, which will require some additional sheets to carry further. Thanks for everything, Regina

Pascagoula river plantations in which he illustrates in some detail the plantation of the Sr. De la Pointe and the Chaumont Concession (see figure 17).[31] This drawing is somewhat earlier than the one of the Chouachas, for a notation on the back records that it "came with the letter of M. de La Chaise of the 30 October, 1726." The Krebs house at Pascagoula, already mentioned, is said to have been part of this De la Pointe plantation (see figure 18), but it is not readily identifiable from Dumont's sketch. It is significant that in both the properties illustrated here, two-storied, galleried buildings are shown as had been shown in the 1719 sketch of Dauphin Island whereas such buildings did not at first appear in New Orleans.

In New Orleans, building techniques advanced through the various forms of wood construction to half-timbered structures with brick-between-posts. Not until 1730, when Pierre Baron built a new prison on the Place d'Armes was the first all-brick building constructed.[32]

This was followed in 1732 by great brick barracks buildings flanking the public square[33] and other private houses of brick. The heavy weight of these all-masonry structures presented structural difficulties and eventually buildings with a first story of brick and the upper one of brick-between-posts came to be favored.

One of the most significant structures of brick-between-posts was the large, three-story convent built for the Ursuline Nuns when they arrived in the colony in 1727 (See figure 19).[34] Ignace François Broutin, who had become acting engineer-of-the-King after Pauger's death in 1726, designed the building; Pierre Baron re-designed it in his own favorite style, where the handsome timber framing of the brick-between-posts construction was left exposed as a picturesque decorative element. Impractical in the damp climate, the convent soon deteriorated and had to be replaced by a new building. Broutin designed this new all brick building in 1745; Bernard Deverges, engineer-in-chief of Louisiana after Broutin's death in 1751, completed it in 1752. This impressive, dignified, Louis XV style building still stands, the only known building surviving intact from the French colonial period (see figure 20). Inside, the great cypress staircase, constructed of heavy timbers with decorative carvings of acanthus leaves and its wrought iron handrail, was reused from the earlier convent of 1727-1734 (see figure 21). This is perhaps the earliest artifact of French colonial production in Louisiana.[35] The lead

During the Dark Ages, German natives in remote northern Bohemia originated an art form in glassblowing which not only holds a unique place in the 4000 year history of this ancient art, but has become a cherished part of Christian tradition. The Germans had learned this skill (a heritage of Egypt) from wandering Venetian tradesmen. They used it to create glass ornaments for adornment of the Tannenbaum (fir tree) in their Yule celebration of the winter sun solstice. Early Christians adapted this custom of decorating the evergreen to their celebration of the birth of Christ, and thus the Christmas tree was born. Down through the centuries the German glass blowers of Bohemia became famous throughout the world for their blown glass Christmas tree ornaments.

Towards the end of the 17th century many of the German glass blowers migrated from Bohemia to Thuringia, Germany, which became the center of blown glass Christmas ornaments for over 250 years. However, the root of early glass blowers remained in Bohemia where beautiful ornaments were produced. After World War II all Bohemians of German extraction were expatriated. The Krebs family settled in Rosenheim, Bavaria, West Germany, at the foot of the Alps, one of the last to continue the tradition.

Through difficult post war years, the family managed to build a production of traditional ornaments, which is now recognized as the largest of its kind in Europe. The Krebs family developed exclusive colors and designs, for which they have become famous throughout the free world. The new American plant continues to enlarge and enhance this tradition. Signifying their pride for quality, they decorate each of their ornaments with the crown cap, which evolved as their trademark.

The Golden Wedding of Mr. HILAIRE KREBS and Mrs. MARIE LOUISE KREBS was on Monday celebrated in the Catholic Church with unusual solemnity. The ceremonies had been announced for 9 o'clock a. m. but at a much earlier hour the sacred edifice was thronged with invited guests. While the aged but still vigorous pair walked up the aisle to the altar, a beautiful march pealed forth from the organ under the accomplished touch of Miss ALBA POL.

The eyes of eleven children and fifty-three grandchildren followed with reverent and filial affection, their stately approach to the foot of the altar. There they were met by the Pastor, Rev. C. A. Oliver, assisted by Rev. Father V. Bally of Pass Christian, who performed the usual ceremonies of matrimonial celebration.

High Mass succeeded during which the choir assisted by Rev. Father Bally then spoke in feeling and eloquent terms most appropriate to the occasion.

Century-old house stands at 4213 Dantzler Street

MICHAEL AND Janet Flowers were recognized for the work they have been doing to restore their 100-year-old house. Located at 4213 Dantzler Street, the house is near the old Moss Point foundry and tan yard.

It is built of cypress and heart pine and was once the home of John F. Krebs, an executive of Pascagoula-Moss Point Bank. Jobe Carter, town marshal in the 1930s, was another owner of the house.

Stairs were added in 1986 to make this a two-story home. The attic was then renovated into two bedrooms and a bath with a balcony embracing the stairwell. The downstairs features a living room, dining room, combination kitchen/TV room, a large master bedroom, bath and office/library.

Cirlot said the awards are a continued effort to instill pride in the people of the community to preserve the traditions and beauty of Moss Point.

The awards will be made every July, Cirlot said.

be compleatly formed and the pods fit to gather, which will be known by their being compleatly expanded; it must now be carried to the mill of which take the following description.

It is a strong frame of four studs, each about four feet high and joined above and below by strong transverse pieces; across this are placed two round well polished iron spindles, having a small groove through their whole length, and by means of treddles are by the workman's foot put in directly opposite motions to each other; the workman sits before the frame having a thin board, of seven or eight inches wide and the length of the frame, before him; this board is so fixed to the frame that it may be moved, over again, and near the spindle; he has the cotton in a basket near him, and with his left hand spreads it on this board along the spindles which by their turning draw the cotton through them being wide enough to admit the cotton, but too near to permit the seed to go through, which being thus forced to leave the cotton in which it was contained, and by its rough coat entangled; falls on the ground between the workmans legs while the cotton drawn through falls on the other side into an open bag suspended for that purpose under the spindles.

The French in Florida have much improved this machine by a large wheel, which turns two of these mills at once, and with so much velocity as by means of a boy, who turns it, to employ two negroes at hard labour to shovel the seed from under the mill: One of these machines I saw at Mr. Krebs at Pasca Oocooloo, but as it was partly taken down, he claiming the invention was very cautious in answering my questions, I cannot pretend to describe it accurately; I am informed that one of those improving mills will deliver seventy or eighty pounds of clean cotton per diem.

The packing is done in large canvas bags, which must be wetted as the cotton is put in, that it may not hang to the cloth and may slide better down; the bag is suspended between two trees, posts or beams and a negro with his feet stamps it down; these bags are made to contain from three hundred and fifty to four hundred weight; with about twenty slaves moderately working a very large piece of poor ground might be finely improved so as to yield to its owner a fine annual income by means of a staple which is much in demand in England, and here is raised by no means inferior in whiteness and fineness as well as length of fibres to that of the Levant.

[illegible]ire, Derbyshire, [illegible] Cheshire that consume this beneficial commodity either alone or in mixture with silk, wool, flax, &c. and that England imports all the rough materials from abroad (chiefly from the Levant) to so great an amount as near 400,000 l. sterling value, we may perhaps find it worthy of a more universal propagation; i shall, in hopes that this may take place, give the method of culture and of cleaning this produce of our earth.

The natural history of the plant and its characters, species and varieties will be found in the botanical account.

Cotton will grow in any soil, even the most meagre and barren sand we can find.

The sort we must cultivate here is the Gossypium Anniversarium or Xylon Herbaceum; also known by the name of green seeded cotton, which grows about four or five feet in height. Give this plant a dry soil and further it will cost you little trouble or attention; it must be planted in rows at regular distances about six feet apart; plant the seed in rainy weather and in about five months time the fibres will be compleatly formed and the pods fit to gather, which will be known by their being compleatly expanded; it must now be carried to the mill of which take the following description.

It is a strong frame of four studs, each about four feet high and joined above and below by strong transverse pieces; across this are placed two round well polished iron spindles, having a small groove through their whole length, and by means of heddles are by the workman's foot put in directly opposite motions to each other; the

The funeral took place from her late residence on Porter Avenue Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock, proceeding to the Church of Our Lady of Victories, of which church deceased was a life-long member, and thence to Krebs cemetery for interment, Father B. O'Reilly conducting the services.

Mrs. Krebs went to New Orleans for treatment and was en route to the Louisville and Nashville station to return home when stricken with a fainting spell, death following in a few minutes. Her husband preceded her to the grave about two years. She was the mother of thirteen children, seven of whom survive her, viz: E., H. and B. B. Krebs of East Side, Miss., J. J., C. L., E. E., H. J. Krebs and Mrs. C. A. Moore, all of Pascagoula. Her grandchildren number forty-five and her great-grandchildren twenty-four.

Letter to P. Krebs,

Scranton, Miss.

Dear Sir: A pound of good meat and no bone is worth more than a half-pound of meat and a half-pound of bone; but there are, as you say, a great many people who won't pay more than a certain price by the pound. Give 'em bone; that's right; give 'em plenty of bone!

There are people who won't pay more than $1.50 a gallon for paint; give 'em bone!

There's no better school than experience; cost is high; but the lesson is never forgotten.

Let a man paint two houses alike, same size; one Devoe, the other that $1.50 paint. He buys 10 gallons of each, and pays to a day for labor—$3 a day is $3 a gallon, easier reckoning.

He has to buy two gallons more of the $1.50 paint; and has two gallons left of Devoe; 10 gallons $1.50, $18; 8 gallons $1.75, $14; 24 more for "cheap" paint.

He pays $3 a gallon for painting—8 gallons $24; 12 gallons $36; $12 more for painting "cheap" paint.

He'll buy the less gallons paint after that. If people are slow to learn, it's because they keep on buying bone-meat. Give 'em plenty of bone.

Yours truly,

F. W. DEVOE & CO.

DEATH OF MRS. YELVERTON

Mrs. Virginia Pauline Yelverton died at 10:30 o'clock last Saturday night at the residence of her niece, Mrs. M. E. Chanteraut on Spring street. She was in the seventy-fifth year of her age. Interment took place Sunday afternoon in Krebs cemetery, Rev. Father Fontain, S. J., officiating. Mrs. Yelverton was a devout and consistent member of the Catholic church, for which she worked unceasingly. Her life until incapacitated by the fatal and lingering illness which ended her days was one of unselfish devotion to family and friends. She was a native of Pascagoula and a daughter of the late Rene Krebs and Marie Dupont. Deceased is survived by one sister, Mrs. J. P. Sarrasin of New Orleans.

~~One of Pascagoula's old landmarks has passed to his reward. Mr. Savien Raby, aged 82 years, died on Sunday morning at 2:30 o'clock at his home in East Side. Deceased was a son of the late Ursin Raby and Marianne Dupont. He was a good citizen and a member of the Catholic church. Besides his wife, he leaves two sons, Messrs. Ruths and Ursin Raby, and a brother and sister, Mr. Harry Raby and Mrs. H. M. Krebs, respectfully. The services at the residence and grave were conducted by Rev. Father McGuire. The interment was made in Krebs cemetery. 7-19-1907~~

Aged Lady Dead.

Mrs Thos Stiglets, aged 79 years, 7 months and 11 days died at her home in South Pascagoula Street Wednesday afternoon after a long illness due to old age. The body was carried to Biloxi for interment Thursday morning on the 8 o'clock L. & N. train. She was a very estimable woman, deeply religious and a devout member of the Catholic church. She is survived by three sons, Warren Stiglets of Georgia and Charles and Peter Stiglets of Pascagoula, and two daughters, Mrs. Agatha Kennedy and Miss Louise Stiglets of Pascagoula. She also leaves a sister, Mrs. Sarah Abley, of Biloxi, besides several grandchildren and other relatives.

DEATH OF MRS. YELVERTON.

8-17-1916

Mrs. Virginia Pauline Yelverton died at 10:15 o'clock last Saturday night at the residence of her niece, Mrs. M. E. Chantorant on Spring street. She was in the seventy-fifth year of her age. Interment took place Sunday afternoon in Krebs cemetery. Rev. Father Fontain, S. J., officiating. Mrs. Yelverton was a devout and consistent member of the Catholic church, for which she worked unceasingly. Her life, until incapacitated by the fatal and lingering illness which ended her days, was one of unselfish devotion to family and friends. She was a native of Pascagoula and a daughter of the late Rene Krebs and Marie Dupont. Deceased is survived by one sister, Mrs. J. P. Sarrasin, of New Orleans.

DEATH OF MR. H. M. KREBS.

Died at his home in East Side on Tuesday morning at 9:20 o'clock Mr. Helaire M. Krebs, aged 48 years and 4 days. The funeral took place Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock, proceeding to the Church of Our Lady of Victories, thence to Krebs cemetery for interment.

The death of Mr. Krebs removes from our midst one of the oldest settlers of Jackson county, having been born and reared in this city. Mr. Krebs in his early life followed the mercantile business here. He was a Confederate veteran, having served throughout the war in the Fifteenth Alabama Cavalry under command of Capt. Harry Maury.

Mr. Krebs is survived by his wife, six sons, Amellan, Ben B., Chas. L., R. R., Ed. E., Harry J., and one daughter, Mrs. Orb Moore, besides a number of grand and great grandchildren. To the afflicted ones in their bereavement we extend sincere condolence.

THE MEN, THE YEARS: WHERE HAVE THEY GONE?

THE LIFE OF FELIX VOORHIES

*By Ruth T. Grant

FELIX VOORHIES was born on the first day of the year 1830. His life, a span of more than eighty colorful and fulfilling years, began and ended in his beloved and tradition-filled Attakapas country. His roots lay deep in the soil of Europe; his progeny have blossomed across the face of America.

This distinguished South Louisiana citizen traced his ancestry to Coerte-Albert Van-Voorhies, who, prior to the year 1600, resided in front of the village of Hees (as the name Voorhies indicates) near the town of Ruinen, in the province of Deuthe, Holland. A son of this same Coerte-Albert Van-Voorhies, Steven Coerte Van-Voorhies, emigrated from Holland in the early 1600s and settled in Flatland, Long Island, New York, where he held public office. His son, the first of the American generations to follow, was Coerte Steven Van-Voorhies, baptised January 23, 1678, at Flatland, Long Island, New York. He married Antie Remsen and became the father of Cornelius Van-Voorhies, who married Aeltic Couvenhoven and moved to New Jersey, settling five miles south of Princeton. Their son, Dan Van-Voorhies, (1) born March 9, 1749, in South Brunswick, New Jersey, served as an officer in the American Revolution. He and his wife, Eva Couvenhoven, were the parents of another Cornelius Voorhies, who traveled to and settled in South Louisiana. (2)

The first settler in the Attakapas country married Aimée Gradenigo, (3) descendant of a Venetian family who migrated to the Techeland and gained title to land on the east bank of that bayou a few miles below the present town of Leonville. (4) Their son, Cornelius, was born in 1803. (5) He married Cidalise Mouton, daughter of Jean Mouton, son of the

*Extracted from "The Life and Writings of Judge Félix Voorhies," a thesis by Ruth Tilly Grant, L.S.U., 1940. Mrs. Grant, the former Ruth Emily Tilly of New Iberia, received her B.A. degree from S.L.I. in 1933 and the Masters degree from L.S.U. in 1940. Mrs. Grant now resides in Mandeville.

1. This spelling of the family name is evidently the first change from the original Dutch spelling.

2. The prefix "Van" (of the) has now been dropped from the name.

3. Church records (Opelousas Church, Vol. 1, p. 22) show that Cornelius Voorhies's wife was baptised Agatha Amato (sometimes Agatha Armée) May 14, 1780, at the age of three ½ months. She was the daughter of Jean Gradenigo of Venice, Italy, and Marguerite Krepps (Krebs) of Pensacola. Cornelius and Aimée were married August 2, 1803. One entry lists his parents as Daniel Voorhies and Sara Gordon. Donald J. Hebert, Southwest Louisiana Records, 2nd ed. (Privately printed, 1976), Vol. 1.

4. Jean Gradenigo married Marguerite Krebs March 17, 1766, Mobile Church, Vol. Vi, p. 49. The Opelousas general census of 1777 lists husband, wife, and five children (not Agatha Armée) living in the area. Jacqueline Voorhies, Some Late Eighteenth Century Louisianians (Lafayette, La., 1973), p. 288. The fact that the only animals he owned were two horses indicates that he was engaged in cultivation. Jean Gradenigo died in 1809 at the age of 80. After 1807, his son, Augustin, claimed title, through occupancy and cultivation to a tract containing 274 acres of land on the east bank of Bayou Teche just across and above the land granted to John L. Zeringue. Louisiana Register of State Land Claims, Certificate B 204. For location, see Gertrude C. Taylor, Land Grants Along the Teche, Part I (Lafayette, La., 1979).

5. Opelousas church records show that Cornelius Voorhies was baptised October 1804, at the age of 3 months. Hebert, Southwest Louisiana Records, I, 569. He died in St. Martinville, July 2, 1859, age 55. Ibid., V.

Albin Krebs recalls 1951:

Editor wrote for integration with Southern grace, got boos and catcalls at Ole Miss graduation

By JUDY JOHNSON
Coastlines Editor

The one member of the local group of Ole Miss alumni who will not attend the reunion of Mississippian/Daily Mississippian editors and staffers is Albin Krebs, who in 1951 became Pascagoula's first Mississippian editor.

"There were a lot of things that were fun," he said, "but there were a lot of things that weren't fun. I don't want to stir up any bad feelings, so I think I'll pass."

Krebs had to endure catcalls and boos when he stood to receive his diploma at commencement exercises, and was the target of mob violence during his senior year.

The cause was an editorial urging the campus to accept the inevitability of integration with a measure of Southern grace.

"I was torn about returning to the campus for the reunion," Krebs said recently in a phone interview from New York.

Krebs is a senior writer and editor with the New York Times.

"There are so many old friends I'd like to see, but I don't want to cause anyone, including myself, any embarrassment," he said. "The same thing might happen that happened the last time I visited the campus. I wouldn't want that."

Krebs was last on the campus of Ole Miss in the fall of 1953, two years after he had graduated. He had returned for homecoming weekend, taking time off from his duties in the U.S. Air Force.

"I was standing on the campus, just outside one of the main campus buildings, I forget which one, when I realized this man across the street was yelling at me," he said.

The campus comptroller, Chuck Trotter, was shrieking epithets at Krebs, trying to stir up passers-by to do the same.

"There I was, in a uniform of the United States Armed Forces, and this man was screaming at me, saying really awful things," Krebs said. "I thought after two years, maybe it would have all quieted down. Apparently, I was wrong."

In 1951, during his senior year and his tenure as Mississippian editor, Krebs wrote what he calls "a very unpopular editorial."

"I simply predicted the changes that I saw coming," he said. "Anyone who cared to look could see integration was going to become a fact. I said that we should be graceful and accept the change; that it was the right and just thing to do."

After the editorial, he was threatened, spat upon and yelled at. His roommate moved out, and he couldn't find anyone else to share a room with him.

Krebs says the most frightening thing of all was the near-riot staged one evening in front of his dormitory, when "a bunch of hot-headed punks burned a cross on the lawn in front of Sam Hall.

"My room was on the second floor of the dorm, at the front of Sam Hall, and I was walking back to my room one evening," Krebs recalled. "I saw a crowd gathered out front, and I wondered what was going on.

"I nosed over into the crowd, to try to find out what everyone was celebrating. When I realized that it was all about me, I started to get a little shaky.

"I slipped out of the crowd and went up to my room. My roommate, who moved out soon after, had turned out all the lights in our room, and was sitting there in the dark.

"I looked out the window, and the crowd starting yelling things, like 'Okay, let's get 'im,' and then the mob started surging toward the entranceways. I didn't know what was going to happen next."

What happened next was Rocky Byrd.

Then a junior at Ole Miss, Byrd was also from Pascagoula. He was a star of the Rebel football team, and Rocky hadn't liked what he had seen developing that afternoon.

"Rocky saved my life," Krebs said. "It's that simple. He had seen what might happen, and he had gone to the football team and organized the players to come defend me.

"Now, a few weeks before I wrote the integration editorial, I had written one that said athletes shouldn't get all the perks they get on campus. You know, special dorms, special classes, special food.

"So, I wasn't the most popular person in the world with the football players. But out of a sense of sportsmanship and fair play, and out of a sense of loyalty to Rocky, they stood in the doorways of Sam Hall and kept that mob from coming in to get me.

"It was the most wonderful display of sportsmanship I've ever seen. And it's something I'll never forget — one Pascagoula guy coming to the aid of another."

The rest of the year was pretty much downhill, too, Krebs said. The worst moment came when he stood to receive his diploma during commencement exercises.

"Things were shouted from the audience, and there were boos and hisses," he said. "I'll never forget that.

"I'd like to attend the reunion, but I wouldn't want to go and be disruptive. I want everyone to have a good time, and they might not be able to with me around to remind them of things. I don't want any unpleasantness, for me or for them."

Krebs also remembers plenty of good times during his year as editor of the Mississipian, especially the campus's first beauty contest, which he calls "one of the great things about my editorship of the Mississippian."

"The newspaper decided to sponsor the first Miss Ole Miss contest, a preliminary to the Miss Mississippi and Miss America pageants," he said. "One of my high school classmates, Katherine Wright (now Mrs. Bill Hunt), was in the contest. It was the first beauty pageant she had ever entered in her life, and she won.

"Not only that, she went on to win the state title, and to become first alternate to Miss America that year. And she was our state's first Miss Hospitality, too.

"That first pageant was a Pascagoula thing all the way, and it was really fun."

ALBIN KREBS, before he shipped out for Korea, after finishing his days at Ole Miss.

ALBIN KREBS today is a senior writer and editor for The New York Times.

Krebs has put his training to good use, rising through the ranks at the Times to his present post, which may be unique in American journalism.

"I'm the chief advance obituary writer for the Times," he said. "That means I write obituary notices of very important people, prior to their deaths, and keep them on file for when they will be needed.

"It's a unique position to be in. Often they tell me things that are strictly for publication only after they're gone."

His subjects are among the most important people in American society. "Unless you're worth at least two columns in the Times, I probably won't do your obituary," he said.

One of the most detailed obituaries he has written was for former President Lyndon Baines Johnson. It took up four pages in the newspaper, and consisted of 68,000 words. "We're talking book length," Krebs said. "I interviewed LBJ for that one.

He has also done obituaries of Noel Coward and Louis Armstrong, and dozens of other notables from all walks of life. "I have several in the can that I can't mention," he said. "I call them my clients, and I treat them with great respect."

Krebs also hands out assignments in his specialty and serves as an editor in other areas of the paper. "Primarily, I guide the newspaper's program of advance obituaries," he said.

He's also sanguine about his own importance. "When I die I'll probably rate only a couple of paragraphs, so I won't be responsible for my own obituary," he said. "I'm not important enough."

Pas journalist remembered as progressive thinker

By BRAD CROCKER
Mississippi Press Staff

PASCAGOULA — The late Albin J. Krebs was proof that the pen is mightier than the sword, and he had battle scars to prove it.

In the Oct. 27, 1950 issue of the University of Mississippi's campus newspaper, Krebs, a Pascagoula native and then editor of The Daily Mississippian, wrote an editorial demanding the integration of the university's law and graduate schools because such courses were not offered at that time to the state's historically black colleges.

He was labeled a radical and was booed at his 1951 commencement and threatened for his views 11 years before James Meredith graced the doors of Ole Miss as the university's first black undergraduate student.

"When given the full educational opportunities he deserves as a citizen of the state and nation, the Negro will raise his own standards," Krebs editorialized.

Krebs was 73 when he died May 31, 2002, in Key West, Fla., where in 1989 he had retired after a lengthy and distinguished career with The New York Times.

Anne Mansfield speaks with Stuart Bullion, Chairman of the Department of Journalism at The University of Mississippi, during a reception honoring Mansfield's brother, Albin Krebs, at The Longfellow House.

On Wednesday, more than 50 people gathered at The Longfellow House in Pascagoula where family and university officials announced a more than $186,000 endowment Krebs requested in his will to be used for a UM journalism scholarship fund and to honor his legacy and goodwill.

"He said he always printed the truth. And no matter who he worked for, if he couldn't print the truth, forget it."

— Anne Mansfield, Albin Krebs' sister

"This gift is further evidence of his eternal optimism for change and for recognition of the crucial role that young people play in the future of our state," said Circuit Judge Robert Krebs of Pascagoula, his nephew.

The university paper called him "easily (the hall of Fame's) most controversial character."

"Even in light of the estrangement that existed between him and the university for so many years, it never diminished his love for it and the people of this state."

Ole Miss Chancellor Robert Khayat, a Moss Point native, called Krebs "an extraordinary person who courageously challenged the status quo."

Krebs' gift "is going to have a dramatic impact on journalism in this state," Khayat added. "His gift will enable journalists to continue his remarkable legacy."

Albin Krebs' sister, Anne Mansfield of Pascagoula, said her brother's love for journalism began in Pascagoula when he served as editor of the school paper, The Panther Pen, and then later in the news department with The Chronicle Star, now The Mississippi Press, before moving on to larger markets.

"He was way ahead of his time," Mansfield recalled. "He said he always printed the truth. And no matter who he worked for, if he couldn't print the truth, forget it."

She said he took the fallout for his stance on race relations "like a man" and continued to do the right thing his whole life.

See KREBS, Page 8-A

"He was a good all-around person, that's all there was to it," she said.

Maurice Dantin was the university's student president and a fraternity brother of Krebs' and fellow member of the UM Hall of Fame.

Dantin called Krebs' 1951 editorial "a shocker back then, but he was a visionary. He didn't hesitate to say what he meant. Not many people were brave enough to do that, but he did."

Krebs was "an independent thinker with a lot of guts" who saw the inevitable direction race relations were taking, Dantin added.

Krebs began his full-time career in journalism in 1954 at The Times-Picayune in New Orleans. After a six-year stint with the United Press International in New York, he became associate editor of Newsweek magazine. He also worked at the New York Herald Tribune.

Perhaps his first big story was the 1956 sinking of the ocean liner Andrea Doria. He then covered civil rights strife in the 1960s in the South.

He served as a U.S. Air Force officer for three years after college, then earned his master's degree from Columbia School of Journalism and won a Pulitzer traveling fellowship.

At The New York Times, Krebs was chief advance obituary writer. He met national and world leaders, celebrities, artists, authors and other famous people. In 1986, he told The Mississippi Press about one of his most memorable subjects, President Lyndon B. Johnson, which ran for pages and contained 68,000 words in the Times.

"I want to say to my fellow Southerners, fellow Americans: Abandon many of the outdated, bigoted ideas they were born with and which they cling to simply and foolishly because Granddaddy did it that way."

— Albin J. Krebs

Others included Eudora Welty, Gene Autry, Truman Capote, Sir Alec Guiness, George Burns and many more.

"Albin Krebs was everything we hope Ole Miss journalism students and graduates will be," said Stuart Bullion, journalism department chair. "I am moved knowing his name will stand as a personal example for them."

Mansfield said her brother was always inquisitive, courageous and caring of other people. She said whenever friends from Pascagoula visited New York, "he always showed them a wonderful time. He was quite the gentleman."

In 1986, when the UM journalism department hosted an alumni reunion, Krebs declined to attend, recalling the treatment and threats he received for his stance. Despite those memories, Krebs remained a loyal supporter of the journalism department, Bullion said.

"In 1988, he and former department chair Will Norton endowed a scholarship fund in Krebs' name to benefit students from Jackson County."

That scholarship has helped 50 Jackson County residents pursue their dreams as professional journalists.

"In his work as a journalist, he fully understood the significant role played by writers in our society," Khayat said.

Krebs' words in 1951 were daggers during that time, but he said if he provoked just one person to think more openly, he had done his job.

"I want to say to my fellow Southerners, fellow Americans: Abandon many of the outdated, bigoted ideas they were born with and which they cling to simply and foolishly because Granddaddy did it that way," Krebs wrote. "If wanting to see this is being radical, I confess to being just that.

"If we are ever to face life intelligently and constructively, we must realize that in many cases, we should not propose to simply follow tradition, but to create it."

Alfred Ulysses Krebs (1907-1995), Paul Barnard Krebs (1909-2004) and Charles Adrian Krebs (1911-2004). Uncle Al married Sara Louise Kelly of Opp Alabama and they had two daughters Sara Kelly Krebs (1940-2002) and Julia Hightower Krebs (1950-- present).Uncle Al had three grandchildren at his death. My father (Paul Barnard) married Margaret Neilson McTyeire of Birmingham and they had six sons (Paul Barnard, Christopher Michael, Thomas Low, William Van, Mark and Alfred Edward), fourteen grandchildren and two great grandchildren at the time of his death. Uncle Charles Krebs married Sally Scott of Birmingham and they had two sons (Charles Adrian and Scott) and several grandchildren and great grandchildren at the time of his death.

The children, grandchildren and great grandchildren currently reside across the country but primarily in Alabama, Georgia, Florida, North Carolina and Virginia. There is great interest in the genealogy of the family especially in the Hugo Ernestus Krebs line and these research efforts are primarily done by one member in each of our family lines. Those specific people would be Tom Krebs in Birmingham AL (son of Paul), Charles Krebs Jr. in Virginia Beach VA (son of Charles) and especially Julia Hightower Krebs in Alexandria VA (daughter of Al). Julia has made numerous trips to the Pascagoula area and has quite a few documents providing historical trails. One such document is an asset distribution breakdown to heirs from the estate of Mrs. H.H. Krebs that was done in 1958. This list contains the names of at least 29 relatives.

If you will direct me in the proper direction, it would be a pleasure for me to pass that information on to the appropriate members of our "line". I know that we would all enjoy seeing the information that Rita Krebs has compiled and hopefully some of us can find our way back to the Pascagoula area in the near future. If anyone has information that they would like to forward on to us, they are welcome to use the KrebsFamilyHistory@gmail address to reach us.

Best regards,

Great. I am going to copy your e-mail for Rita Krebs. She will be delighted to know there are descendants still interested in the Krebs family history. Keep in touch. I am going to write about you in my next Reader's Response as follows:

Van Krebs found the May 6 readers response story as a result of a computer search on the "Krebs" name. Van said his family moved from the Pascagoula area in the early 1900's to the Birmingham, Ala., area but continues to have an interest in the family history. "We were amazed to hear some of the things that were handed down from grandparents and those stories were limited due to the passing of those relatives at fairly early ages," he said. "Various members of our family have done some research and we have of course reviewed both editions of ' Four Centuries on the Pascagoula' by Cyril Edward Cain and would love to find other copies of that series or any other similar books."

Van's father was Paul Barnard Krebs who was born in 1909. His grandfather was Paul S. Krebs. "I think that the "S" stands for Sarasine or Sarazine," he said. "My grandmother's name was Rosa. I believe that my grandfather had two brothers. My father had two brothers, Alfred U. Krebs and Charles A. Krebs." Van's full name is William Van deGraaff Krebs.

Van and two of his cousins who live in Virginia recently held a reunion in North Carolina where they shared pictures, books and other material they had collected over the year. "We are considering having our next 'cousins reunion' in Pascagoula," he said. Van may be contacted at KrebsFamilyHistory@gmail.com .

Joanne,

Thank you for the article. I thought that it was great and would love to meet Ms. Rita Krebs at some time in the future. I am sure that she has a lot of great stories to tell.

I maintain an ongoing web search engine for the name "Krebs" and it is really interesting to see everything that pops up around the country (and the world) involving the Krebs name. You have everything from Krebs Oklahoma to different officials, writers, etc named Krebs but quite often things pop up from the Pascagoula area involving Krebs Fort, Krebs Lake and Krebs Avenue not to mention the people in the area by the name of Krebs.

Thanks again for your article,

Van

Steve Krebs

Steve Krebs has been working with wood since childhood. His father opened S.W. Krebs Woodworking Company in 1958. He began working full time in the shop when he was 23. Krebs enjoys crafting mantels and bookcases, but cabinets are the hot item right now. Krebs says that before Hurricane Katrina, his customer base was mainly high-end housing projects. After Katrina damaged homes all along the Coast, Krebs spent a majority of his time replacing thousands of kitchen cabinets. The lifelong Pascagoula resident enjoys playing tennis and in his band WKSD, whose members he has played with since high school. He is married and has two step-daughters and two grandchildren.

Death of Jerome A. Krebs.

Mr. Jerome Augustus Krebs, a life long resident of this city, died at his home on Krebs Lake in the northern part of the city, on last Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, after an illness of about two years.

Deceased was 64 years of age at the time of his death, and leaves a large number of relatives in this city and elsewhere. He was a member of the Woodmen of the World, and a devout Catholic.

He is survived by three sons, Messrs. Sidoine, Sylvester and Leon Krebs, of this city; two daughters, Miss Phillipa Krebs, of Pascagoula, and Mrs. John A. Green, of Crichton, Ala.; two brothers, Messrs. Allen Krebs, of Birmingham, and John Krebs, of Moss Point; two sisters, Madames Robert Reinicke and Blanche Trenty, of this city; seven grandchildren and numerous other relatives here and elsewhere.

The funeral occurred Sunday afternoon, from the church of Our Lady of Victories, Father O'Reilly officiating, the interment being in the Krebs Cemetery near the home of deceased.

Mr. Krebs was born and reared in this city, and had lived his life in the old home in Krebs Lake, the place commonly known as the "Old Spanish Fort," which has been in the Krebs family for over two hundred years, and is one of the landmarks of this city. He had numerous friends both here and elsewhere, who will deeply deplore his death.

To Cure a Cold In One Day

Mr. Albert Thompson, who was injured some three months ago by having his arm broken by a windlass while on board the schooner C. H. Delmas, returned yesterday from Mobile where he has been under treatment since the accident occurred. His arm is still stiff, but he is gradually regaining the use of it, and hopes in a short time to be alright again.

Bridge Party.

In spite of the approaching storm and threatened down pour of rain last Saturday afternoon the members of the Bridge Club boarded the three o'clock train for Gautier, where they and their friends were most beautifully entertained by Mrs. Hermes Gautier in her "Cottage by the Sea."

When we arrived at the station five autos were waiting to convey us to the home, where a number of guests awaited our arrival.

We were soon seated around five tables, and the games began, after which prizes were awarded as follows: Mrs. Heidelberg won the guest prize, a lovely pink and lace camisole; Mrs. Hinds, of Gautier, won the guest prize, a dainty blue silk Teddy-bear; the consolation prize was cut by Miss Hattie Belle Merriwether, a beautiful jewel comb.

Lights were turned on and we were ushered into the dining room where a long table was waiting, loaded with its delicious menu, which consisted of fried chicken, fruit salad, sandwiches, olives, pickles and chocolate with whipped cream. We were told to find our place cards, the reading of each of which caused much laughter and amusement.

The Victrola dispensed sweet music while many danced. Others resumed the games, until the auto horns announced time to catch the nine o'clock train for home.

Many thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Hermes Gautier for their hospitality and so delightful a time.

One of the Members.

We have not heard of any capitalist accepting the proposition of our friend and townsman, Mr. L. E. Cox, in reference to a hotel for Pascagoula. This is one proposition that it seems to us should demend the attention of those of our citizens who have money to invest. A good hotel on the beach here would be a drawing card, and would lead to other investments in the town.

THE CHAUVINS OF THE ILLINOIS COUNTRY

Submitted by Mary B. Cunningham and Jeanne C. Blythe, St. Louis Mo.

Much has been written of the Chauvin brothers who figure in the early history of New Orleans; not so much is known of two others, Jacques and Gilles, both of whom have a definite place in the history of the French colonization in North America and both of whom have descendants living in and around St. Louis. There is also a sister, Michelle, wife of Jacques Neveu, who figures in the early history of Illinois. It is to these three that we will confine ourselves in this article giving only enough of the others to put our three in their proper places in the family.

Pierre Chauvin and Marthe Autreuil, of Montreal, were the parents of eleven children, eight of whom figure in the history of Louisiana and Illinois. They are:

1. Barbe Therese born 1665. She married Ignace Hubert de Bellair and both of them appear to have been in Louisiana at one time although both returned to Montreal. They left children in Louisiana.

2. Gilles born 1668

3. Michelle born 1670;married Jacques Neveu.

4. Jacques born 1672; died 1729

5. Joseph born 1674; died 1729

6. Nicolas born 1676; died 1749

7. Louis born 1678; died 1731

8. Paul born 1680; died 1729

Hugo E. Krebs M. (2)

At this point, and before getting into the main part of our story, it might be well to digress long enough to clear up a misconception of rather widespread proportions. As is well known many of the French appended additional surnames to their family names, particularly when there were several brothers living in the same area. Thus Joseph Chauvin added de Lery to his name, Nicolas added de la Freniere and Louis became de Beaulieu. A number of writers have assigned the surname of Charleville to Jacques Chauvin's name. This is not correct. Nowhere in the records have we found him referred to as other than simply Jacques Chauvin. It is our opinion, based on a careful reading of the old records, that the eldest brother of a family retained the family name alone, the younger ones added distinguishing surnames. Jacques Chauvin was the eldest of four brothers to settle in Mobile and, therefore, he was known and was referred to as Chauvin alone. The same holds true in Illinois. Three sons of Gilles settled in Kaskaskia. Of these Louis, the eldest, was always Chauvin. His two younger brothers were known as Philippe Chauvin dit Joyeuse and Joseph Chauvin dit Charleville. Like the Delery family, the descendants of Joseph Chauvin dit Charleville, in about the third generation, dropped the Chauvin part of the name and became known only as Charleville. Many of those still living in and around St. Louis have forgotten that their name ever was Chauvin.

We cannot say who it was who first applied the name of Charleville to Jacques Chauvin. Perhaps it was the compiler of the "Chauvin Vertical File" to be found in the Louisiana State Library in Baton Rouge. This writer speaks of the brothers, Joseph, Nicolas and Louis,with their additional surnames and then mentions Paul as being also in Louisiana. He says " it is possible that Jacques is the one called Charleville and if Paul was in Louisiana he may be the one called Chauvin. But this is mere speculation."

There are few records of Paul but enough to know that he was called Montplaisir. Jacques, as we have said, appears in the records only as Chauvin. We state, therefore, that the Chauvins who properly add Charleville to their names are all descendants of Joseph of Kaskaskia and that this name was never given rightly to Jacques or any of his descendants.

FAMILY OF GILLES CHAUVIN

Tanguay, in his first volume, says that Gilles was buried in Montreal in 1691 "he having been killed by the Indians with LeMoyne de Bienville". In his third volume, however, he gives two marriages for Gilles - 1st on January 21, 1697 to Marie Cabassier, daughter of Pierre Cabassier and Jeanne Guiberge; 2nd to Angelique Guyon dit Derounsay, daughter of Michel Guyon dit Derounsay and Genevieve Marsolet. Tanguay lists two children for the first marriage and nine for the second. We do not know when or where Gilles died. He was recorded as being in Detroit in 1706 (Burton - "Cadillac's Village") but evidently lived in Montreal as all of his children were born there.

Children of Gilles Chauvin and Marie Cabassier were:

1. Pierre born January 5, 1698 in Montreal; dead by 1743

2. Louise Daniel born April 13, 1699 in Montreal; died July 13, 1737 in Montreal. She married on February 20, 1721, at Pointe-Aux-Trembles, Nicolas Perthuis, son of Nicolas Perthuis and Marguerite Celles-Duclos. There were seven children of this marriage.

Children of Gilles Chauvin and his second wife, Angelique Derounsay, were:

1. Louis born in Montreal January 14, 1702; of whom more later.

2. Philippe born in Montreal July 4, 1707; he was also dead by 1743 as we shall see later.

3. Catherine Angelique born April 16, 1703 in Montreal; married Michel Castonguay, son of Jean Baptiste Castonguay and Marie Agnes Simon dit La Pointe, at Lachenaye Canada on May 28, 1731. They had three children.

4. Anne born April 10, 1705 in Montreal; died there October 23, 1744. She married Nicolas Henri Catin, son of Henri Catin and Jeanne Brossart on April 16, 1732 in Montreal. They had six children.

5. Marie Anne born in Montreal June 18, 1709; died there October 23, 1744; married there Etienne Petit, son of Jean Petit and Marie Bailly, on May 11, 1733. They had four children.

6. Marguerite born in Montreal August 10, 1711; married there May 2, 1737 to Bartelemi Metivier, son of Nicolas Metivier and Marie Boette. They had six children.

7. Joseph born in Montreal May 5, 1713; of whom more later.

8. Marie Elizabeth born July 27, 1716.

9. Charles Francois born June 10, 1721; died in infancy.

The French records of Illinois are far from complete but enough remains to show that three of the sons of Gilles Chauvin were established in Kaskaskia and there is evidence that another - Pierre, the only son of his first marriage - may have been there at one time. Just when they came or whether they came together we do not know.

So far, we have found only two records concerning Pierre Chauvin. The first is in Louisiana and has to do with a boundary dispute between Ceard, director of the St. Reyne Concessions, and Srs. Dubreuil de Villars, Chauvin de Lery, de Beaulieu and de la Freniere. Recorded as document #10, March 23, 1724, it takes note of a previous concession of six arpents to Pierre Chauvin, nephew of the brothers Chauvin, who "has not appeared in this colony". The only other record is in Illinois and is only a fragment. It reads:

" Jan. 16, 1743 - Was present M. Joseph Boucher, King's Attorney for vacant estates, acting for the absent creditors, Louis Chauvin Subrogate Guardian of the minors of the defunct Pierre Chauvin his brother, Daniel Legras, creditor, Etienne Petit Creditor, Joseph Chauvin alias Charleville paternal uncle of said minors, Louis Bore witness, and Joseph Turpin administrator of said Dame widow, and witnesses to the effect of the presents, who after deliberation, and in order to avoid the public sale of a house belonging to the estate of Philippe Chauvin alias Joyeuse which house has been left to the creditors of the estate by virtue of renunciation of Dame Marie Anne Danis his widow - - - "

(#1001 Translation of French Records, Book 2, Randolph County Courthouse, Chester Illinois)

Louis Chauvin - the eldest of the sons of Gilles and Angelique Guyon dit Derounsay - appears in many of the Kaskaskia records. Although we have not found a marraige contract for him enough evidence exists to show that he married Marguerite Mallet in 1735 and, secondly, Angelique Perthuis, daughter of Pierre Perthuis and Catherine Mallet. Louis may have moved from Kaskaskia to Ste. Genevieve Mo. His wife certainly did for we find in the Ste. Genevieve Church records that Angelique Perthuis, widow of Louis Chauvin, married Etienne Gavreau on March 6, 1755.

Louis Chauvin and Angelique Perthuis had two sons Louis and Pierre. Louis married in February of 1770 in New Orleans, Marianne Francoeur, daughter of Joseph Francouer of Arkansas and Agnes Samere. They were the parents of five children:

Pierre
Marie Anne
Antoine
Charlotte
Francois

(information on Louis Chauvin (2) and his children supplied by Mrs. R. E. Mulhern of Rayville Louisiana)

Although Louis Chauvin(2) eventually settled in Louisiana, there is some evidence that he lived in Kaskaskia after his marriage for we have this record:

"Louis Chauvin purchased land from Jean Baptiste Texier who had bought it from Madame Dutisne. It consisted of a house built on sills with several apartments, shed at each end with a stone chimney, with the ground belonging to it, enclosed on all its faces; bound on two faces by two streets of the said town of Kaskaskia on the other side by Daniel Blouin, and on the other by Joseph Chauvin Charleville - length and breadth have not been determined. He paid 500 pounds in deer skins, 200 livres in money and a cow and her calf. - April 28, 1771."

(Translations of the French Records-Kaskaskia Documents, Randolph County Courthouse, Chester Ill.)

Pierre Chauvin, second son of Louis and Angelique Perthuis, was born about 1754; died January 20, 1814 in Ste. Genevieve Mo. (Church Records). The Ste. Genevieve Church records also contain the following:

"1773, July 26, was married Pierre Chauvin, son of Louis Chauvin and Angelique Perthuis, to Marie Rose Hebert, daughter of the deceased Louis Hebert and Marie Rose Marin. Witnesses Sieur Francois Lalamundiere, uncle of the groom, Francois Joyeuse, his first cousin, Etienne Livremont, Henri Charpentier, her uncle, Charles Valle, her cousin."

There is a record of only one child of this marriage. She is Marie who died April 17, 1817 "aged about 40".(Ste. Genevieve Church records). She married April 23, 1792 Louis Trudeau, son of Louis Trudeau and Marie Decroix. (Same)

Philippe Chauvin, second of the sons of Gilles and Angelique Guyon dit Derounsay, is usually called Joyeuse. His marriage record is:

"April 28, 1734 marriage contract of Philippe Chauvin, son of Jules Chauvin and Angelique Derounsay, a native of Montreal, with Marianne Danys, daughter of Charles Danis and Dorothee Michiperouata, a native of the parish of Notre Dame de Kaskaskia. Witnesses Sr. Louis Chauvin brother of the groom, mother and step-father of the bride (Sr. Turpin)"

(See Transcriptions of the Proceedings of the Superior Council of New Orleans in Lousiana Historical Quarterly, Vol. 18, p. 698)

We do not know where the marriage took place. The fact that there is a record of it is that it is listed as among her effects as they were inventoried following her death. Philippe, as we have said, was dead by 1743. Marianne died in New Orleans June 10, 1747, leaving four children - two sons with their uncles in Illinois and a daughter, Marianne, and one other child living with her in New Orleans.

We have found a marriage record for only one child of Philippe and Marianne - a son:

"May 25, 1761 - afternoon in the church of the parish of Ste. Anne de Fort Chartres, Francois Chauvin dit Joyeuse son of the late Philippe Chauvin and the late Marie Anne Danys of Kaskaskia and Marthe Syonnau, daughter of Louis Syonnau and the late Francoise Merique, also of Kaskaskia." (Kaskaskia Church Records)

Among the witnesses was Joseph Chauvin dit Charleville.

Francois Chauvin dit Joyeuse died in Ste. Genevieve October 13, 1781. His age, as given on the death record, would have him born about 1739. (Ste. Genevieve Church records). The Ste. Genevieve Church records give the baptisms of eight children of Francois Chauvin dit Joyeuse and Marthe Syannau but the marriage of only one. This is the eldest child, Marie Marthe, who, on October 16, 1780, married Francois Arcoutte, son of Francois Arcoutte and Magdaleine Vertefeuil of Three Rivers Canada.

I must start by thanking Mr. Nap Cassibry for sharing the information in his published Some Dubuisson Records that appeared in the Mississippi Coast Historical and Genealogical Society quarterlies and for the many DUBUISSON records that he sent me. Some of his information was taken from the Saucier Family History, but much of it came from his personal collection of records that he had accumulated over the many years that he has been doing research for his wonderful book, The Ladner Odyssey. Other references such as the Louisiana Historical Quarterlies are so noted.

The first known DUBUISSONS to inhabit the Mississippi Gulf Coast were Eugene DUBUISSON and his family, and some of the children of his brother, Sylvain DUBUISSON. Both were sons of François DUBUISSON, native of Mobile, Alabama and Anne Charite KREBS, native of Pascagoula, Mississippi. Both sons married daughters of Joseph NICAISE and Jeanne DUFILLY. DUBUISSONS can be found in Alabama, Louisiana, and on the Mississippi Gulf Coast. A number of DUBUISSONS still live in the St. Tammany Parish area today and many are buried in the "Old Dubuisson Cemetery" outside of Slidell, Louisiana (take Thompson Road, turn right on Reilly Street to Dubuisson Road to dead end.)

Our direct line goes back to Colonial Louisiana where Etienne (Estienne) Dubuisson and his younger brother, François DUBUISSON DeMONTFERRIER, came from France to work in the M. Paris DUVERNEY Concession in the country of the Bayagoula Indians. The following are bits and pieces taken from various history books which tell their stories. With each account, we are able to piece their lives together so that we can understand who they were, where they came from and what they did. We are descended from the François DUBUISSON DeMONTFERRIER's line.

Quoting from Louisiana Historical Quarterly, vol. 21, page 979, we learn:

"When the Western Company, organized by John Law in 1717, for the purpose of exploiting and developing the resources of French Louisiana, took possession of the colony in the following year, some fifteen large land grants were made to influential and enterprising persons in France who whould undertake to establish agricultural settlements on the fertile lands bordering the Mississippi and other streams in the lower part of the colony. Dear Mr Lippian,

It was such an eventful day at the Old Spanish Fort, that I've been telling everyone about it. Now I've come to find that my great grandmother was of to Delmas family and married a Krebs. My fathers mother, a Krebs, married Rudolph Reinecke. As well as I remember Taunte Cecile was a Krebs, my fathers aunt, who lived in the Fort while I visited there, at age 5, and we slept there. She married a Schapio, don't know if this is the right spelling. My mother told me about seeing Taunte Cecile climb up on a ladder and cut the flowers off the great century plant that grew in the front yard. This was before I was born. My father & his brother lived in the old Reinecke home in adjoining land. They built a sail boat to-gether and entered the regatta on Krebs lake & won They were young in their teens I remember Papa taking us 3 kid on a row boat to crab in the lagoons off Krebs lake. An alagator almost turned us over - Papa & my brother beat at it with the oars. Papa also took us about the tunnel - & took us to hear the music at night on the river. He said the Indian maid threw herself into the river from an over hanging limb of a great tree, because her lover was killed because he was of another tribe & they could not marry. There she moans & sings her love song. He told us he heard it many times while coming home from fishing or duck hunting when a boy. And it was very loud at times and low at others. I can remember running throu the orange trees to the old Fort while playing with the Patty White kids, my cousins, And there was an old cherry tree that we climbed in and ate the cherries. Also we had oranges and pecans from the trees that grew around the two places. My father always received 10 lbs of paper shell pecans on Xmas from there, sent by his brother

At the age of 12 or 13 years we passed throu Pascagula and stayed at Eugenia Whites home on the river. We spent ~~the~~ one day at the Whites and I remember the Old Fort was empty we ran around it + crawled into it and measured the thickness of the walls - just like kids do now. Played on the beach - climbed trees. I do hope some of this can be of use to your program and the history of the Fort. I know it was always a big subject in our family. My Father always spoke in beautiful French and his mother wrote all her letters to him in French. Papa sang little French songs to us and played the piano.

During the War between the States the home was used as a refuge for Federal soldiers, and in the early '70's, an Episcopal school was conducted here. Mrs. Wade, who conducted an exclusive girls preparatory school in Jackson, brought her entire student body to Pascagoula to receive higher education in art that was taught by a famous Parisian artist in the Graham House. (1)

Many legends and superstitions are told about this house which is supposedly haunted. The first has to do with the gruesome stories of the first owner, a northern woman, who is said to have tortured her slaves to the extent of whipping one unmercifully, and then throwing him in the woods to die. Tales are told of how she killed and buried some under the basement; of how to punish others, she would tie them behind her carriage and make them run for miles; of how each of her three husbands supposedly died mysteriously. The story goes that all of the many who have owned this property since the War between the States have had violent or sudden deaths. It is a fact that one was lost at sea and another killed in an elevator accident.

The CHASTANT HOME, a distinct type of pre-war architecture, located on the beach front, was built in 1795 by John B. Chastant. It has since been occupied by his direct descendants. Situated near the east end of the sea-wall drive on a large tract, surrounded by stately trees, this place for many years housed the furnitpre that was originally there when it was built. Almost destroyed during the War between the States, it was afterwards rebuilt, and is now in a fine state of preservation. (2)

The KREBS HOME is said to be the oldest habitable house in Mississippi. Here Elizabeth Farragut, a sister of Admiral Farragut, was married November 22,1824, to Clestin Du Pont, a kinsman of Admiral Du Pont of the French Navy. She died at Pascagoula in 1888. (3) This home had its beginnings in 1718, when the Duchess of Chaumont, after receiving a grant from the French Government, sent her brother, Admiral De La Pointe, to build a fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake), for a defense against the Choctaw Indians. He later killed the Pascagoula Indians, and interferred with the whites. This defense, called French Fort or Chateau, has been the home of a long line of Krebs, who have lived in this section for the past 200 years or more. The fort was well fortified with framing of heavy hand-hewn timbers, put together with wooden pegs and plastering of burned shells, sand, clay and dried Spanish Moss. This plastering was used as a finish both on the inside and outside of the house, making a wall eighteen inches thick. The original chateau was fifty-eight feet long and twenty-eight feet wide. The massive studding for the building was of hand-hewn timbers six by eight inches. The largest room, in the center, is eighteen by nineteen feet; the ceiling supported by hand-hewn joists is five by seven inches; the roof, of the hip-type, was covered with split shingles.

Sieur Francois Krebs, who came from Castle Cochern, in the Rhine Province of Germany, also came into possession of the chateau and lands surrounding the lake - now known as Krebs Lake. He met Admiral de la Pointe's eldest daughter, Marie Simone de la Pointe. A courtship followed and they soon married. Six children were born to this union, one of whom - Marie Josephine - was married from this home to Captain Antoine Narbona, of the French Army. Marie Simone Krebs, first of the French settlers to die, was buried in the Krebs Cemetery, the family burial plot. The land adjoining was a splendid plantation, and Sieur Krebs owned many slaves, who raised cotton, rice, indigo and other products for export, and was surrounded by every luxury that a man could have in that day and time. (1)

The W. R. STUART HOME on Government Street, Ocean Springs, built some years before the War between the States by a Mr. Fuller, is a one-story, rambling structure of the pioneer type. It has a large hall down the center, rooms on either side, and a main hall between the diningroom and kitchen. Colonel Stuart bought this place just after the war, and came here with his wife and some of his ex-slaves, where he lived the life of a gentleman farmer. For years this was one of the homes where true hospitality was observed, and even today, still standing among its setting of oaks, it is habitable. Several deserters from the

PASCAGOULA LODGE No. 1120

BENEVOLENT and PROTECTIVE ORDER of ELKS

Elks Serve Their Country and Their Community

TO OUR ABSENT BROTHERS

"We shall meet, but we shall miss him,
There will be the vacant chair,
But though we no more possess him,
Still our hearts his memory bear.
But a while ago we gathered,
Friendship beaming in each eye,
Now the golden cord is severed,
He has passed to realms on high.

Brother J. E. Krebs
Sept. 19, 1916 - April 18, 1973

Brother J. E. was proposed for membership in our Lodge March 17, 1949 by brother W. A. Moncrief. He was elected March 31, 1949 and initiated to our ranks during Exalted Ruler C. P. Humphrey's administration May 12, 1949. Brother Krebs has been a good and faithful brother among us.

Dear Mrs. Krebs —

I do so much appreciate your nice letter and your thoughtfulness in sending me the snapshot — I have thought many times since I was in Pascagoula of the truly wonderful thing you and Mr. Krebs are doing by restoring the cemetery — have even mentioned it to various people from time to time, and always have met with a reaction like my own. It is very heart-warming, in this day and age, to know that there are still people who care about those who have gone before them — and, for my part, I am most grateful.

I already had the material Miss Rapier sent concerning Hugo Evans' parents, brothers, and sisters — in fact, I have photographs of some of the entries — but was glad to have it re-confirmed as to the brothers and sisters. I suppose he may have been buried at the Fort, since he wasn't at Mobile or New Orleans — but if so the stone must be long gone —

There must be many which have disappeared — I remember seeing, twelve or more years ago, a tall slender stone, close to the lake end, for the Leonard Harragin who married Corinne Bilbo - It was down, and the next time I went there I did not see it at all - What I was really looking for, and could not find then, was the stone of his grand-father, also Leonard Harragin - (I knew he was buried there, and have two different inscriptions written by my great-grand father on the back of a railroad timetable!) Some day when you are there — if it's among the

you do me a tremendous favor and copy for me whichever inscription they finally decided upon?
That is, if it's legible? —
He was Leonard Sarragin, born in France about 1778, died in New Orleans 1843.
I think I recall seeing on the same stone something concerning a daughter of J. L.

have given a definite birth date?

Whose tombstone is the one standing — the only one not broken?

Goodness only knows when I'll get to Pascagoula again — but when I do I certainly will make a special trip to the Fort to see René Krebs' casket handles — didn't know until I'd already been to the Fort that they were there! I have a portrait of him over my buffet, and have always been very fond of him — The one of his wife burned

Albin J. Krebs

PASCAGOULA - Albin Joseph Krebs, 73, died in Key West, Florida, on May 31, 2002.

Mr. Krebs was born in Pascagoula on March 5, 1929. A descendent of one of the pioneering families of Pascagoula, Mr. Krebs was preceded in death by his parents, Clarence Preston Krebs and Agnes Ory Krebs, his brothers, Preston C. Krebs, Edmund Ory Krebs Sr., and Stephen Wise Krebs and his sister Marie Krebs Lea. Mr. Krebs was also preceded in death by his wife Kathleen and his child, who both died in child birth while he served as a fighter pilot with the United States Air Force in the Korean War.

Mr. Krebs is survived by his sisters, Marjorie Krebs Holley, Anne Krebs Mansfield, numerous nieces and nephews and his close friend, confidant and nephew, Robert "Bob" P. Krebs.

Mr. Krebs retired from The New York Times in 1989 to live in Key West, Florida. He was editor of the student newspaper at the University of Mississippi and immediately after his graduation in 1951 he spent four years as an Air Force officer serving in Korea and Japan.

After a brief but productive time on the staff of the Sunday magazine of The (New Orleans) Times-Picayune, during which he wrote a series of articles that led to a Pulitzer, he earned a Master's Degree at the Columbia University Graduation School of Journalism, finishing second in his class out of 90 students.

Joining the United Press Wire Service a month before his graduation in 1956, he was quickly introduced to covering the really big stories when the Italian liner "Andrea Doria" sank off Nantucket.

He was at UPI six years, then became an associate editor at Newsweek. At Newsweek, he also wrote about the tumultuous integration of his alma mater, Ole Miss, 12 years after. As student editor, he had advocated the entry of blacks there. That advocacy caused a long estrangement for him from Ole Miss, but in recent years the University of Mississippi has instituted an "Albin Krebs Journalism Scholarship."

Mr. Krebs spent nearly four years at the now defunct New York Herald Tribune, joining The New York Times in 1966. There he was a night re-write man, general assignment reporter, television correspondent, and he originated and wrote the "Notes on People" column. He was chief advance obituary writer and editor when he retired.

Albin Krebs contributed to the Reader's Digest, The Saturday Evening Post, Good Housekeeping, Coronet, Pageant and in Key West The Solares Hill.

Mr. Krebs was cremated and his ashes strewn at sea.

Old Spanish Fort...

Time-worn tombstones m Pascagoula pioneers' hor

By Regina Hines
Jackson County
Bureau Chief

Several generations of Pascagoula's pioneer family, the Krebs, have been born and buried at the site of what is now called Old Spanish Fort.

Their ancient family cemetery to the north of the only remaining building of this original settlement, is a mingling of both past and present.

The time-weathered tombstones, some barely legible, date as early as 1813, contrasting to the shiny marble newness of those erected in our present day.

The name Old Spanish Fort, misleading in determining the origin of its first owners, was orginally built by the French Admiral Joseph Simon de la Pointe to protect the land holdings of his sister, Duchess deChaumont, a favorite in the court of Louis XIV.

peaceful Lake Krebs were completed in 1718, but were destroyed over the years. The only remaining building, a carpentry shop, which has also been used as a residence by later Krebs generations, is now a museum leased from Jackson County board of supervisors.

The progenitor of the Krebs family, Baron Hugo Ernestus von Krebs, born in Newmagen, Germany in 1714, married the daughter of Admiral de la Pointe, Marie Josephine, after he arrived in Pascagoula in the early 1730's.

Eight children were probably born of this marriage and six of his marriage to Marie Chauvin de Joyeuse of New Orleans, following the death of Marie Josephine.

Graves of the first generation are not found in this cemetery. It is thought Marie Josephine Krebs was buried her death in 1751 and Baron von Krebs was buried in New Orleans, sometime between 1776 and 1778.

The earliest grave in the cemetery, which was neglected over a period of many years, is that of Marie Louise Dupont Krebs, wife of Joseph Krebs, oldest son of Baron von Krebs and Marie Josephine, who died in 1813.

Later graves, many of them unmarked, are those of the family of Carlos Rene, son of Joseph, and his wife Marie Dupont. Under the protecting limbs of an equally ancient oak and nestled in springtime among colorful azaleas, the old tombs with their French inscriptions can tell many stories.

Evident is the high infant mortality rate of colonial days. One very long grave tells in French that there lies the seven children of Rene and Marie Krebs fancy. Other graves near that of Rene and Marie indicate they had other children who lived to maturity.

Here is also buried Cecil Krebs Johnson, great-granddaughter of Joseph Krebs, last owner and occupant of the fort's last building, who died in 1915.

The old tombs, built of handmade brick, using the traditional head and foot markers, were crumbling and overgrown with weeds and foliage in recent years, according to Mrs. Henry Gautier, museum director.

In 1967, however, a descendent of Louis Augustin Krebs (son of Hugo and Marie Josephine Krebs), J.E. Krebs of Pascagoula, and his wife, [redacted] interested in restoring the old marker and refurbishing the grave sites.

MYERS

Mrs. Rita Joyce Krebs Myers, 73, of Pascagoula, Miss., died peacefully at her home July 19, 2003, surrounded by her family and friends. She was born July 21, 1929, in Pascagoula, and was a lifelong resident. Mrs. Myers graduated from Pascagoula High School and attended Mississippi State College for Women. She retired from Ingalls Shipbuilding after working 30 years in various engineering departments. She was a longtime member of First Baptist Church of Pascagoula where she taught Sunday School and sang in the choir. Mrs. Myers loved her Lord, her church and her family. She was an accomplished artist and enjoyed music and loved working in her flower beds.

She was preceded in death by her parents, Mr. Roy and Mrs. Jessie Krebs, and by her brother-in-law, Bill Portas.

Mrs. Myers is survived by her husband of 54 years, Mr. Malcolm Aubrey "Mac" Myers of Pascagoula; three sons and two daughters-in-law, Roy M. and Tina Myers of Pascagoula, Brad Myers of New Orleans, La., Ricky and Tina Myers of Sumrall; two sisters and brothers-in-law, Jessie and Tiny Portas of Gautier, Miss., and Joan and John Griffin of Gulf Breeze, Fla.; one brother and sister-in-law, Mickey and Sandra Krebs of Virginia Beach, Va.; four grandchildren, Travis Myers and Allison Myers, both of Pascagoula, and Peyton Myers and Luke Myers, both of Sumrall, Miss.

Visitation will be Tues., July 22, 2003, from 6-9 p.m. at Holder-Wells Funeral Home in Moss Point, Miss.

Services will be Wed., July 23, 2003, at 11 a.m. from First Baptist Church of Pascagoula with Dr. Rex Yancey and Rev. Dennis Ray Smith officiating.

There will be a one-hour visitation in the church prior to service time.

Entombment will follow at Krebs Cemetery located next to Old Spanish Fort in Pascagoula.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to The First Baptist Church of Pascagoula Building Fund, the Hospice of Light or the American Cancer Society.

Arrangements by Holder-Wells Funeral Home, Moss Point.

Shipping museum seen as possible use for old PHS

PASCAGOULA — From dugout canoes constructed by the Pascagoula Indians to the destroyers launched from Northrop Grumman, Pascagoula has always been a prime piece of real estate for shipbuilding.

There is no museum dedicated to the city's craft and its rich heritage, but members of Pascagoula Preservation of Heritage High School Society, or PHS², say they want one established in the old high school.

And they say they're getting federal support about the idea with possible funding in the future.

"This is a natural fit for Pascagoula, because shipbuilding is what built Pascagoula," said Bruce Parker, PHS² spokesman and someone who has pushed for a museum for years.

The old high school, vacant since 1997, is facing possible demolition. Preservation supporters say the main building of the 68-year-old two-story high school could house the museum and also accommodate the city's desire to build a community center.

The school board owns the property. A city committee recommended the city buy the school property, including all buildings except the gym, tear down the school and replace it with a brand new community center.

Tiny Portas' family built ships in Pascagoula from 1885 to 1985. Her father, Roy M. Krebs and grandfather, S.E. Krebs, operated the family-owned shipyard, which specialized in "snapper schooners."

There have been many other small, family-owned shipyards that have called Pascagoula home, constructing countless wooden vessels from small coastal fishing boats to the 284-foot, 5-masted barkentines built for World War I.

Portas said she has spent countless hours over the years researching work by her family and others in the area. She found 69 documents about vessels built by her family and there's a story attached to each one. That information, combined with the histories of other shipyards and memorabilia that could be obtained from a myriad of sources, would impress novices and experts alike, she said.

"There are so many good stories and collections about all this that have never been told or shown," Portas said.

She said she loved the idea of a museum because there is a need.

"The interest is there. I've met several people who are very interested" in the history of the area's shipbuilding.

The first ship built on the Pascagoula River was in 1772 by Europeans to transport corn and deerskins, according to historical records.

Ingalls Shipyard built about 100 ships during World War II. That shipbuilding boom had started a little earlier when smaller shipyards consolidated.

Liz Ford, PHS² secretary and chairwoman of the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission, said a museum at the old high school makes sense. It would not only benefit locals, she said, but also be a tourist attraction.

"I think that would be a wonderful place for it. There is so much history on our shipbuilding heritage here and goes back 300 years, and I think we need to take advantage of it," Ford said.

The amount of money that is being considered is unclear, Parker said, but federal backing would help restoration advocates get their foot in the door.

"This could give full justification to save that old school and house a large part of Pascagoula's history for our kids and generations to come," he said.

The city of Essex, Mass., established a shipbuilding museum in 1976 as part of the town's observation of the American Revolutionary Bicentennial.

Its primary purpose was to provide Essex families a local repository for their ancestors' shipbuilding artifacts and to stem the tide of artifacts that were going to other museums, being sold to private collectors or simply being destroyed — occurrences Portas said are far too common locally.

The Essex Shipbuilding Museum is managed by the Essex Historical Society and Shipbuilding Museum, Inc. Exhibits and archives of the Essex Shipbuilding Museum are housed in the old Essex Central School House, which was built in 1835.

In 1993, the society purchased a section of riverfront where shipbuilding flourished for over 300 years, an historic site where a family there operated its shipyards from 1813 to the end of World War II.

Museum supporters in Pascagoula say the city has gone too long without one and could accomplish similar goals met by the Essex group.

City Manager Kay Johnson said the City Council has not discussed its plans regarding the old high school, which is one of two possible sites being considered for the community center.

The Pascagoula School Board is still seeking prospective buyers before deciding what action to take.

Funding sought to restore historic Gautier cemetery

By SHANE SCARA
Mississippi Press Staff

GAUTIER — A piece of historic ground that has fallen into disrepair may get a chance at rejuvenation at today's Gautier City Council.

The McRae Family Cemetery, which holds several of the city's founding fathers, has existed since 1835 when John McRae was buried there. Since then others, including a former Mississippi governor and a Civil War veteran, have been laid to rest there.

But now, trees grow among the graves and many of the headstones are cracked, including McRae's marker.

The Gautier Historical Preservation Commission hopes to address problems with the cemetery, located near Sandalwood Drive and Graveline Road in Gautier.

The cemetery was sold along with two lots. In order for citizens to visit historic site, the city must purchase rights of way from the property owners, through donations or private funds.

Gary Smith owns an undeveloped plot that he is willing to sell if the city can match his price. But Philip Morison has lived on his lot for more than three decades and is more reluctant to give up any of his land.

Morison declined comment. Smith, however, said that the sale of his own vacant lot will be a win for both him and the city.

"I wanted to sell it and they wanted to buy it and I gave it at a very good price," Smith said.

Smith assumed that the cemetery only bordered his property, but soon discovered he had several headstones on his land.

Jack Womack, the chairman of the commission, said that although individual markers are protected from desecration, the cemetery itself is not without a boundary. Womack said a boundary once existed but is no longer there.

"The main thrust of what we're trying to do is to get authority from the city to raise money to buy the land and have it deeded to the city," Womack said.

Womack envisions the 24 marked and unmarked graves surrounded by a wrought iron fence and open to the public. The necessary funds can come from private donations, grants and elsewhere, according to Community Services Director Ralph Hode.

George Martin has lived on a neighboring lot for 29 years and does not have any of the cemetery on his property. But he and his neighbor, Tim Outland, border the Smith property and maintain a grassy road to the plot.

"The thing that bothers me is why wasn't the cemetery shown on the plot plan if the law can't touch them," Martin said.

Gov. John J. McRae served from 1854 to 1857 and steamed his river boat, Triumph, up and down the Chickasaway River according to a Web site on the governors of Mississippi. He was sometimes called "Chickasaway McRae."

Lt. Col. James C. McRae fought as a Confederate soldier in the Civil War. He died in 1896 and is listed as buried in the McRae Cemetery, according to Martin. The soldier's final resting place has drawn interest from the Sons of Confederate Veterans, who have promised to mark all graves of Civil War veterans regardless of their race or whether they fought for the Confederacy or the Union.

"We were commissioned by former Confederate General Stephen D. Lee not to forget Confederate veterans nor their widows nor their orphans," said Robert McLaurin, camp commander of Sam Davis Camp 596 of SCV.

HISTORY OF

OLD SPANISH FORT

Pascagoula, Mississippi

PASCAGOULA LIBRARY
GENEALOGY COLLECTION

Built in 1721, Old Spanish Fort is claimed to be the oldest structure in the United States between the Appalachian and Rocky Mountains. It was built by a Frenchman during the period of French sovereignty over the Colony of Louisiana from 1699 until 1763, the year the Seven Years War ended victoriously for the British.

In 1715, after petitioning the King of France, Joseph Simon de la Pointe was granted a small strip of land which covered most of what is now north Pascagoula. De la Pointe was one of the first settlers at Fort Maurepas, having come with Iberville at the age of twelve.

A concession on the Pascagoula River had previously been granted to Mme. de Chaumont, lady-in-waiting to Princess Henrietta at the Court of Louis XIV at Fountainbleau. This concession was registered by Parliament in Paris in 1711. In 1718 Admiral de la Pointe, a relative of Mme. de Chaumont, was commissioned by the French government to build a fort on Lake Catahoula (now Krebs Lake) to protect the Concession of Pascagoula to Mme. de Chaumont.

De la Pointe began construction of a home which he fully completed by 1726. The only building on La Pointe's estate which has survived is a small edifice on the lake front. Old Spanish Fort, as it is now known, was the carpenter shop of Sieur de la Pointe. The family graveyard which adjoins it is probably the oldest known cemetery still in use in the Mississippi Valley, even though many of the earliest tombstones have disintegrated.

Years later, de la Pointe's daughter, Marie Joseph Simon, married Hugo Ernestus Krebs, a German from Alsalce-Lorraine who had immigrated to the Pascagoula area about 1730. The Krebs descendents of this influential and enterprising forbear remained in possession of the Fort for nearly two centuries until 1914.

The name "Old Spanish Fort" had its origin in the Spanish provincial period of the late eighteenth century when the building was supposed to have been used as a fortified residence by Don Enrique Grimarest, an officer of the Spanish army who married Ana Narbona, granddaughter of Hugo Ernestus Krebs.

In 1950 Jackson County granted a 50 year lease of the property to the Jackson County Historical Society. The building presently houses a collection of artifacts relating to the history of this structure.

The Old Spanish Fort is a three-room rectangular structure with one story and attic, measures 37 feet in depth and 62 feet 3 inches in length. Its walls are framed of cypress and cedar, with oyster shell concrete fill. An added one-story porch with square posts joined by plank railing encloses the north, south, and west elevations. Exposed rafters project approximately two feet beyond the porch plates. The gable roof, with broken pitch on the facade or south side, is covered with wooden shingles (not original), and the two interior chimneys on the ridge are stucco over brick.

The original building consisted of one large room and two smaller ones which occupied the area of the present middle room. At an undetermined date, a one-room addition was made on the east, to be followed by one on the west. Although there is evidence of two other rooms having been built on the northeast and southwest corners, they no longer exist, and the present layout is three rooms on a single axis. The original oyster shell concrete floor was first covered with wood, raised approximately 18 inches, and more recently with concrete. Random-width boarding is laid tongue-and-groove in the attic, which is reached through a trap door near the west fireplace on the middle room. Walls are covered in a plaster made of ground oyster shells, and in the east room is a panel which shows the bousillage (mixture of clay and moss) underneath. Ceiling beams are exposed and some are grooved. The two double chimneys provide fireplaces at each end of the middle room and a single fireplace in each adjoining room. All are similarly treated, with hearths elevated several feet and thick wooden shelves above handmade brick surrounds. Broad wooden planks form the casings for windows and doors.

The building presently houses a collection of artifacts relating to the diverse periods of Gulf Coast history: French, Spanish, English, Mississippi territorial, and Confederate.

EILAND

Miss Myrtle Frances Eiland, age 88, of Pascagoula, Miss., died Sunday, Sept. 10, 2006 in the Plaza Nursing Center, where 28 years ago she became the first resident. Born in Pascagoula, Aug. 22, 1918 to the late Walter David and Phillipa Alice "Ankey" Krebs Eiland, she was a life long resident of Pascagoula. She was a member of Our Lady of Victories Catholic Church.

Among her survivors are cousins, Isabelle Millette, William Gardner, Mary Gardner, and Joe Gardner. She is also survived by many friends who loved her very much, especially Kathryn Webb of Pascagoula.

Pallbearers will be Bill Gardner, Joe Gardner, Bill Millette, Bernard Millette, Joe Millette, and Mike Krebs. Joe Webb will serve as an honorary pallbearer.

Funeral services will be held at 3 p.m., Tuesday, Sept. 12, 2006 from the chapel of O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home with Father Michael Kelleher officiating.

The family will receive friends from 2 to 3 p.m. at the funeral home. Interment will follow at Machpelah Cemetery.

Those unable to attend services are invited to register online at www.obryantokeefe.com

Services are under the direction of O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home of Pascagoula.

EUNICE G. KROEGER

Eunice G. Kroeger, died July 17, 2006 after a short illness. Eunice was born January 4, 1919 in Pascagoula, MS (daughter of John Augustus Green, Sr. and Mary Isabelle Krebs). Eunice graduated from Our Lady of Victories High School in 1937, and then worked several years for the utility company in Pascagoula.

She married Dale A. Kroeger on May 15, 1942 in Pascagoula. In 1946 Eunice accompanied her husband Dale when he worked in Philadelphia, PA, Bremen, Germany (1949-52), London, England (1952-56), Portland, OR (1953-1964), and Madison, NJ (1964-1981). In 1964, Eunice moved to Madison, NJ when Dale was promoted to Sr. Vice President of Operations in the American Bureau of Shipping. She was active in the Women's Propeller Club. In 1981 they moved to Camas, WA.

Surviving are her daughters, Judy K. Corbett (Kroeger) of Seattle, Maya J. Collins (Kroeger) of Atlanta, GA; son, Michael A. Kroeger of Camas, WA; and nine grandchildren. Eunice's husband, Dale, preceded her in death.

Viewing will be Sat., July 22, 2006 from 10-Noon at Brown's Funeral Home in Camas. The funeral service will follow at 2:00pm, Saturday, July 22, 2006 with Chaplain Dick Edmundson officiating.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggest memorials be sent to the Ray Hickey Hospice House, 2112 Mill Plain Blvd., PO Box 1600, Vancouver, WA. To send condolences or to sign the online guestbook, please visit: www.brownsfh.com. Brown's Funeral Home in Camas has been entrusted with arrangements.

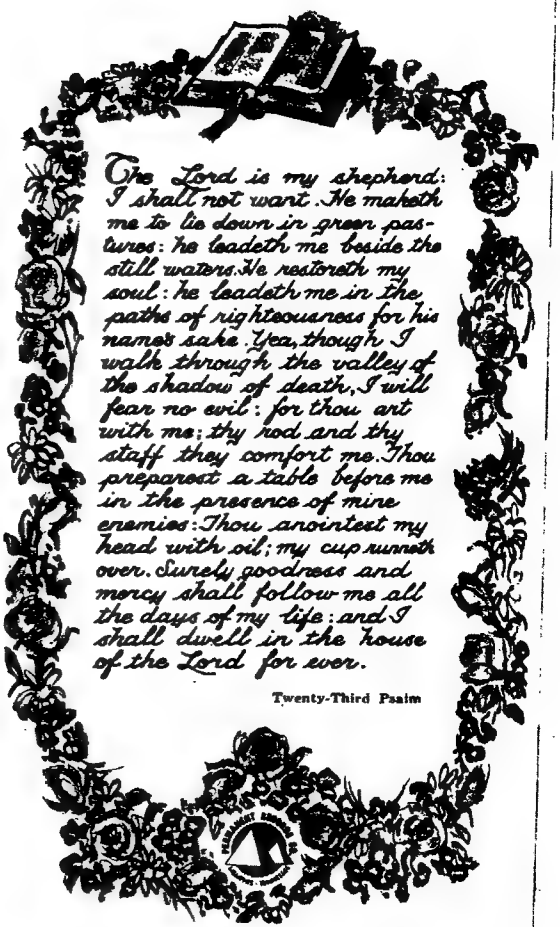
Rest In Peace



The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me beside the still waters. He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake. Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over. Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

Krebs-Green Wedding.

One of the prettiest of home weddings of recent occurrence in Pascagoula was that of Miss Isabel Krebs to Mr. John A. Green on last Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's father, Mr. Jerome Krebs, on Lake avenue. The home was beautifully decorated in ferns, palms and vines, the general color scheme being white roses and smilax. Miss Phillippa Krebs, sister of the bride, was her maid and Mr. Anderson [illegible]

SCRANTON, MISS.

Mr. John A. Green and Miss Isabel Krebs were united in the holy bonds of matrimony on the evening of the second at the home of the bride's parents on Lake avenue, Rev. Father O'Riley officiating. The bride was attired in a bewitching dress of white chiffon over satin, with wreath and veil, and she carried a shower of brides roses. Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for Mobile, where in the future they will reside.

Green-Krebs Wedding.

The marriage of Miss Isabel Krebs and Mr. John A. Green took place Wednesday at 7:30 p. m., at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. Jerome Krebs. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Father B. O'Reilly, in the presence of relatives and friends. The house was attractively decorated for the happy occasion. The bride was beautifully gowned in white chiffon over satin with veil and wreath. She carried a bouquet of bride roses. The maid of honor, Miss Phillippa Krebs, a sister of the bride was attired in pink and Mr. Willie Anderson acted as best man. The bride is one of Pascagoula's most popular young ladies. Mr. Green is engaged in the bakery business at Mobile and is a native of this city. Mrs. S. R. Powell and Mrs. Sidoine Krebs assisted in receiving the guests. The bride's traveling dress was white serge with black picture hat. A reception was held at the family home; Misses Florence Dent and Rita Johnson presided at the punch bowl. The numerous presents received by the bride attested to her popularity. Mr. and Mrs. Green left on the night train for Mobile where they will take possession of their new home.

MRS. JOHN A. GREEN.

Mrs. Mary Isabel Green, wife of Mr. John A. Green, died Thursday morning at 12:50 o'clock at her late home on North Pascagoula street, after an illness of only a few days, her death being caused by a stroke of paralysis Monday afternoon from which she never recovered. Funeral details had not been arranged as this paper went to press, awaiting arrival of a brother from Trenton, N. J.

Mrs. Green was before her marriage Miss Mary Isabel Krebs, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. August Krebs. She was 48 years of age, was born and reared and lived her entire life in Pascagoula. In 1910 she was married to Mr. John A. Green, who survives her, as do seven children: Johnnie, Mary Catherine, Claude, Eunice, Marvin, Clifford and Genevieve. She is also survived by one sister and three brothers, as follows: Mrs. W. D. Elland, S. E. Krebs, Sylvester K. Krebs of Pascagoula, and Leon A. Krebs of Trenton, N. J.

Mrs. Green was a devoted Catholic and an active church worker. She was a devoted wife and mother and loved by all who knew her. The bereaved husband and children have the sympathies of numerous friends and acquaintances.

Remarks were made by others present as to the probable cost of cultivation and the profits therefrom, and the great benefits that had accrued to other communities that had gone into berry culture.

After an interesting meeting of some two hours in length of time, in which all present had a part, and every detail of the matter was gone into, an organization was effected, under the name of "The Big Point Strawberry Growers' Association," with the following officers and members:

J. K. Warren, President and Business Manager, J. Carnahan, Secretary and Treasurer; and the following members: R. V. Morgan, S. H. Cook, E. A. Michael, L. L. Lowell, F. J. Kemmerling, E. S Hancock, O. B. Cunningham, M. C. Goff, E. Snyder, H. S. Goff, L. V. Eberhardt.

Other members are expected to be added soon, and those present agreed to plant at least 30 acres in berries this season. Another meeting is set for next Monday night, at which it is thought many more will be present. The Big Point association will co-operate with the Pascagoula association, in the matter of buying plants and fertilizers, shipping and marketing their berries, as it is only through cooperation that such an enterprise can get the best results.

There was a representative also from Hurley, six miles further up the road, who thought he could get the farmers of his section to plant some berries and cooperate with the other two associations.

Family Reunion At Krebs Home On Mother's Day

The family circle at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Silas Krebs and their mother, Mrs. Samantha Krebs, was made happy by the arrival Saturday night of Mr. Krebs' sister, Mrs. Everett Mathias, and her husband, to celebrate Mother's Day with the elder Mrs. Krebs.

The occasion was doubly happy because it was the first time in twenty years that the brother and sister had met. MAY 15 1942

KREBS—JUMONVILLE

Miss Madge Barbara Jumonville, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marsby Jumonville, and W. Guy Krebs, Jr., of Pascagoula, were quietly married last Saturday afternoon by Rev. Earl P. Knobloch, pastor of the Lutheran church in Gulfport.

Mrs. Krebs, a lovely blonde, was attractively dressed in a biege wool suit with blue accessories and wore a shoulder corsage of gardenias. She is a popular member of the younger set in Biloxi and is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Davis, one of the older families in Biloxi.

She had as her only attendant, her mother, Mrs. Marsby Jumonville.

Mr. Krebs is a member of one of Pascagoula's oldest families. He was educated in the schools in Pascagoula and is now employed at the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corp. yards in Pascagoula. He had as his only attendant his close friend, Ralph Bellman of Pascagoula.

Following a short wedding trip to Florida, Mr. and Mrs. Krebs are now making their home in Pascagoula. MAR-6, 1942

DELMAS-KREBS.

(From Chronicle-Star)

Miss Nell Ursula Krebs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles K. Krebs, and Mr. Robert Arthur Delmas, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Delmas of Gulfport, were married at Nuptial Mass, Monday morning, November 19, at seven o'clock, at Our Lady of Victories Church, Rev. Father Hunter officiating.

The altar was decorated with a profusion of radiant roses and chrysanthemums. The party entered to the march from Wagner's "Lohengrin." During the ceremony, Ernest Moore, uncle of the bride, sang Gounod's "Ave Maria."

The bride was given away by her father. She was lovely in a royal blue dress with black accessories. Miss Krebs had as her bridesmaid her sister, Miss Mary Grace Krebs, who was attired in navy blue with black accessories. The best man was a brother of the bride, Mr. Council Krebs of Bogalusa, La.

After the wedding, which was a double ring ceremony, by Father Hunter, the bride and groom left for Hattiesburg by car and thence by train to Beaumont, Texas, on their honeymoon of two weeks. After their honeymoon the couple will be located at Hattiesburg, where Mr. Delmas is employed by the Hercules Powder Company. NOV. 16, 1934 MPA

Cirlot

Hello there,

Thank you for sending me the information, however, I must admit I do not know who those people are. I could not find any link to my grandmother, Josephine Cilot Krebs. She was the wife of Sidoine Eugene Krebs. I would appreciate it if you could clarify this for me.

Also, you had indicated that you found a copy of "Hurricane's Wake." Congrats! I am still looking. Do you have any suggestions who might have a copy for sale?

I hope to visit Pascagoula some day although it is not in the near future. My husband is seriously ill and I do not forsee travel for quite some time. However, I do look forward to seeing you and I hope you will be available for lunch or dinner as my guest. You have been so kind and gracious.

Thank you very much.

Death of Jerome A. Krebs.

Mr. Jerome Augustus Krebs, a life long resident of this city, died at his home on Krebs Lake, in the northern part of the city, on last Saturday afternoon at two o'clock, after an illness of about two years.

Deceased was 64 years of age at the time of his death, and leaves a large number of relatives in this city and elsewhere. He was a member of the Woodmen of the World, and a devout Catholic.

He is survived by three sons, Messrs. Sidoine, Sylvester and Leon Krebs, of this city; two daughters, Miss Phillipa Krebs, of Pascagoula, and Mrs. John A. Green, of Crichton, Ala.; two brothers, Messrs. Allen Krebs, of Birmingham, and John Krebs, of Moss Point; two sisters, Madames Robert Reinicke and Blanche Trenty, of this city; seven grandchildren and numerous other relatives here and elsewhere.

The funeral occurred Sunday afternoon, from the church of Our Lady of Victories, Father O'Reilly officiating, the interment being in the Krebs Cemetery near the home of deceased.

Mr. Krebs was born and reared in this city, and had lived his life in the old home in Krebs Lake, the place commonly known as the "Old Spanish Fort," which has been in the Krebs family for over two hundred years, and is one of the landmarks of this city. He had numerous friends both here and elsewhere, who will deeply deplore his death.

His arm is still stiff, but he is gradually regaining the use of it, and hopes in a short time to be alright again.

Bridge Party.

In spite of the approaching storm and threatened down pour of rain last Saturday afternoon the members of the Bridge Club boarded the three o'clock train for Gautier, where they and their friends were most beautifully entertained by Mrs. Hermes Gautier in her "Cottage by the Sea."

When we arrived at the station five autos were waiting to convey us to the home, where a number of guests awaited our arrival.

We were soon seated around five tables, and the games began, after which prizes were awarded as follows: Mrs. Heidelberg won the guest prize, a lovely pink and lace camisole; Mrs. Hinds, of Gautier, won the guest prize, a dainty blue silk Teddy-bear; the consolation prize was cut by Miss Hattie Belle Merriwether, a beautiful jewel comb.

Lights were turned on and we were ushered into the dining room where a long table was waiting, loaded with its delicious menu, which consisted of fried chicken, fruit salad, sandwiches, olives, pickles and chocolate with whipped cream. We were told to find our place cards, the reading of each of which caused much laughter and amusement.

The Victrola dispensed sweet music while many danced. Others resumed the games, until the auto horns announced time to catch the nine o'clock train for home.

Many thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Hermes Gautier for their hospitality and so delightful a time.

One of the Members.

We have not heard of any capitalist accepting the proposition of our friend and townsman, Mr. L. E. Cox, in reference to a hotel for Pascagoula. This is one proposition that it seems to us should demend the attention of those of our citizens who have money to invest. A good hotel on the beach here would be a drawing card, and would lead to other investments in the town.

Mrs. H. M. KREBS.

The funeral of Mrs. H. M. Krebs was held Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the Lutheran church, Rev. Wm. Wedig, the pastor, officiating. Interment in Machpelah cemetery, a large number of friends and acquaintances of the family following the remains to the grave.

Mrs. Krebs was formerly Miss Anna Brondum, the daughter of Mr. Chris Brondum, at whose home her death occurred on Monday night, November 18, at 7:15 o'clock. She was 36 years of age and had been in a low state of health for some time. She is survived by one child, a boy three years old, her father, two brothers, Andrew Brondum and W. C. Brondum; four sisters, Mrs. John F. Pickett, Mrs. J. A. Clark, Miss Celia Brondum and Miss Ida Brondum.

Mrs. Krebs before her marriage was connected with several of the dry goods stores of the city as saleslady, and made many friends by her attention to her work and her pleasant and agreeable disposition. She will be missed by many, and this paper joins numerous friends in expressions of sympathy to the bereaved ones.

F. J. JOHNSON.

Forest J. Johnson, a life long citizen of Pascagoula, died at his home in North Pascagoula street on last Friday evening at 8:30 o'clock, after an illness of only a few days. The funeral was held the following morning at nine o'clock, proceeding from the home to the church of Our Lady of Victories where the Requiem Mass was celebrated by Father B. O'Reilly, the services at the home and cemetery being conducted by Father P. J. Quinn. In-long until a happy and eager crowd filled the buildings and various booths, to examine the exhibits and offer their friendly criticisms of what they saw. There was much to praise and little to criticise. For the past several days officers of the fair, exhibitors and operators of the various refreshment booths have been hard at work preparing for the opening. Many of the buildings have been repainted and freshened, the refreshment booths presided over by the good women of the different religious organizations have all been redecorated, more and brighter lights have been placed in and around the buildings, and when the opening hour came this morning, it is safe to say that the arrangements for the two days of exhibition were more nearly perfect than ever before.

All the booths in both of the big buildings are occupied with the products of Jackson county's farms, fields, factories and shops, as well as the handiwork of the women, girls and boys of the various women's clubs, schools and agricultural clubs. Every foot of space in the buildings has been taken, one large exhibit of nursery stock having been crowded out entirely and having to seek space in the almost too crowded poultry building.

Band Music Pleasing Feature.

A pleasing feature of the fair is the fine music that is being made by the International Paper Company brass band, which plays at intervals during the day and until a late hour of the night. Late music is rendered with skill and precision. It is safe to say that the fair would be rather a drab affair without this fine music. The band is a home product, and one of the most interesting "exhibits" of the fair. The damp weather seemed to have no effect on the music of the band, one lady remarking that the boys seemed to play better than they ever had played before.

A fair would not be a fair without music and children, and the latter have been amply provided for with a big playground fenced in from the rest of the fair where they can play without danger of being run into by passing cars. Here various playground equipment has been provided for the little folks and a trained and careful attendant is on hand to see that they are properly cared for. The slight drizzle of rain that was in evidence earlier in the day had no appreciable effect on the kiddies, for they swarmed in to the play grounds at an early hour and kept the place lively during

There's been a Krebs in every American war

By TOM DONNELLY

PASCAGOULA, Miss. — "There's been a Krebs in every war since the United States began," 83-year-old Joseph V. Krebs of Pascagoula recalled recently on the eve of Jefferson Davis' birthday.

A veteran of World War I, Krebs had two uncles, Arthur and Joseph H. Krebs, who were active in the Civil War. Arthur and Joseph both joined the famous "Twiggs Rifles" from Pascagoula when the war began.

Later Arthur joined Morgan's Raiders and Joseph was wounded twice before ending his career in the Confederate Army. They were part of more than 64 Pascagoula men who were sworn into the South's army (and Twiggs' Rifles) in 1861.

The Krebs family was also highly active in helping to restore the Democratic party to power in Jackson County after the Civil War ended.

But Kreb's family goes much farther back into Pascagoula history than the Civil War. He can easily trace and document his ancestors helping to settle and found this area as far back as the early 1700s.

It may be that Hugo Ernestus Krebs was his first ancestor in Jackson County. If not the first, he was most assuredly one of the very early Krebs in the area. A German from Alsace-Lorraine, he is known to have been in the area as early as 1730.

He is credited with being the progenitor of the Krebs family. He gained the title "Doctor." Although the extent of his practice is not known, he was extremely significant to the growth of the settlement here.

Most of his offspring have played a vital role in the history of Jackson County since 1730. While there were several other families (still prominent here) in the area, Mobile Cathedral records of the Krebs family (1730-1763 especially) show it multiplied the fastest.

In fact, the community came to be known as "Krebsville," as well as Pascagoula, and it was marked as such on several maps. The Krebs family eventually got into the boat building business, as did several other well-known area families.

But Joseph V. Krebs is himself an extraordinary man. While he is proud of his ancestors and his children, he modestly views himself as more of an average man than a person who will compete with some of his ancestors for space in history.

Both area natives who know him well will quickly dispute his modest contentions.

They quickly point to the four-year term he served as a supervisor of District 3. He was one of the driving forces in building the present Jackson County Courthouse. He was also highly instrumental in dredging the Bayou Casotte bayou that later proved to be a forerunner to the industrial complex now located there.

OLD SOLDIER — Joseph V. Krebs, 83, of Pascagoula, Miss., doesn't go back as far as his uniform might indicate; he is a veteran of World War I and says, "There's been a Krebs in every war since the United States began." Krebs says his ancestors helped settle the Pascagoula area as far back as the early 1700s. In fact, he says, the community became known as "Krebsville" as well as Pascagoula.

"I built the courthouse here and they said, 'too big.' It wasn't. It was the courthouse that helped to defeat me (for re-election as a supervisor in 1952). They also didn't like it when we cut the oak trees for the courthouse," he said with a grin. But he also noted more monies were poured into expansions at the courthouse. His foresight proved to be correct.

Remembering the bayou, he said he had it dredged out to entice a small crab factory to locate in Bayou Casotte. "You couldn't get out of it with a rowboat (before the dredging)." He estimated the depth at approximately three to four feet in the bayou before reaching the mouth of the bayou leading to the Gulf before dredging.

Sitting at a picnic table in his spacious backyard that is dotted with huge shade trees, he lit his pipe, as he recalled the past. "I've been smoking a pipe since I was 21. I don't inhale. I never have. It must not have hurt me much," he said.

He was born on Pascagoula Beach and he told about life with his father, a local contractor then. "Some of the buildings he built are still standing," he said with obvious pride.

As a lad, he and other youths were fascinated by a "Major Hess, a Yankee who stayed at Boster's Hotel. He stood on the balcony and looked at other planets with his equipment he brought from New Orleans. Everybody thought he was crazy. He wasn't crazy. He said that people would visit the planet (moon). They did visit that planet and I lived to see it.

"He would call to us boys to come up on the balcony and look. We wouldn't go. We thought he was nuts."

CARTOON — This editorial cartoon about Matthew Krebs of Pascagoula was published in the Star Ledger newspaper in Trenton, N.J. Resurrection youth gets huge response to letter

Matthew Krebs, of Mary Catherine Gallahue's fifth grade class at Resurrection Catholic School, never dreamed he would get such a response to his letter to the Star Ledger newspaper in Trenton, N. J. this spring.

Given the task by his teacher as a social studies project, Matthew chose New Jersey to research because his actor uncle, Patrick Frederic, lives there. Matthew, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Krebs of Pascagoula, asked the readership, through a letter to the editor to help him find out "what makes New Jersey so interesting?"

Two thousand pieces of mail later, Matthew knows. He has received letters, post cards, maps, brochures and pamphlets about every aspect of New Jersey from teachers, retired people, school children, etc. What made the response so overwhelming was the editorial cartoon by the Star Ledger's cartoonist, Tom Walker, which showed a young man at a desk writing the letter. It was captioned "Student from Dixie seeks Jerseyana."

MATTHEW KREBS sits among some of the material he received about New Jersey from readers of the Trenton, New Jersey Star Ledger.

"It was unique from the point of view that he sent his letter to a newspaper in New Jersey that had more than two million circulation," said his teacher, Mrs. Gallahue. "The editorial cartoonist took it and worked it into his daily cartoon."

Although Matthew included his home address in his letter, he also listed the name of his school and the city, Pascagoula. Many pieces of mail arrived to the school addressed to Matthew Krebs, Resurrection Catholic School, Pascagoula, Mississippi, with no address or zip code!

"I have never had a student receive this volume of material in the six years I have been assigning this project," continued Mrs. Gallahue. "I think this has started Matthew on a life-long project on New Jersey, a most interesting state."

"Wild Wild West" was the theme of the Monsignor P.J. Carey Council of 1605, Knights of Columbus, 34th Annual Mardi Gras Ball Feb. 2 at the council home in Pascagoula.

Ernest Falgo and Ilone "Nix" Greene reigned as Their Majesties, King Arthur XXXIV, and Queen Guinevere XXXIV.

Retiring royalty were W.P. "Pat" Keene and Penny Kensler as their majesties King Arthur XXXIII and Queene Guinevere XXXIII.

His majesty is retired from the paper industry. He and his wife Ann have two children and five grandchildren.

He is a member of the Knights of Columbus, American Legion, The Elk's Lodge and Our Lady of Victories Parish. Falgo is a graduate of Mississippi State.

Falgo wore formal black tails, and made his entrance in a black top hat and black satin mask trimmed with gold braid and sequins.

Her Majesty is the wife of Harry Green Sr. They have four children and two grandchildren.

Mrs. Green attended our Lady of Victories High School and Jackson County Junior College.

She is an active member of the Knights of Columbus Ladies Auxiliary. Mrs. Green has been involved in many fund raising efforts, with St. Jude's Hospital as one of her favorites.

Mrs. Green wore a gown of white satin and lace, which featured a sweetheart neckline and short puffed sleeves. It was heavily beaded with crystals and sequins.

Her train was of white velvet studded with rhinestones and decorated with butterflies worked in pink sequins. It was lavishly bordered in rows of silver sequins. The mantel of white satin was also done in a butterfly motif.

Gentlewomen of the Court of Camelot were Lady Elaine, Mrs. Buzzy (Carrie) Larqilliere; Lady Lynette, Mrs. (Fran) John

The hall was decorated to reflect the western theme. Large glittered cowboys, 10-gallon hats, boots, guns and playing cards were the focal points of the entrance for the court and the stage backdrop.

The stage itself was bordered by a split-rail fence and two large flowering cactuses stood at each end. The walls reflected the wide open spaces of the old west, with blue sky, white clouds and rows of glittering catuses. There were sign posts showing the way to many old west towns.

Brightly glittered tombstones stood in Boot Hill and a brilliantly colored Indian village was featured along the back wall. The ceiling was made up of blue metallic streamers and cowboy hats decorated with feather and sequins in the colors of Mardi Gras were hung from the ceiling. To round out the western motif the tables were covered in red gingham cloths with stawbale centerpieces tied with red ribbon.

The ball was emceed by Joe Martin and chaired by A.G. Bodden Jr.

Committee members were Betty and A.G. Bodden, Al Bodeen III, Cindy Turner, Carolynn and Don Cox, Toni and John Rathel, Ted and Vernie Knowles, Jerry and Elaine LeBlanc, Mike and Karen Gilly, Ernest and Ann Falgo, John and Ilah Zirpola, and Butch and Mary Jo Garreth.

Court assistance was given by Mrs. John Rathel and Mrs. Jerry LeBlanc. Music was by Gene Leachmon and the Reservations of Mobile, Ala.

Ground Breaking For

By LINDA SANDERS
Sunday Staff Writer

When ground is broken Oct. 4 for the Louis LeFleur Trading Post, the City of Jackson American Revolutionary Bicentennial Committee hopes it is just the beginning of the LeFleur's Bluff project.

"The project is two-fold," says Carol Yates, committee vice chairman and financial task force leader. In addition to the trading post, long range plans are for LeFleur's Bluff Park.

"We went through several different types of ideas (for the proposed park). What we came up with was a tourist interest and information center that would tell the total history of Mississippi and refer tourists to actual, authentic locations."

AT THE SAME TIME, the park would offer enjoyment to city residents, she added.

The committee suggests the park be located just south of the trading post.

Mrs. Yates says "researchers tried to make an exact location." (for the post) "But the 'best point was in an area from the Woodrow Wilson bridge to where Interstate 20 crosses the Pearl River."

"Some people think the trading post site was where the Old Capitol or Dennery's Restaurant now is.

the late 1700s to set up a trading post, Mrs. Yates adds.

The park site, as proposed by the committee, would be the area where the Sanitation Department is now located. Mrs. Yates says this land is "partly city and state owned."

The site is the "most strategic" point where Interstate 55 and Interstate 20 intersect.

Mrs. Yates said the park would then be visible from the interstate as well as being at the main entrance to Jackson.

NO TIMETABLE, however, has been set for the actual planning and construction. While the committee has no detailed cost estimates, Mrs. Yates says it will cost approximately $30,000 to draw up detailed plans.

"It's a big idea, but we tried to define what it could be. Nobody has really gone after money in tourism."

The park proposal has been taken to the mayor and commissioners, but "we have to get this through the state legislature," she says.

Mrs. Yates sees final construction depending on the legislature. "The city of Jackson financially couldn't do it."

THE COMMITTEE hopes the city will give the land to the state and then receive federal funds to relocate the Sanitation Department. "It could be a joint effort."

Mrs. Yates adds Park Commission money could also come into the planning. "We'd like to sit down with the Park Commission and legislators who find the idea feasible and talk about it."

Though the funding and construction proposals are not finalized, the Bicentennial Committee has drawn up a number of ideas on directions the proposed park could take.

Mrs. Yates says the park can tie in with the Pearl River waterway all the way to the Gulf Coast." And the park's facilities can tell the story of Mississippi, she adds.

ENTERTAINMENT, a theme restaurant and a Mississippi crafts gift shop are proposed in addition to the exhibits.

Another historical replica for the area would be a covered bridge over a small stream where there was one during the Civil War. "It was here Sherman said, 'War Is Hell.' "

In telling the state's and city's histories, the committee plans for the presentation to begin with early Indians, then go into the later Choctaws. "We hope to depict something from Indian mounds. Perhaps have an ampitheater where Indian festivals could be held."

Other historical events to be depicted are the expeditions of Hinds and Holmes. And the idea of the original capitol could be interpreted, Mrs. Yates says, as a brick building that could be used for an Old South tea room or restaurant.

DURING THE Civil War period, the Chimneyville area could be represented almost like statutes or monuments, "like the town square with only chimneys.

"Leaders from the black community would like black artisans of the day to be represented," she adds.

As the park's facilities would be planned to direct visitors to other state sites, the Civil War exhibits "would relate tourists to Columbus, Holly Springs, Natchez and the battle park in Vicksburg."

Mrs. Yates sees the park as also illustrating Jackson's history up to the present day. "The city doesn't have any place to publicly display things that built our city — documents, momentoes."

ENTERTAINMENT possibilities include an outdoor ampitheater and shows from boats or barges on the river.

There is a large variety of native foods, Mrs. Yates adds. The committee has done a "lot of fun thinking," about a possible "Mule Ear Restaurant" named after Mississippi-made wood-framed chairs with backs and seats woven from cornhusks, where native delicacies such as black eyed peas would be served.

And the gift shop ("there is no place in the city to go and acquire a souvenir") could also offer seedlings of the magnolia, the state tree, and the crepe myrtle, the city tree, both popular with visitors.

Mrs. Yates says the committee has been unable to determine how many visitors a year actually do come into the state, but one estimate is 100,000 people passing through in a two-month period.

WITH INTERSTATE 55 as a well traveled tourist highway, she thinks the LeFleur's Bluff Park can attract the untapped tourist trade.

"We are looking too lightly at this state.

"Although we are not saying Disneyland, we are saying a park that tells the history of the location, and the location cannot be beaten.

"People ought to take pride in where they live, in the beauty, people and history that made the state what it is."

Dear Mrs. Millette:

In response to your request of June 30, 1981, I am pleased to enclose certified photocopy of the marriage record of Mathias Lefleau and Marianne Dupond. I regret the copy is so dark, but it is the best reproduction I could get from the microfilm. I cannot furnish you with a transcription from the original as our marriage records book is presently being restored. If you feel you cannot use the photocopy, please return it and there will be no charge. This record is on page 52-a of Marriage Records Book #1 and is dated 4 January 1779.

I also located the following children of this marriage:

Maria Magdalena - Pg. 7, B.B.#2, 12 July 1781
Marguerita - Pg. 21, B.B.#2, 30 December 1787
Eleanor - Pg. 21-a, B.B.#2, 12 February 1788
Maria Celeste - Pg. 44-a, B.B.#2, 3 July 1791
Juan Mathias - Pg. 50, B.B.#2, 6 October 1793

If will be glad to furnish you with certified photocopies of any or all of the above for a fee of $3.00 each.

The fee for research on this request is $5.00 for one hour and the fee for the certified photocopy is $3.00, making a total fee of $8.00 due the Archdiocese of Mobile.

If I can be of further service to you, please call on me.

Sincerely,

Mrs. T.R.Rehm

County native seeks Senate District 51 seat

Beth Krebs of Pascagoula has announced her candidacy as a Democrat for State Senate District 51.

Ms. Krebs, 31, was born in Jackson County the daughter of Mrs. Janel Krebs and the late Harry L. "Bubba" Krebs. She is the granddaughter of C.J. Porter, Mildred Arceneaux and the late Mr. and Mrs. J. Guy Krebs of Pascagoula. She is married to Roger Day.

The candidate is a 1977 graduate of Pascagoula High School and a 1981 graduate of Mississippi State University with a degree in business administration. At MSU she was active in the Student Association Senate and was named Most Outstanding Senator.

She was employed several years in the oil and gas industry before returning to Pascagoula as a sales representative for Beatrice Hunt/Wesson for whom she was a key member of an award-winning sales team which received national recognition for its work.

Ms. Krebs now is co-owner of Krebs Trailer Plaza in Pascagoula and is active in its management.

Beth Krebs

She was named an Outstanding Young Woman of America in 1987. She is a member of Our Lady of Victories Catholic Church and Mississippi State University Alumni Association.

State senators receive an annual salary of $10,000 plus expenses ($800 a month out of session, per diem during session).

Dear Renee:

I promised you I would send an updated copy of the Krebs Family Tree (Hilaire's branch). My cousin, Harry Lee Krebs, gave me this, and I have added as many dates as I could find, and added the names to Harry Joseph Krebs (my grandfather).

Thanks for your help when we were there in October. It was a pleasure to meet you and chat with you about our genealogy.

Sincerely,

Marguerite N. Taylor (Rita)

(Mrs. Carl L. Taylor)

I noted Hilaire's name is spelled several ways!

On this day the twentieth of December in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and eighty three, in compliance with an order of his Excellency Henry Grimarest, Lieutenant Colonel of His Royal Armies, Political and Military Governor of Mobile and its District;

We the undersigned do give upon our word of honor the following report:

Round Island was in possession of the Widow Mrs. Mauran, the Mother of Widow Lanne, wife of the petitioner without title for the same, in the year one thousand seven hundred and fifty-two, and that we have no knowledge of any other person having claim or been possessed of the said Island.

(signed) CHASLANG LEMOIR DUBROCA DUPAT

Henry Grimarest, Political and Military Governor of this Town, and its Districts, Lieutenant Colonel of the Royal Armies:

By virtue of the power and authority conferred upon me by His Majesty, and in consideration of the preceding memorial and the certificate attached thereto, I do by these present grant unto the above named Francis Krebs,an inhabitant of this town, the entire and absolute property in and on Round Island, recording to the prayer of the petitioner, for his own purpose and during his life, and after his death to his lawful heirs, for the purposes of cultivation, raising cattle, cutting wood, possessing the same as a place of residence, and for any other purposes which he may think proper and under the authority of this grant, he is permitted to take immediate possessionof that said Island, and he is hereby recognized to be the only lawful owner of the same, to remain uninterrupted thereon by any person whatsoever; and that this grant may be perpetuated, it is ordered that the same be Deposited in the Archives of this Government, and that a truthful copy duly authenticated in doce forme of law be given to the petitioner.

Given at Mobile on this third day of December in the year of our Lord, one thousand seven hundred and eighty three, signed with my hand and seal with my armorial bearings.

JOSEPH HELAIRE KREBS

Died - Friday night last, Scranton lost one of its oldest and most respected citizens in the death of Joseph Helaire Krebs.

His house caught afire about 10 o'clock and his death was caused by the shock sustained. He was removed to the residence of Mr. R. J. Lochridge, and died in a few moments. Mr. Krebs, however, was in feeble health, having just recovered from a prolonged and serious illness. He was 68 years old and unmarried.

He was a gallant Confederate soldier, being a member of Twiggs Rifles, 27th Mississippi and having taken part in numerous battles. His devotion to the Confederacy was never abated.

He worked zealously for the organization of the Jackson County Camp, of which he was an enthusiastic member. He was a native of this place, where he resided all his life. He leaves 3 sisters, Mrs. C. E. Sarrazin, Mrs. V. P. Yelberton, and Mrs. I. P. Sarrazin of New Orleans, besides numerous relatives to mourn his loss.

The funeral took place Sunday afternoon from the residence of Mrs. Alice Sarrazin and was largely attended. Funeral services were conducted by Father Ten Brink. Interment was in Krebs Cemetery.

HENRY CLAIBORNE
MARY LOUISE WRIGHT

Married - Henry Claiborne and Mary Louise Wright, (colored) were married at the Zion Church by Rev. F. W. Riley.

PRICE LAMAR

Died - Price Lamar, colored, aged about 50 years, was found dead at his lodgings at West Pascagoula on Wednesday. For the past 5 years, Lamar had been in the employ of L & N Railroad under foreman W. T. Jackson, who gave him the reputation of being a quiet, faithful workman. A coroner's jury decided that his death was from natural causes. His body was shipped to Letohatchie, Ala. for burial, where his parents reside.

DEATH OF J. F. FLOWERS.

James Franklin Flowers died at home on Washington avenue last Friday afternoon at 3:15 o'clock, after very brief illness. The funeral was held Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock, with interment in Greenwood cemetery. Rev. Dr. N. O. Patterson, pastor of the First Baptist church, of which deceased was a member, conducted the funeral ceremony, assisted by Rev. E. L. Ledbetter, pastor of the Methodist church, the latter making a brief talk on the life of the deceased, Dr. Patterson saying that as he had been here only a short time he was not acquainted with deceased and asked Rev. Mr. Ledbetter to speak for him. Mr. Ledbetter's talk was short and sympathetic, referring to the unblemished life of deceased, and of his love for his fellow man as exemplified in the teachings of Odd Fellowship, the order to which he belonged. The pall-bearers were: Earl Davis, Joe V. Krebs, Harold Illing, Gus Frentz and Andrew Foster, all sons-in-law of deceased; and Arthur Allen.

A long line of cars conveyed to the cemetery numerous relatives and friends of deceased, and as the last benediction was pronounced, and the casket lowered into the ground, the grave and the lot around was covered with many beautiful flowers, the offering of friends and relatives.

J. F. Flowers was born in Bowling Green, Ky., was fifty-seven years of age, and had lived in Jackson county for the past thirty years, twelve years of which were spent in Pascagoula where he had lived the life of a quiet law-abiding, God-fearing citizen, commanding the respect of all who knew him. He was twice married, the last time to Miss Doma Krebs of this city, who survives him, as do two small children by that marriage, Frank and Florence. There were nine daughters by the first marriage, all living, as follows: Miss Eva Flowers of Pascagoula, Mrs. Maud Rouse of Mobile, Mrs. Earl Davis of Vancleave, Mrs. Gus Frentz of Biloxi, Mrs. Joe Krebs of Bayou Casotte, Mrs. Harold Illing of Ocean Springs, Mrs. Lillian Brodthage of Chicago, Mrs. Andrew Foster of Mobile, and Miss Cleo Flowers of Pascagoula. In addition to the above there are a large connection of relatives, who mourn the loss of this good and faithful man. 17 July 1931 Chronicle Star

The French in Florida have much improved this machine by a large wheel, which turns two of these mills at once, and with so much velocity as by means of a boy, who turns it, to employ two negroes at hard labour to shovel the seed from under the mill: One of these machines I saw at Mr. Krebs at Pasca Oocooloo, but as it was partly taken down, he claiming the invention was very cautious in answering my questions, I cannot pretend to describe it accurately; I am informed that one of those improving mills will deliver seventy or eighty pounds of clean cotton per diem.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Henry Schaub

Sands - Schaub

Teresa Mary Sands and Patrick Henry Schaub were married April 19, 1991, in a nuptial mass performed by Rev. Paul Hogarty at Resurrection Catholic Church at Miramar Beach in Destin, Florida.

Mary was resplendent in her full-length ivory gown with tiered ruffles and lace accented by sequins and pearls.

Jennifer Allen, age 5 of Destin, made a lovely flower girl and Christopher Burleson age 6, son of the bride, made a very elegant ring-bearer. John P. Jones with Mary's mother gave away the bride.

The bride, daughter of Mrs. Doris Pfeffer of Belleville, Ill. is employed with the Beach Breeze newspaper in Destin, Fla.

The groom, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick D. Schaub, Sr. of Gautier, Miss. is employed with Winn Dixie Stores, Inc. in Destin, Fla.

Out of town guests included the parents of the bride and groom and Mary B. Schaub, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Krebs of Pascagoula, Miss., F.D. (Rick) Schaub, Jr. and family, and Gary W. Schaub of Gautier, Miss., Mrs. Tom Abruzzese and Rick Abruzzese of Vancleave, Miss.

The wedding party and guests enjoyed a delightful beach side reception held at the New James Lee Park in Destin, Fla.

After a honeymoon in Mobile, Ala. the couple will reside in the Sandestin area of Destin, Florida.

Death of Mrs. Justine C. Krebs.

Mrs. Justine Sarrazin Krebs, widow of the late Armand Krebs, died in this city last Saturday afternoon, at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. James A. Pelham, in Belfast Avenue, at the age of 63 years, 1 month and 17 days, after an illness of some months, brought on by a stroke of paralysis.

The funeral took place on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock, from her late residence, conducted by Rev. Father O'Reilly, pastor of the Catholic church, interment being in the Catholic Cemetery in South Pascagoula.

Mrs. Krebs was born in New Orleans in 1854, and had lived in Pascagoula for 32 years. She was a devout member of the Catholic church, and had a large circle of friends who unite with the family in mourning her death. She was the mother of Mrs. J. A. Pelham of this city, and leaves two other daughters and one son, namely: Madames N. F. Miller and Nelo Ros, of El Paso, Texas, and Mr. Tom Krebs, of this city. She leaves two sisters and one brother, all living in New Orleans, Madames John Macheca and Chas. Sarrazin, and Mr. F. L. Sarrazin. Tribute to the past

Joseph V. Krebs, 83, simulates how some of his ancestors might have held the Confederate flag during the Civil War on his porch at 4612 Lanier Ave., Pascagoula. Krebs, a veteran of World War I, has had members of his family in all of the nation's wars. (Mississippi Press Photo by Tim Wilson)

Joe Krebs recalls family's service

By TOM DONNELLY

"There's been a Krebs in every war since the United States began," 83-year-old Joseph V. Krebs of 4612 Lanier Ave. in Pascagoula recalled on the eve of Jefferson Davis' birthday.

A veteran of World War I, Krebs had two uncles, Arthur and Joseph H. Krebs, who were active in the Civil War. Arthur and Joseph both joined the famous "Twiggs Rifles" from Pascagoula when the war began.

Later Arthur joined Morgan's Raiders and Joseph was wounded twice before ending his career in the Confederate Army. They were part of more than 64 Pascagoula men who were sworn into the South's Army (and Twiggs' Rifles) in 1861.

The Krebs family was also highly active in helping to restore the Democratic Party to power in Jackson County after the Civil War ended.

But Krebs' family goes much farther back into Pascagoula history than the Krebs recalls wartime service

Civil War. He can easily trace and document his ancestors helping to settle and found this area as far back as the early 1700's.

It may be that Hugo Ernestus Krebs was his first ancestor in Jackson County. If not the first, he was most assuredly one of the very early Krebs in the area. A German from Alsalce-Lorraine, he is known to have been in the area as early as 1730.

He is credited with being the progenitor of the Krebs family. He gained the title "Doctor." Although the extent of his practice is not known, he was extremely significant to the growth of the settlement here.

Most of his offspring have played a vital role in the history of Jackson County since 1730. While there were several other families (still prominent here) in the area, Mobile (Alabama) Cathedral records of the Krebs family (1730-1763 especially) show it multiplied the fastest.

In fact, the community came to be known as "Krebsville," as well as Pascagoula, and it was marked as such on several maps. The Krebs family eventually got into the boat building business, as did several other well known area families.

But Joseph V. Krebs is himself an extraordinary man. While he is proud of his ancestors and his children, he modestly views himself as more of an average man than a person who will compete with some of his ancestors for space in history.

Both area natives who know him well will quickly dispute his modest contentions.

They quickly point to the four-year term he served as a supervisor of District 3. He was one of the driving forces in building the present Jackson County Courthouse. He was also highly instrumental in dredging the Bayou Casotte bayou that later proved to be a forerunner to the industrial complex now located there.

"I built the courthouse here and they said, 'too big.' It wasn't. It was the courthouse that helped to defeat me (for re-election as a supervisor in 1952). They also didn't like it when we cut the oak trees for the courthouse," he said with a grin. But he also noted more monies were poured into expansions at the courthouse. His foresight proved to be correct.

Remembering the bayou, he said he had it dredged out to entice a small crab factory to locate in Bayou Casotte. "You couldn't get out of it with a rowboat (before the dredging)." He estimated the depth at approximately three to four feet in the bayou before reaching the mouth of the bayou leading to the Gulf before dredging.

Sitting at a picnic table in his spacious backyard that is dotted with huge shade trees, he lit his pipe, as he recalled the past. "I've been smoking a pipe since I was 21. I don't inhale. I never have. It must not have hurt me much," he said.

He was born on Pascagoula Beach and he told about life with his father, a local contractor then. "Some of the buildings he built are still standing," he said with obvious pride.

As a lad, he and other youths were fascinated by a "Major Hess, a Yankee who stayed at Boster's Hotel. He stood on the balcony and looked at other planets with his equipment he brought from New Orleans. Everybody thought he was crazy. He wasn't crazy. He said that people would visit the planet (moon). They did visit that planet and I lived to see it.

"He would call to us boys to come up on the balcony and look. We wouldn't go. We thought he was nuts."

He was born in 1894 to William A. Krebs and Agnes Valentine Baptiste Krebs and he said his father told him to make mullet nets as a boy. Since his retirement 13 years ago, he has made 112 mullet nets at nights in his large home. Some he has sold and others he has given to friends and relatives. "I'm still making the nets at night. I take my time."

By day, he builds boats in his backyard. A trade handed down to the Krebs family, once prominent in boat building industry in this area, along with several other families here.

"There's my workshop," he said, aiming the stem of his pipe toward a fairly large building, as he clutched the pipe's bowl. "I have electric tools and all kinds of tools I use." He also motioned to a small boat now under construction.

"Mostly I build small boats. Because I'm too old to climb anymore. I build about 14-foot runabouts. I take my time."

Jokingly, he noted he met his wife on a blind date. She was Ruth Flowers of Vancleave and the couple was married in 1919. "It was right after I came out of the Army. I was 24 and she was 19. She died on May 7 in 1969. If she have lived until June 26, we would have been married for 50 years. That would have been a long time."

As he put on a Confederate Cavalary uniform for a newspaper picture, he grinned. "I was in the First Cavalry in World War I. Then they put me in the 114th Ammunition train and finally I was in the engineers. I volunteered for the Army. I served from 1917-1919. But I never left the United States."

He worked for the county after his term as an elected supervisor in the capacity of a bridge building supervisor. A position he held until he retired in 1964.

In 1975, he was king of the Knights of Columbus Carnival Ball. He served as a past king in 1976 and this year he was in the royal court.

takes great interest in everything connected with the prosperity of our State, has the following to say upon the subject of railroads within our borders:

It is to be hoped that congress will grant the request of the Mississippi legislature, and waive the reversion of the lands donated to the State by the act of 1856, for the purpose of building a railroad from the seashore to the interior. Notwithstanding the fact that Mississippi's requirements in the way of seaports are sufficiently satisfied for all practical purposes by Mobile and New Orleans, still it is a matter of State pride to build up a port distinctively Mississippian, and we can understand and sympathize with such a desire. Besides, the greater the business of the coast the greater becomes New Orleans. The building of the Gulf and Ship Island road will not injure New Orleans, while it will furnish railroad communication with New Orleans to a considerable portion of the State, and will supply competition in transportation, as well as facility.

But, after all, the more important roads projected in Mississippi are those which, like the Northeastern, run from northeast to southwest. The Natchez, Jackson and Columbus, and the Illinois Central's proposed branch to Aberdeen, will be of great service to the State, in bringing out her products and forwarding them to tide-water. Ultimately the great channels of traffic in the South will all be constructed on northeast and southwest lines. The Louisville and Nashville will have to make a cut off on this theory, or it cannot permanently compete for through business.

The Mississippi Mexican Gulf railroad, recently chartered by the legislature, proposes to take advantage of this theory by building a short line from the gulf through Harrison and other counties, to connect with the New Orleans and Northeastern. In this way it will utilize the Erlanger system without delay. It is to be exempt from taxation twenty years. Among the corporators we notice the names of prominent citizens of Harrison, Hancock, Perry and Marion counties, and J. T. Hardie, of New Orleans.

It is said by the republican organs that Jesse James was a democrat. It does not seem to occur to the democratic organs to retort that while Jesse James, murderer and outlaw, has been dispatched under the administration of a democratic governor of Missouri, one Charles Guiteau, assassin and dead-beat, avowedly a republican, is still having a happy time of it, selling autographs in the Washington jail.—Chicago Times, Ind.

As an evidence of the growing taste for aestheticism in New York—a love for the beautiful and beautiful—since the visit of Oscar Wilde, it may be mentioned that a sparring exhibition for the benefit of a prize fighter, a few nights ago, was attended by 4000 persons, and preparations are being made at one of the theatres to give a revival of the "Black Crook."

Jay Gould is said to estimate the damage newspapers have done to his reputation at $1,000,000, and it wasn't much of a reputation to start with, either.

A COTTON-GIN FOR NATCHEZ: 1795

From Winston De Ville, F.A.S.G.

When Yankee-born Eli Whitney, a resident of Georgia at the time, perfected his machine to remove cotton-seeds efficiently in 1794, the entire face of the South and its very viscera were to be changed forever.

According to traditional historical interpretation, Whitney's easily-pirated contraption, although bearing a U. S. patent, and despite authorization, spread rapidly throughout cotton-growing regions of the southern United States; Whitney, patents notwithstanding, was out of the cotton-gin business by 1797.[1]

While the document we present below, i.e. its signatories, is for the benefit of genealogists, it is worth mentioning that prototypes of a cotton-gin had been "invented" in colonial Louisiana as early as the 1730s.[2] Moreover, two years before the Whitney patent was confirmed, a "wheel for cleaning cotton," was inventoried, matter-of-factly, in a "Ft. Bute" (Manchac, Iberville District, just down-river from Baton Rouge) succession record.[3] Furthermore, before 1775, the peripatetic Bernard Romans found a "cotton mill" at "Pasca Oocooloo" (Pascagoula); its owner, a Mr. Krebs[4] reported that French settlers had "improved" the mill so much (emphases added) that two slaves had to be employed at it, separating seeds from the cotton-fibers.[5] "Improved" implies earlier experimentation, of course, probably harking to the ginning attempts several decades earlier in provincial Louisiana. That report by Romans was made some twenty years prior to Whitney's famous advent in far-away Georgia. Whether a Natchez inventor, our subject below, merely purloined Whitney's gin, or was coevally at work on such an innovation in Latin Louisiana, may never be reconciled.

Fortunately, however, for family historians, Natchez men of 1795 witnessed the evolution of King Cotton in the Deep South, as the following statement[6] without salutation, but no doubt addressed to the Spanish governor at New Orleans (with quaint orthography retained), attests:

> We whose names are hereunto annexed, being present at the first essay made by Mr. Barcley's[7] newly constructed Machine for ginning cotton, found its Opperation in Separating the Seed from the Cotton far beyond anything of the kind that we have ever seen. In Justice to the Merit of this plan, and in order to promulgate to the World its amazing utility, we can aver that we have no hesitation in believing that it will completely gin one thousand pounds of clean cotton p[e]r day when fully set in Opperation. Given Under Our Hands [at Natchez] this 24th August 1795.
> [Signed:] Daniel Clark, John O'Connor, Lewis Alston, David Bradford, Leo. Marbury.

The La. Gen. Register Vol. XL. No.4 Dec. 1993

Employing the same citation for the records in Spain as given at note 6, folio 603 provides rather specific details as to the mechanics of Barcley's Natchez ginning operation. It would be an interesting exercise, and perhaps one of some revelation, to compare Barcley's technology with that of Whitney, an exercise to which this writer is neither inclined nor is capable of undertaking.

1. The New Encyclopedia Brittannica (15th edition: 1987). For a full treatment of the subject, based on the Whitney Papers at Yale University and related primary sources, see Jeannette Mirsky and Allan Nevins, The World of Eli Whitney (New York: 1952). More recently, see Jean L. Latham, Eli Whitney: Great Inventor (N.Y.: 1991). The writer appreciates the assistance of Wesley Saunders of Rapides Parish Library, Alexandria, La., for his thorough reference assistance.

Charles Edward O'Neill also brings up the matter in his Church and State in French Colonial Louisiana: Policy and Politics to 1732 (New Haven, Conn.: 1966); he offers excellent perspectives on the subject, and mentions the early attempts at processing cotton. For a note on cotton production towards the end of the Spanish regime in Louisiana, see still further, Winston De Ville, "Cotton and the Americanization of the Rapides Post: 1800," Louisiana Genealogical Register, Vol. XXIX, No 4 (December 1982) pp. 310-312, 325. ALFRED KREBS

"Source Material for Miss. History, Jackson County, Vol. 30"
WPA Historical Project April 4, 1939
Susie V. Powell, Supervisor - pages 165-6

ALFRED KREBS, son of Belaire and Marie Louise Krebs, volunteered for service in the War Between the States when he was only seventeen years old.

He joined Tobin's Battery at Mobile under General Maury, 1st Lieut. Mills, and 2nd Lieut. Cortez, and after training and drilling was ordered to Mariana, Florida.

It was about this time that Alfred became so ill with yellow fever that his brother Arthur was left behind to take him to a hospital for treatment.

The Coast was blockaded about this time due to the presence of the Union fleet in the Gulf of Mexico so it was necessary for Belaire Krebs family to send their trusted slave, Ausand, with a mule and wagon to Pascagoula for provisions. As he was ready to leave, he drove along near the hospital and was surprised to hear a voice calling his name. It was that of Alfred, his young master, convalescent, on the gallery.

"My boss! My boss! What you want me to do for you, Boss Alfred ?" he cried.

"Wrap me in this blanket and take me to my mother," was the reply.

Ausand quickly obeyed, but on the way they came upon Union soldiers killing the Krebs cattle near Gudes Mill. When halted, the pair (apparently 2 Union soldiers) discovered the Confederate soldier Alfred with Ausand and escorted him to Pascagoula where he was turned over to General Canby as a prisoner of war.

Ausand was allowed to go free but the mule, wagon and provisions were taken to the camp of the soldiers on the beach front.

When the negro, badly frightened, returned home and with tears in his eyes told his story, Mrs. Krebs sent word and begged permission of Gen. Canby to see her boy. He agreed but as she rushed to the wharf the gunboats were pulling out, bound for Ship Island, and she was forced to reconcile herself to the thought of her sick son a prisoner on this [illegible] for an indefinite period.

Alfred remained a prisoner for two years. Then, with others, he was taken to Vicksburg for parole. After a short stay there, he was given permission to leave for home.

With his few belongings, including an overcoat given him by his uncle Jules Sarpson (Sarpain) when he passed through New Orleans from Ship Island, he set out, ill from prison fare and homesickness for the long trek here. He was reluctantly given a lift for some distance, but when his benefactor came to the end of his way, Alfred was afoot again.

After what seemed an indeterminable time, his tired eyes spied the lane of his home and Union soldiers eating ripe mulberries from the trees there. He was so happy and overjoyed to be home that he was oblivious to the jibes of his enemies, who, seeing his army uniform, began to call:

"Johnny Reb! Johnny Reb!

His only reply was:

"I don't care for any of that. I am home now, and I am satisfied. 'Johnny Reb' all you please!"

DISCHARGE REQUESTED FOR SIDAINE KREBS of EAST PASCAGOULA
May 1, 1863

MA - Series E Vol. 61 (Pettus)

East Pascagoula, Miss.
May 1st, 1863

To his Excellency, John J. Pettus
Jackson, Miss.
Sir:

The undersigned citizens of Jadkson County, Miss., most respectfully show that our fellow citizen, Sidaine Krebs, now a member of Captain August Fairley's Company, State Militia, is a man of feeble health and not able to withstand the hardships of camp life.

Besides, he has at home a wife and several young children living in the immediate neighborhood where the enemy is liable to make a landing at any moment, when it would be important that he should be with his family.

We would in consequence, request that, after taking the above facts into consideration, that a discharge from the Service of the State be granted to the said Sidaine Krebs.

Very respectfully submitted,

P. M. FAIRLEY

For the monthly report:

Renee Gautier-Hague assisted with the planning and program for the "Historic Krebs Cemetery Tour", held on October 31st, 2006 at the Krebs Cemetery. She composed the dialogue for five of the old settlers who were portrayed, including her own role as Madame Maria Josephine de la Pointe-Krebs. The event was sponsored by Pascagoula Main Street and the Pascagoula Preservation Commission. Over two-hundred people toured the torch lit graveyard to hear the ancestors' speak on Halloween, and donations were taken for the fund to the restore the colonial cemetery.

A haunting good time

Krebs Cemetery will come to life as city's early settlers tell their tales

By BRAD CROCKER
The Mississippi Press

The past will come back to life on Halloween night in Pascagoula where the lives of residents who lived long ago will be relived at Krebs Cemetery.

And downtown, the second annual Trunk 'r Treat will provide a wide variety of fun for children to enjoy as they trick or treat down Delmas Avenue.

The first-ever Historic Tour of Krebs Cemetery will be from 5:30 to 8 p.m. on Tuesday at the cemetery, located on the grounds of the La Pointe-Krebs House, also known as Old Spanish Fort, in northeast Pascagoula.

Those buried there were some of the city's first settlers in the 18th and 19th centuries. After a 10 to 15 minute tour of the cemetery, local residents, dressed in full costumes, will play characters and tell the stories of the people buried there.

"There were some very interesting people there and we wanted to pay homage and respect to them," said Pascagoula beautification director Kevin Hall.

That event, which is being sponsored by the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission and Main Street Association, was derived after the Mississippi Department of Archives and History awarded a $250,000 grant to restore the La Pointe-Krebs House, possibly the oldest private building in the Mississippi Valley.

Because the grant money can only be used for the house, Hall said raising funds to restore the cemetery, which is just as old as the house, is badly needed.

"That cemetery is a vital part of the fort area and needs restoration really bad and it needs to be done correctly," Hall said. He said officials with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation have offered assistance on how to train volunteers to use 18th Century technology and materials to restore the cemetery and its headstones and tombs.

At Trunk 'r Treat, which won the city a Mississippi Main Street award this year, there will more than 30 vehicles lining Delmas Avenue with candy for children.

Resurrection High School will be putting on its haunted house and there will be karaoke and other fun, said Pascagoula's special events coordinator Ann Burgo.

The event was held last Halloween in the high school parking lot as an alternative to traditional trick or treating because Hurricane Katrina had damaged so many Pascagoula neighborhoods.

Moving it downtown will offer the same fun environment for families, Burgo said.

"We continued it because it's a very safe way to celebrate Halloween," Burgo said.

History comes alive at cemetery tour on Halloween

By VETO F. ROLEY
The Mississippi Press

PASCAGOULA — The early history of Pascagoula came alive Halloween night as members of the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission conducted a torchlight tour of Krebs Cemetery.

The Preservation Commission guided tour groups through four stops in the cemetery. At each stop, actors dressed in period costumes spoke about the person buried in the cemetery.

Liz Ford, chairman of the Preservation Commission, said she was pleased with the turnout. Just over an hour into the event, more than 100 people had moved through cemetery, with Ford expecting about 200 guests for the night.

"We are overwhelmed with the turnout, very pleased," said Ford, who said the event was planned only a week ago. "We wanted to raise awareness of our local heritage."

Linda Brumley, who moved from New Jersey to Pascagoula two months ago, was in one of the first groups, along with her children, Adam, Erin and Logan Brumley.

"I think it is important that people know the history of where they are living," said Linda Brumley. "I learned a little about the history of the settlers in the area and some of the heritage of Pascagoula."

"I thought it was great to learn how they raised their families and how old they were," said Adam Brumley.

Moss Point High School student Alyssa Williams said a lot of the history presented is in her Mississippi history classes. "But, when you see it presented like this, and not from a book, it brings a focus to it."

"It's different than just reading it from a book," said Atlanta resident Brice Williams, cousin of Alyssa Williams, who said the historical presentation showed a lot of the history in the area.

And, that history was in danger of being lost said Majorie Mansfield Cunningham and her mother Anne Krebs Mansfield.

Cunningham said events like the graveyard tour are "important because of our heritage. A lot of people don't realize just how deep our history is in Pascagoula."

"History preservation is really important," said Mansfield. "We have lost so much in Pascagoula."

The actors said they also learned about the history of the area by participating.

"Even though the character I was presenting was my grandfather, I had to study about him," said Richard Lucas, who portrayed wooden shipbuilder Roy Krebs. "I learned a lot about boat building in Pascagoula."

Riley Sauicer, 17, and Nelson Hague, 18, portrayed Valentine Delmas and Louis Augustus Fredric de St. Ferol, two early residents in the area.

"I like to know where I came from," said Sauicer, who said he learned that Delmas was a great uncle after he received the assignment.

Hague said the event helped him understand more about one of his ancestors, St. Ferol. "It made history a little more personal."

Besides learning, Sauicer said it was important that those living today did not forget those who lived in the past. "We need to see their accomplishments aren't forgotten," he said.

Hague agreed, saying that it was important that the cemetery and other historic sites are restored "to honor the dead."

Ford said the Preservation Commission hopes to hold the event next year.

"We hope that this will become a Halloween tradition in Pascagoula," she said, noting the historic cemetery provided a number of characters that can be used to tell the area's history. "We hope this is the first of many to come."

William Colgin/The Mississippi Pr

Nelson Hague portrays the late Louis Augustus Frederic de St. Ferol during the Historic Tour of Krebs Cemetery on Halloween night.

Hugo: I was born on May 15, 1714, on the Moselle River in Newmagen, Germany to my parents, Johann Krebs and Maria Charita Fritsch. As a young child I longed for adventure and after I read the pamphlet on John Law's concession in the Company of the Indies, titled "Detailed Historical and Geographical Description of the Great Mississippi River of North America, Situated in the Magnificent country of Louisiana, I knew I had to go. I embarked for America from Port Louis in France. When I arrived, I visited the Chaumont concession in Mississippi and met Joseph Simon and Marie de la Pointe who were among the early settlers with large land grants from Louis XIV. I fell in love and married their daughter Marie.

Maria Josephe: I'm Maria Josephe Simon de la Pointe. My father and mother, Joseph Simon de la Point and Marie Foucault, were from Quebec and came with D'Iberville and Bienville Le Moyne to settle the Gulf Coast for France. We lived on a fine plantation on Lake Catahoula(I believe that now it's named Krebs Lake, after you Dear) and my parents home was the social gathering place for all of the area's inhabitants that traveled from New Orleans to Pensacola. Hugo Ernestus Krebs was among those visitors. He was strong and kind and was a physician and an inventor. I thought he was a pretty good catch. Of course, I was too, and had a pretty decent dowry. We courted, married and were given our own tract of land and built a plantation where we raised cotton, indigo and vegetables. We continued my parents tradition of extending hospitality to everyone and hosted many baptismal, funeral and wedding parties at our place. Hugo and I were blessed with seven children, Joseph, Marie Jeanne, Marguerite, Louis Augustus, Mathias, Francois, and Pierre ...many of them and their descendants are reposed in this hallowed graveyard....

Hugo: Yes, we were blessed and we prospered. But my dear Maria died on November 7, 1751, only forty years of age. Being left with small children to raise, I left my grief and sought another mate and found one in Marianne Chauvin de Joyeuse of New Orleans. We were married in 1753 and had I had seven more children..Daniel, Antoine, Maria Theresa, Anna, Basil, Maria Rosa, and Cecelia. I continued to prosper with the cotton plantation, helped heal the sick, and invented a cotton gin that the Englishman Bernard Romans was impressed with when he visited here. In 1772, a terrible hurricane ruined all our crops and destroyed most of our buildings...luckily the carpenter's workshop was spared. And we rebuilt other houses for our family. I got sick the summer of my sixty-second year and managed to record my will with Juan Bautista Garic, our Notary in New Orleans. With all my affairs settled, I passed from this life in September of 1776.

Maria: Hugo, look who has come to visit and preside with us tonight at this marvelous affair...the wife of our dear first child Joseph.... Maria Louisa Dupont.

Maria Louisa: Yes, I'm here to remember the good times we had back on the plantation, playing on the river and going to the barrier islands. Joseph and I were in despair when we lost our little Antoine. But then our fates changed and we had the joy of watching our other four children...Joseph, Charles Renee, Marie Cecile, and Marie Josephine, marry and raise their own children...If my memory serves me correctly we had twenty-eight grandchildren. I had the pleasure of seeing most of them grow up and have their own families...I lived to be eighty and died in 1843!!!!

Marie Josephe: The inscription of your birthday Maria, December 10, 1763 is the earliest recorded date among these headstones.

Marie Josephe: Hugo...it has been 265 years since we were married. In that time our family has branched out all over the United States and our descendants number in the hundreds of thousands. Isn't it wonderful that they are honoring us here tonight and raising money to restore our graves?

Hugo: Yes dear Maria...Bless them all.

Valentine: My name is Valentine Delmas. I was born in New Orleans in 1789 to Jean Baptiste Delmas and Magdelena Raby. My parents came up from San Domingo and Papa had his own boats and a lucrative shipping business. He was a Revolutionary soldier who helped Galvez defeat the English in the War of 1812. As a very young man I traveled along the Coast doing business and fell in love and married Josephine Krebs, the daughter of Joseph and Maria Dupont Krebs. We inherited money from her family and I received a Spanish land grant of my own ...418 acres! Josephine and I had ten children...John Baptiste, Armand, Carlos, Emily Marie, Elizabeth, Hermina, Harriet, Marie Laura, Celeste and Valentine Tucker. Many of our descendants are buried here. Let me tell you a scary but true story...the Indians were so hostile in our village... a friend of ours had already been tomahawked!! that I had to take Josephine out to Round Island (it was called Turtle Island then) to be safe. We built a house there and our first child, Emily Marie, was born there in 1813. She has the historical distinction of being the first Causasian born on Round Island. We lived there until it was safe and then came back to the Pascagoula riverfront and built our home. Our children and their descendants lived in the home for over a hundred years. Unfortunately, it disappeared with the ravages of time.

I traveled to Mobile and met a brilliant Bonapartiste from the Vine and Olive Colony, Louis Augustus Frederic de St. Ferol.....

Louis Augustus: Yes, it's true as a young man of 16 I fought in Napolean's army and received the a medal of honor. After his army was defeated at Waterloo, a group of us who were exiles came to America and met in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.. We decided to create a community in the wilderness of Alabama , producing wine, olive oil and silk. Where it was then is now the city of Demopolis, AL. Things were harder than we envisioned at the colony and while I was in Mobile getting supplies I got an offer I couldn't refuse from Valentine Delmas of the village of Pascagoula, MS. He paid me six hundred dollars a year to come to Pascagoula and tutor his children. I moved there and helped Captain Delmas lay out the streets of the city, using my engineering skills. I served as the first Postmaster of Pascagoula in 1829. I tutored the Delmas children and fell in love and married the oldest, Emily Marie, in 1829. Together we had five children, Washington, Josephine, Amanda, Louis Jefferson and Hermes. We founded a successful school at the foot of the present Delmas Avenue and taught the early settlers of this area. I translated for the Senate of Louisiana and had residences in New Orleans and Pascagoula. There is no record of my death but I was buried here in Krebs Cemetery around 1840. It gives me great pleasure to be honored here this evening among the ancestors and descendants. Our spirit is truly alive in our descendants and in the memory of the town we helped found.

Renee ~ looks like it was ALL a success thanks to you and your team. Sorry I could not be there. This could become in great demand other than just Halloween. "History on call" by appointment only. Clubs, etc. for a modest fee or donation. Ha! You are a wonder and Nelson looked very Vine and Olive-ish! Very sophisticated and with a presence just like the old man surely was. To the Honorable the Judge of the Probate Court of Mobile County, State of Alabama.

Your petitioner Thomas Ellison, respectfully shows to your Honor that Francis Krebbs died in the year 1822; that he was at and previous to his death an inhabitant & resident of the state of Mississippi; that he so died leaving no assets in the said county of Mobile but assets of his estate were afterwards brought into and are now in said county of Mobile; that such assets consist of various slaves worth about five thousand dollars, as your petitioner is informed & believes. Such slaves pretend to be free and taking advantage of certain notifications in respect to that class of persons are about to remove from the state of Alabama and become lost probably to the beneficiaries & distributees of said estate, and the legatees & beneficiaries under the will hereinafter mentioned unless a special administration is granted to your petitioner or some proper person under section 1676 of the Code of Alabama. He shows that Francis Krebbs left a last will & testament, which was duly admitted to Probate in Jackson County Mississippi, the county in which said Francis Krebbs resided at and before the time of his death, that Antoine Krebbs was appointed by said will as the Executor thereof, that he qualified & acted as such Executor and took out letters testamentary upon said will under the grant of them by the Probate Court of said Jackson County; that such probate of said will and the grant of letters testamentary thereon have never been recorded in the State of Alabama, and that your petitioner has no such certified transcript of said will & its probate & the grant of said letters & said qualification as will authorize the same to be recorded here, and that if he awaits the obtaining thereof for record here, and the subsequent grant of general letters of administration with said will annexed said slaves will escape and be lost to the legatees under said will and the distributees of such legatees as may be dead. He further shows that said Antoine Krebs Executor died without ever having executed said will so far as the slaves now in the County of Mobile are concerned; and that no administration of said slaves has ever been made in any way nor been distributed among the legatees under said will and the distributees entitled to them. The slaves referred to are named as follows; viz: William Littell (calling himself Jean Batiste William Littell, John Littell, Josephine Sittell and her daughter about eight years old name unknown, Marselitte Sittell a woman about seventeen years old as your petitioner is informed and believes, and Marie Shell Sittell about fifteen years old. Children of the slave Celeste mentioned in the will of the said Francis Krebs deceased.

Your petitioner shows that by said will said Francis Krebbs gave all his slaves of which said Celeste was one to the following named persons as his legatees viz Antoine Krebs above named, Elie Krebs, Bazile Krebs, Glaudius Merilla & Polite Krebs. said Elie & Polite are also known and called by some persons respectively Hilaire & Hypolite, Of the above named legatees only Mrs Polite or Hypolite Fitzgerald, formerly Polite Krebs survives, she resides in New Orleans, in the State of Louisiana and is a widow. Antoine Krebs died in 182 or 1829, leaving the following named children as his sole distributees viz: Eugenia, now the wife of Jacob Batiste, residing at East Pascagoula in the State of Mississippi. Bazile also died ~~also~~ many years ago leaving as his sole distributees Mrs. Ellison now the wife of your petitioner Thomas Ellison of the City of Mobile State of Alabama, Corn Krebs a former sole residing at Pascagoula Miss sippi, & over twenty one years of age. H. M. Krebs over twenty one years old residing at Pascagoula Mississippi ——— and Josephine the wife of Antoine Rabbey also of said Pascagoula, all of whom were the children of said Bazile. Elie or Hilaire also died many years ago leaving the following named children: Hilaire Krebs, Evelina a femme sole and widow of Thomas Hawkins Mary the wife of Washington Grant, ~~and~~ Delphine the wife of Lafayette Grant, Zoe the wife of Manuel Diez, and the following named grand-children Richard Ryder about nineteen years old, and his two sisters names not known and both over fourteen years of age. These grand children reside with their grand-mother Mrs. Elie or Hilaire Krebs. Claudius Marilli died also many years ago without ever having married and leaving said Polite, Antoine Bazile & Elie or Hilaire his next of kin and distributers. All the foregoing named persons, except as specified are over twenty-one years of age and reside at said Pascagoula.

Your petitioner shows that unless the petition be granted he verily believes said slave will be lost to said estate and prays a grant of letter of administration upon the estate of said Francis Krebs unadministered in the State of Alabama, under section 1676 of the Code of Alabama, authorizing your petitioner to take, possession collect control and preserve the estate of the said Francis Hubert in Mobile county according to the provisions of the aforesaid Code of Alabama

State of Alabama
County of Mobile

To the Honorable John A Hitchcock Judge of Probate of the County of Mobile in the State aforesaid.

The petition of Henry G. Humphries most respectfully shews to your Honor that he was heretofore qualified in said Court as Executor of the last will of Joseph Krebs late of said County deceased, and that more than Eighteen months have elapsed since that event. He is now ready to make settlement of his accounts and distribution of the estate, with the exception of those matters which are in litigation in the City of New Orleans between said Estate and the Estates of James Perrin and Adam C Hallinger deceased.

The legatees and those interested in said Estate of said Krebs deceased are as follows, viz. Mrs Mercelite Krebs, widow of the decd. Sidonia Krebs, Mrs Corine Humphries wife of your petitioner, Lewis D Krebs, Florida Krebs and Rene P. Krebs all of whom reside in the County of Mobile and all of whom are of the age of majority except Rene P Krebs for whom the said Mrs Mercelite Krebs is guardian in said County.

Your petitioner herewith files his accounts and vouchers as Executors as aforesaid, & prays your Honor to appoint a day for the final settlement of said Estate & the distribution thereof, with the exception of such matters as pertain to the said litigation in New Orleans — And that your Honor would cause an advertisement & publication to be made accordingly & in pursuance of Law, And that said Estate (with the exception before named) may be settled and distributed,

And as in duty bound your petitioner will ever pray &c.

H G Humphries

To the Honorable A. B. Meek Judge of the Court of Probate of the County of Mobile in the State of Alabama;

The petition of Henry G. Humphries shows to your Honor that Joseph Krebs late of said County deceased, departed this life on the day of Octo. instant. having first made & published his last will & testament which is herewith presented for probate.

The said Joseph Krebs left him surviving a widow, Mercelite Krebs, and five children, viz. Sidonie Krebs, Miss Connie Humphries, the wife of your petitioner,
Louis Dujon Krebs, Florida Krebs & Rene
Krebs all residents of said County of Mobile, the two last named being minors, both over the age of 14 years

Your petitioner prays that citātions may issue to the parties in interest and that a day may be appointed when the said will shall be probated, and that the same may be duly recorded as the last will of him the said Krebs deceased, and that letters testamentary may issue to your petitioner, and as in duty bound &c. He will furnish an estimate of the value of the property & will furnish such security as may be required

Robert P. Krebs

Board member

Robert Krebs named to historical society board of directors

JACKSON, Miss. — Pascagoula attorney Robert P. Krebs has been named to the Board of Directors of the Mississippi Historical Society for a three year term, 1992-95.

Elbert R. Hilliard, secretary-treasurer of the society, said Krebs' election was confirmed at the society's business meeting in Natchez in late February.

Krebs is the second Jackson Countian to serve on the board in recent years. Mrs. Hermes Gautier of Pascagoula was elected in 1953 and William Dunn of Ocean Springs served from 1979 to 1982 and from 1990 until his death last year.

Krebs is a former chairman of the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission, which he still serves, and is a board member of the Jackson County Historical Society.

A graduate of the University of Mississippi, he has practiced law in Pascagoula since 1974.

The Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission is hosting the 1993 annual meeting of the Mississippi Historical Society.

COONEY—KREBS

Our Lady of Victories Church in Pascagoula was the scene of a beautiful wedding Tuesday, September 22, at 7 o'clock in the morning, when Miss Ruth Louise Krebs became the bride of Newton K. Cooney.

The marriage vows were solemnized with mass with Rev. Fr. P. J. Carey officiating, before an altar beautifully decorated with flowers and candles.

Prior to the ceremony Miss Edwina Irving of Moss Point sang the "Ave Maria."

The bride was given in marriage by her father, Joe V. Krebs, and was attended by Mrs. Jack Cooney as matron of honor and Misses Mathilde Delmas and Dorothy Olsen as bridesmaids.

The bridegroom was attended by E. J. Granger as best man and by Jack Cooney and Ray Cox as groomsmen.

The bride was lovely in white slipper satin fashioned on princess lines with sweetheart neckline and leg o'mutton sleeves that ended in points over the hands. Her veil of illusion was made with a coronet of lace adorned with orange blossoms. She carried an old fashioned bouquet of chrysanthemums, asters and tuberoses.

The matron of honor wore old rose satin and carried a bouquet of pink roses and shaded asters tied with pink satin ribbon.

The bridesmaids wore heavenly blue taffeta, made with long tight bodice and bouffant skirts. They carried old fashioned bouquets of pink roses and shaded asters.

A reception was held at the bride's home immediately following the ceremony, where the wedding cake was cut by the bride and groom at a lace draped table.

Mrs. Krebs, mother of the bride wore black jersey with black accessories.

For traveling the bride wore a brown and tan suit with brown accessories.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Cooney departed for a short trip to New Orleans.

Krebs Home Badly Damaged By Fire

Pascagoula, July 20.—The home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Krebs on Porter Avenue was badly damaged Friday morning about 4:20 o'clock, when fire destroyed the upper story. [illegible] Ivy, saw the flames and smoke coming through an upper window and rushed over and aroused the Krebs family, and used their phone to ring in the alarm, while Mr. Krebs started taking out his furniture, and had it all out of the house by the time the fire engines arrived.

The house is about 75 years old, and this was the fifth time it has caught on fire in the last 20 years, and the third time in the past three years. The house was saved from burning about two weeks ago, when the Baptist Church burned down next to it.

Mr. Krebs could give no reason as to how the fire started, except that the day before a lightning bolt went through the entire house, and may have started the fire then in the attic, or it may have been caused by a defective wire. The only thing that saved the house from burning further was the way in which it was built, with vertical planking, and then the other planking on top of that running horizontal, making it almost air-tight, and hard for fire to get started.

Krebs 948

Dear Mrs Kitzman -

I dont think I can help much with the Hawkins

I looked through my Krebs -

1. Did you see the "Krebs family" in Four Cent.

2. 4 Cent. only print. You might get your Library to borrow it from ours

3. Have no dates except Four Cent

Did you read L. J. Frederics Diary about Twiggs Rifles 1861

I did find a Copy of a Letter Francis B. Latady wrote to Richard Latady on Nov. 19 1966

He mentioned Anne Hawkins daughter of Richard Hawkins

I got this letter from - Regina C. Papier Rt. 1 Box 292 Social Circle Ga. 30279

His Majesty No. 351
To the Intendant, June 6, 1793

Most Excellent Sir, Don Luis de las Casas

Bundle 1442
Letter #315

Most Excellent Sir:

The captain of this fixed regiment, Don (L.C. 398) Manuel de Lansos, commandant of the post at Mobile, on the 15th of this month tells me the following:

Yesterday the 14th, Antonio Sanchez presented himself, who, according to what he says, comes as a pilot on a sloop (belandre) of the King, named San Luis, which armed eight cannons and a crew of twenty-four men in charge of a marine officer, Don Antonio Robles, left the port of Havana for Pensacola.

This pilot says that after traveling some time, they took shelter on the island called Petit Bois de Massacre having anchored there, he with two marines and the first officer, Don Manuel Ladron de Guevarra, went ashore, and while on the mentioned island, the wind was so (L.C. 399) strong that the anchors would not hold and the sloop made sail for the outside, abandoning the boat and the men who were on land, in order to avoid danger of being lost. That after quieting down, those of the boat embarked in order to reach firm land, and in crossing a good distance the wind became very strong again; the boat being very delicate and of bad construction, capsized with the first waves, drowning one marine, the first officer swimming to the mentioned island half dead, and the other two very much fatigued. That after loosing their boat, they found an old canue, in which they arrived at the house of Francisco Krebs (Kraps), inhabitant of Pascagoula, who with his neighbors received the stranded with the greatest kindness, assisting them with all necessities in order to recuperate from their misfortune, but the mentioned first officer, Don Manuel Ladron de Guevarra, died thirty-six hours after arriving at said house, without leaving a will or testament. The pilot reports that he thinks he is a native of Havana, and a brother of Madam Serrano.

The commandant adds that the pilot and the marine (L.C.400) were convalescent and expected to send them to Pensacola by the first opportunity. I am informing Your Excellency for the purpose it may serve, and you may inform those to whom it may concern. I should mention to Your Excellency that the sloop, San Luis, has been at the pass of this river since the 6th of this month; that at the urgency of its captain, Don Antonio Robles, a launch of the other crew was furnished him by the chief pilot to sail to search for his boat and people, and that afterwards he sent to Plaquemine (the early designation of what is now Fort St. Philip on the Mississippi) soliciting a pilot in order to sail with four men to Lake of Mardi-Gras to be closer to the islands where he believed he had left his boat. The commandant of Plaquemine, Don Felix Trudeau, furnished him a pirogue, and the pilot, Sebastian Buva, who has returned without having encountered (L.C. 401) any sign whatsoever of them on all of the Island, Breton, where the captain and marines think they had left their crew.

May God guard Your Excellency many years.

Mrs. Kell

Mrs. Kell dies Tuesday at age 101

A descendant of one of Pascagoula's pioneer families and the widow of one of the area's leading physicians died just before noon Tuesday.

Mrs. Laure Marie Delmas Kell, 101, died at Singing River Hospital at 11:25 a.m. where she had been confined since May 19.

Mrs. Kell, born Sept. 26, 1870, in New Orleans, La., was 101 years, eight months and 10 days old at her death.

The daughter of the late Felicie Marie Colsson of New Orleans and Judge Armond H. Delmas of Pascagoula, Mrs. Kell was the granddaughter of Valentine Delmas and Marie Josephine Krebs, a great niece of the Duchess du Chaumont and a descendant of Baron Hugo Von Krebs and Baroness De St. James.

During her childhood, Mrs. Kell's family maintained gracious homes in both New Orleans and Pascagoula. She was educated at Pinac Institute in the Crescent City.

Mrs. Kell made Pascagoula her permanent home following her graduation from the institute, around the year 1890, serving as the area's assistant postmistress.

She relinquished her postal duties in 1905 to marry the late Dr. Thomas G. Kell, a native of Pineville, N. C.

Mrs. Kell was a member of Our Lady of Victories Catholic Church. Her son, James Thomas Kell, preceded her in death on May 2, 1972.

She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Samuel D. (Marie Kell) Briggs, Pascagoula; two granddaughters, Mrs. Ernest Wilson and Mrs. Edwin Abbey, both of Pascagoula; eight great-grandchildren, all of Pascagoula; nieces, nephews and many other relatives.

Friends may call at the O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home today from 7 until 9 p.m. A Rosary will be recited at 8 o'clock tonight, by the Rev. Louis Lohan, assistant pastor at OLV.

Funeral services will be held Thursday morning at 9:30 at the O'Bryant - O'Keefe Funeral Home on Telephone Road, followed by a Requiem Mass at 10 a.m. from the sanctuary of Our Lady of Victories Catholic Church on Magnolia Street. Interment will follow at Krebs Cemetery in Pascagoula.

KNOW YOUR COAST

COAST COTTON GIN

According to all our history books, a chap called Eli Whitney, who has just previously graduated from Yale, invented the first cotton gin around 1793—an amazing labor saving device that stoked South ern antebellum prosperity into high gear.

However, here on the Gulf Coast, we know that Whitney wasn't first. In fact, he was a very belated second. He just had better public relations than our own Pascagoula boy—Baron Franz von Krebs—who not only had a cotton gin working twenty years before Eli, but one that turned out half again as much clean cotton as the later Whitney model.

If you are skeptical, you'll find the proof in the museum at Old Spanish Fort in Pascagoula, which, as you know, is the oldest building in the Mississippi Valley, and which was once owned and occupied by Baron Von Krebs. There on exhibit is a photostatic copy of the authentic record of the Krebs Cotton Gin, as seen and described by an Englishman named Bernard Romans in 1772. The original is in the Rare Books Division of the Library of Congress.

will be compleatly formed and the pods fit to gather, which will be known by their being compleatly expanded; it must now be carried to the mill of which take the following description.

It is a strong frame of four studs, each about four feet high and joined above and below by strong transverse pieces; across this are placed two round well polished iron spindles, having a small groove through their whole length, and by means of treddles are by the workman's foot put in directly opposite motions to each other; the workman sits before the frame having a thin board, of seven or eight inches wide and the length of the frame, before him; this board is so fixed to the frame that it may be moved, over again, and near the spindle; he has the cotton in a basket near him, and with his left hand spreads it on this board along the spindles which by their turning draw the cotton through them being wide enough to admit the cotton, but too near to permit the seed to go through, which being thus forced to leave the cotton in which it was contained, and by its rough coat entangled; falls on the ground between the workmans legs while the cotton drawn through falls on the other side into an open bag suspended for that purpose under the spindles.

The French in Florida have much improved this machine by a large wheel, which turns two of these mills at once, and with so much velocity as by means of a boy, who turns it, to employ two negroes at hard labour to shovel the seed from under the mill: One of these machines I saw at Mr. Krebs at Pasca Ocoooloo, but as it was partly taken down, he claiming the invention was very cautious in answering my questions, I cannot pretend to describe it accurately; I am informed that one of those improving mills will deliver seventy or eighty pounds of clean cotton per diem.

The packing is done in large canvas bags, which must be wetted as the cotton is put in, that it may not hang to the cloth and may slide better down; the bag is suspended between two trees, posts or beams and a negro with his feet stamps it down; these bags are made to contain from three hundred and fifty to four hundred weight; with about twenty slaves moderately working a very large piece of poor ground might be finely improved so as to yield to its owner a fine annual income by means of a staple which is much in demand in England, and here is raised by no means inferior in whiteness and fineness as well as length of fibres to that of the Levant.

KREBS -

XXII. The Mulberry, deserves our next notice for a two fold cloathing it provides us with.

Among my botanical articles the reader will find the description of one of this class, which I have all the reason in the world to believe to be the Morus papyrifera and which I have on page 20 of this volume distinguished by the name of Morus foliis palmatis, cortice filamentosa, fructu nigro, radice tinctoria.

This tree is found in abundance in the North Western parts of Florida: The chactaws put its inner bark in hot water along with a quantity of ashes and obtain filaments, with which they weave a kind of cloth not unlike a coarse hempen cloth; I would propose to boil the bark in a strong alkaline Lixivium, by which means I make no doubt but a very fine and durable thread of the nature of cotton, flax or hemp might be obtained; the root of this same tree likewise yields an excellent yellow dye: But I shall here treat of the article, which is most commonly known to be produced by means of the mulberry tree, this is silk: A very short time about six weeks in the year will suffice for all the labour requisite to acquire this valuable article, and that labour is so light as only need children to attend it.

The gathering of the leaves being the most laborious part of the work I would advise the sowing the seed as it were at broad cast, so that it may spring up in form of wide hedges of about ten feet breadth leaving a lane of two feet between each pair, by this treatment the leaves may be gathered by means of a pair of sheers or if the hedges are narrower the hand may do it, without the disagreable necessity of climbing trees, which is always more or less attended with some danger, and as this is a female business, with indecency.

I am convinced mulberry bushes will grow thus and yield abundance of leaves and therefore this method is eligible before groves or orchards, which take up much room and have a dirty effect during the fruit season.

All the species of mulberry trees grow kindly in Florida and some people pretend the white kind to be best, but on my strictest enquiries I could not find in what manner this affects the worms, but I would have the silk planter be very cautious if he has one kind in his nursery, strictly to banish the other, because this change of leaves is certainly the reason of some of the diseases attending the worms: The remainder of the silk culture is no more than to keep the worms well fed, and the apartment where they are kept thoroughly clean;

She Made News, Too

By PATSY SIMS
(States-Item Women's Editor)

Brian and Max Begue are proud of their grandmother.

Philip Begue is proud of his mother, and J. J. Krebs, of his sister.

And The States-Item Women's Section is equally proud of Katherine Krebs Begue:

Still remembered as a crackerjack Item reporter, she has the distinction of being the first woman ever to register to vote in New Orleans.

"Of course I know my grandmother was the first to register. Don't you think I have family pride?" Brian, 22, a Tulane law student, boasted jokingly when we began piecing together her life.

And Sister Bernardine (Mary Krebs), on the staff of a Catholic boarding school in Ohio, sighed an "oh goodness" full of memories of the many anecdotes she'd shared with her spirited sister.

KATHERINE was in her late 20s when she registered, working for the Item as a human interest writer and police reporter. Before that, she was editor of the New Orleans Bee, a French-English newspaper.

A member of the States-Item staff, who was a cub reporter on the Item at the time Katherine was there, recalls:

"She was so good, she covered everything."

Sister Bernardine remembers her late sister as "gay, very lively, very strong in everything."

"She and my mother were very much alike. They were both very independent, very active and very interested in politics.

"Katherine could tell a good story, and she liked people.

"Once when I was a novice, she sent me a picture of her with the wife of a man who had been convicted of murder. I thought it was great, but the mistress of novices told me not to show it to anyone . . it was a wicked woman," Sister Bernardine chuckled as she remembered.

"Then there was the time Katherine went to interview Enrico Caruso aboard a ship at the wharf. He wouldn't see anyone because he was upset about something that had happened in Havana.

"KATHERINE, however, managed to get word to him via his secretary that New Orleans had many prominent Italian citizens who would be disappointed if they did not get to see him.

"Caruso sent back a message asking her to meet him to have her picture taken with him. For the rest of his visit, he refused to go anywhere without her.

"She graduated from Newcomb," she continued, with pride, "and they say she was the smartest student they ever had."

Shortly after Katherine made history by becoming the first New Orleans woman to register that famous Sept. [illegible] 1920, she put aside her type-writer and political interest to marry Hypolyte Begue.

"Grandpa," Brian Begue recalls, "didn't believe in women working.

"To him, a woman's place was in the home."

What Price The Polls?

"Truth or Consequences" is a very old game.

To that, the women of voting age when the 19th amendment passed, would be the first to attest.

After reading the following item on the editorial page of the Aug. 20, 1920, New Orleans Item, they had to make a weighty decision.

"Registrar Bell says the new women voters will be required to give their true age in registering for the Nov. 1 election."

Reports on that first election in which women were able to vote show that the feminine turnout was heavy. Apparently, they decided the right to have their political say was worth telling what and corsets and rouges could hide.

My first major catalogue was published in 1954. The 69th in the series, it bore the title The Cradle of Printing and contained nothing but books of the 15th century—mostly incunabula but with a few manuscripts relating to printing. In its descriptions, this catalogue was a model of excellence, each having been prepared by my two chief assistants, Nachod and Lehmann-Haupt. Though this was less than a quarter-century ago, the prices at which these books were offered seem unbelievable today. Many of the items are unobtainable now at any price. Those which can be had today cost many times more than we asked. Among the highlights was a vellum leaf from the Fust and Schoeffer Psalter of 1457, one of the great rarities of early printing and the first book recording the printer's name, and the date and place of publication; a leaf printed by Albrecht Pfister of Bamberg about 1463, the only specimen in America of his press; the first Caxton edition (circa 1478) of Chaucer's Canterbury Tales, probably the most famous of all Caxtons and most coveted by collectors (single leaves now fetch over a thousand dollars); Dame Juliana Berners' Book of Hawking and Hunting, 1486, from a press scarcer than Caxton's, that of the anonymous "Schoolmaster of St. Albans," and without question the most celebrated of its productions; the first engraved map of Germany, by Cardinal Nicolaus Cusanus; and a unique proof sheet of the Gutenberg Bible. Such an all-star cast had not been assembled in an American bookseller's catalogue for many years. But it drew a less than enthusiastic response.

The Library of Congress, owner of the Vollbehr Gutenberg Bible, asked to have my proof sheet on approval. I sent it along with a discount of $400, making the price $1,800 instead of $2,200 as it appeared in the catalogue—a price which seems utterly ridiculous now, when ordinary Gutenberg Bible leaves bring three times that much. Yet the Library of Congress turned it down. Lessing Rosenwald ordered the Caxton Chaucer and the Book of St. Albans on approval, and likewise returned them. It was not a problem of price with Rosenwald. Both books were incomplete and, despite very dim prospects of any other copies being available in the near future, he objected to this condition. It was hard to believe. I never thought it possible that books of such stature could fail to find eager purchasers, especially at the very reasonable prices we asked. Does one ever get "stuck" with a Caxton, I asked myself, or a specimen from the Fust and Schoeffer press?

and exceptionally charming lady who encourages his collecting. Wives of some collectors consider the hobby a more than eccentric folly.

I met Schäfer for the first time in 1952, when he bought the marvelous copy of the first edition of Columna's Hypnerotomachia, Venice, 1499, from the Gotha Library (see Chapter 17); a few months later he bought the Cusanus Map of Germany, Basel, 1530 (Catalogue 69, item 37) for $3,250 (see Chapter 15), quite a high price at that time. The first engraved map of Germany, it was perhaps originally published at Rome in 1464 and reissued at Eichstatt in 1491. Of these two editions no copy is known. The plate was preserved and another edition published at Basel in 1530. This monument of cartography appealed to Schäfer, possibly because of his love for early engravings.

In his early years of collecting he moved slowly, even when prices were very low. At first he missed many opportunities; but within a few years he became an expert and made up by spectacular purchases more than he had missed earlier. The higher prices brought top material to the market and Schäfer took full advantage.

A major acquisition in 1962 was a group of illustrated books from the collection of Maître Maurice Loncle of Paris. Schäfer did not want to buy the whole collection. Therefore we agreed that I should buy it and let him have first choice of single items. Many famous illustrated books of the 15th century found their way to Schweinfurt, most of them in flawless condition. Loncle had the discriminating taste typical of French collectors. I cannot resist mentioning Petrarch's Historia Griseldis (Ulm, 1473–74); Boccaccio's De claris mulieribus, Ulm, 1473; Mer des histoires, two volumes, Paris, 1488–89; Jean d'Arras' La Melusine (Lyon, 1477–81), and several Grolier bindings in pristine condition.

One of the jewels in the Schäfer collection is his copy of Boccaccio's De la Ruine des Nobles Hommes et Femmes, Bruges, 1476, printed by Colard Mansion. This copy has all nine engravings pasted in, unlike my Arenberg copy (see Chapter 25) without the engravings.

This later copy, which had so enthralled me, drew mixed reactions from my clients. Its lack of the pasted-in engravings made the volume undesirable, despite the unlikelihood of finding a complete copy. I had, it seemed, placed too much confidence in the book by paying $35,000 for it. After having it in stock more than a year, during which it was featured in my Catalogue 80, Mlle. E. Maus of Geneva bought it for $40,000—a very modest profit, but I was glad to make the sale. After her death the volume was sold to the Morgan Library at a considerably higher price. Among those who had read the catalogue description were librarians at the University of Göttingen, Germany, who recognized in it where they lay hidden in a Genizah, or place of concealment for worn-out and disused sacred texts, to prevent their profanation.

The asking price was $100,000. Knowing what I know now, but could not possibly have known then, I would have written out a check then and there. But I was not willing to invest such an amount in a surprise package at that time. There was a question whether an expert could successfully unroll the scrolls, and whether they truly contained anything of significance. The whole text might prove to be illegible or unimportant. Perhaps those first few words were preserved and nothing else; or maybe the scrolls contained nothing more than business records (interesting historically, to be sure, but not worth $100,000). I would have to pay another large sum for restoration and deciphering, and this would require a great deal of time. Meanwhile my investment would be tied up. Even if all went well—if they could be unrolled intact and did carry significant Biblical texts—I might still find it hard to resell them. I had never handled material of this nature and had no real idea of its price potential.

Dr. Sukenik assured me that experts could open the scrolls with a minimum of loss and wanted immediate cash, before I could consult with anyone. It was vital that he raise money right away, he said, because there were other similar scrolls in the hands of peasants which he wanted to buy. "I must buy them at once before they are damaged," he explained.

I said no, to my eternal regret, and had no second chance. They never did come on the market but went into the Jerusalem Museum, to become part of the "Shrine of the Book" exhibit. The scrolls proved to be everything he so steadfastly hoped, and which I just as steadfastly doubted. But nobody wins them all.

Few private libraries from the Middle Ages and Renaissance survive intact. Unless the owner was a king or other important person, whose books would pass to his successors, a library was likely to be scattered. Even a great collection like Grolier's was eventually broken up. Only in the most fortunate circumstances would such a library be preserved, and the chance to buy one is practically unheard-of.

Nicolaus Cardinal Cusanus (1401–64), pre-Reformation priest, was one of the great minds of his era. Born Krebs, he took the name Cusanus from his birthplace, Kues or Cusa on the Mosel River in Germany. His record as an intellectual and freethinker was rivaled by few. He was a member of the Council of Basel, at which he assailed the genuineness of the 8th-century forgery, "the Donation of Constantine," which purported to be a grant from the Emperor Constantine to the Pope, Sylvester I, of temporal dominion over Rome, Italy, and the provinces, places, and civitates of the western regions. Based on this claim America was divided between Spain and Portugal.

Later Cusanus staged various crusades: on the importance of mathematics, against the mediaeval devotion to Aristotle, reform of the calendar (later undertaken by Gregory XIII, along lines similar to Cusanus' proposal). He dabbled in science too, designing scientific instruments with graduated scales, and he advanced the theory, then revolutionary, that the earth moved in orbit and was not the center of the universe. He possibly knew Gutenberg; in any event he took great interest in the new craft of printing. Another of his claims to fame was designing the first printed map of Germany, a copy of which was in Catalogue 69, my first big catalogue of incunabula (The Cradle of Printing). It was the Prince Oettingen-Wallerstein copy and was sold to Otto Schäfer.

While doing research on maps I learned that the Cusanus library, assembled five centuries earlier, was still in existence. I had no idea what it contained, but I felt I must find it. In 1949 we went to Kues in quest of it. Before long I discovered the library in the Hospital of St. Nikolaus, nestled away like a jewel in an antique setting. How it got there was not difficult to determine. In 1464 the hospital was established by the Cardinal's will, which provided additionally for its long-range support. Since the 15th century the hospital had sold wine from its famous vineyards, which were included in the Cusanus bequest.

The library and what little remained of Cusanus' personal effects could be viewed on the second floor of an ancient building in the hospital complex, an ideal setting in terms of atmosphere but one where they seemed totally lost to scholars. Father Eismann, a delightful old priest, had charge of the books. He received me and we chatted amiably. It was apparent that he had few visitors. I explained how greatly I admired Cusanus. He showed me a number of items, including some astronomical instruments of the Cardinal's design and holograph manuscripts of his works.

I could not look at any of these treasures without wanting to buy them. They seemed almost to be going to waste. Yet suggesting a sale was a delicate matter, because the Cardinal had such a personal connection with the institution, and even more so because money was not badly needed.

I decided to use the wine as my opening gambit.

"Is it possible," I asked, "to buy any of the fine wine that your vineyards produce?"

He smiled. "Which kind? We make quite a few different wines."

Descending to the wine cellars, we tasted a number of varieties. He tasted, I tasted, we supplemented our tasting with a few nibbles of cheese and bread, and had a fine time. I arranged to buy a case of one of the most expensive wines. Then, the foreplay being over, I got down to business.

"Would it be possible," I asked, "to buy one of the great Cardinal's manuscripts? To own one of them would fulfill a life's dream."

Father Eismann was not shocked at the proposal. "Come again next year, my son," he said. "Then perhaps I can do something for you."

I returned the next year, and the one after that. I kept returning to Kues during my annual European visits, paying a call on Father Eismann, tasting more wine, talking more about Cardinal Cusanus and his books. The next time, I was always promised, there might be a manuscript to buy. It never came to pass. On my fifth visit I was informed by the new librarian that Father Eismann had died. There would be no more wine-tasting, no more visits to Kues, no more hope of buying any of Cusanus' books. The collection remains intact today. The old priest was a good friend and I believe he held out the hope of "next year" to lure me back, so we could talk books and drink wine.

While staying in St. Moritz in the summer of 1947, I received the following handwritten letter on stationery bearing the name of a prominent music publisher:

Milan, 3rd July, 1947

Dear Mr. Kraus,

I am a customer of Mr. ——— and have been informed by him that you are at present in St. Moritz for a short period, and that later on you will probably spend a day or two in Geneva.

My brothers and I have inherited from our late father, who was a keen book-collectioner [sic], a very rare Italian piece, which, as we now wish to divide our property, we should like to put for sale in the States. The book is of extreme importance.

I believe the matter might interest you. I should therefore be obliged if you will kindly write to me, or wire, in which days you will be in Geneva, and at which hotel, as I should come to meet you and show you the book, which we are keeping in safe-custody in Geneva.

With best regards, sincerely yours,

I replied at once by telegram, though I had no idea what the book was, informing my correspondent that I was about to leave St. Moritz and had an uncertain schedule thereafter. I received a quick answer:

Milan, 7th July, 1947

Dear Mr. Kraus,

I have received your cable and I thank you.

I regret to hear you are leaving St. Moritz on July 12th, as I am unable to leave Milan until that date.

Anyway! The book I have written you about is Dante's first edition (Foligno 1472), a perfect specimen, with wide margins. The price we wish to obtain is one hundred & eighty thousand Swiss francs. Please let me know if you would be interested in trying to sell the book in the States, as we should be quite willing to leave it with you on deposit for 3 or 4 months.

In case you might have fixed by now your program after leaving St. Moritz, and we might therefore meet in Switzerland before you leave, please let me know by cable, keeping in mind that I should first have to go to Geneva where I keep the book in safe-custody, and therefore should not be able to withdraw it on a Sunday.

Best regards, sincerely yours,

I shall be grateful if you will keep all the above absolutely confidential.

The meeting was arranged at the Hotel Neues Schloss in Zurich. The Dante seemed an excellent specimen, crisp clean leaves, wide margins, a few insignificant wormholes, and a good solid contemporary binding. I was prepared to buy. In fact we had the check written. It amounted, after some negotiation, to the equivalent of about $30,000. I collated the copy. This was an easy task. The copy was perfect.

"Could there be some leaves in facsimile?" Hanni whispered. "It seems to be too perfect."

This possibility had not occurred to me. But then I, too, had second thoughts.

At this time the deal was as good as completed. I could not ask for more time for examination. Therefore I said, "I hope you won't object if I take a few moments to enjoy the music of the old paper? You, a publisher of music, will understand." The owner had no objection.

I was seated at a window and had the book on a table before me, bathed in sunlight. Gently I flipped the pages one after the other, sounding each with a sharp push of my finger; it gave the authentic old-rag-paper crackle. The tune of the paper should always be the same. I was not merely delighting in the "music," however. I was looking for watermarks. When I found one, it carried the number 1911. Could this be a date?

"What does this mean?" I asked the owner, who fortunately was still the owner (we had not yet handed over the check).

"I have no idea," he replied, and I believe he meant it. I had with me a copy of the Census of Incunabula in American Libraries and there, in small print, was mentioned that in 1911 a full facsimile of the Foligno Dante had been published for an exhibition in Turin, one of those exact reproductions in which even wormholes are reproduced. The 1911 binding would have given it away, but at some time it had been removed and a neat job of "remboîtage" performed, as the French call it. The book was fitted perfectly into a genuine 15th-century Italian binding and, to complete the masquerade, wormholes in the covers corresponded to those in the leaves. The owner, thinking he owned a valuable book, turned ashen. I believe he was absolutely honest. His grandfather had bought it 30 years earlier, he explained to us. Very likely he paid a great deal of money for it and was duped.

Of the great finds that I made over the years but was unable to buy, none caused quite such bitter disappointment as the Sarezzano Purple Bible. This was a manuscript of indescribable importance, equaled in age, beauty, and historical interest by perhaps only a dozen manuscripts in the entire world. I fought to overcome each obstacle standing in the way of this purchase and came within hours of owning it.

Miss Meta Harrsen, colleague of Miss Greene at the Morgan Library and author of many books and monographs on illuminated manuscripts, alerted me in 1953 that this volume was for sale. It had a romantic background, having been found in the wall of a chapel at Sarezzano, near Tortona, in Piedmont, Italy, during renovation. At some time in the far past, a monk fearful of pillagers had hidden away his prized book in a niche and covered it with plaster. There it reposed soundly, safe not only from the barbarian tribes or whatever enemy he had in mind but from the hands of collectors as well. The volume was incomplete but even in that state commanded respect.

A Biblical text in Latin, it dated from the 5th century, prior to St. Jerome's revision of the Gospels, and was transcribed on purple-dyed vellum, suggesting imperial use. (The practice of dyeing vellum prevailed in various parts of Europe until the later Middle Ages; purple was the usual color.) With the only two known 4th-century Bible codices in national libraries, the British Museum and the Vatican, it was unquestionably as early as any that could reach the market.

One must negotiate in person, I was advised. The citizens of Sarezzano mistrusted letters as much as they mistrusted checks. Should I be successful, the Morgan Library would presumably be interested. I wrote to Padre Domenico Botto, Arciprete di Sarezzano; I got, in due course, a friendly reply inviting me to come. This was encouraging.

Here the situation was quite unlike going into a library, browsing, and finding books to buy. The good people knew exactly what they had and meant to sell it—for which nobody could blame them—for the best price. It was not so much a problem of bidding against other prospective buyers, which I was willing to do, but getting there in time and having the chance to bid at all. For all I knew, half a dozen people might have already made offers. Perhaps the manuscript was already sold.

In Milan I enlisted the aid of Professor Mario Armani of Hoepli's Antiquarian Department, a connoisseur of the first rank, who had enough love of manuscripts to accept my invitation to join me. He would act as a second pair of eyes and much-needed interpreter. My Italian, though good enough for a restaurant, was not to be trusted with delicate negotiations.

We rented a car and drove to Sarezzano. The place had obviously seen better days. It was one of many old Italian villages which thrived in the 15th and 16th centuries but now suffered from a shortage of industry and noble patrons. It was very picturesque. Several local dignitaries received us, including the priest and the mayor, who was also a butcher. We were led to the only two-story house of the village, into a room where the Purple Bible lay seductively on a table. One glance told me I must have it. The script was in faint silver and gold uncials on vellum of the deepest, richest purple. "The color of emperors," I said to myself. Could it have been prepared for a 5th-century ruler? Rome still had emperors in the west until A.D. 476; they undoubtedly owned libraries; and if they possessed Bibles, which is not unlikely, none finer could be imagined.

After two hours of the liveliest haggling of my entire career (which the dignitaries seemed to enjoy a great deal more than I), we worked out a price: five million lire. This was much more than it is today, but still was reasonable considering the book's quality. All the while, as bargaining went on, a crowd of villagers milled in the street outside, aware of what we were doing. They awaited news of the outcome with as much anticipation as the election of a pope. When the priest addressed them from the balcony and announced, " La Biblia è venduta" (The Bible is sold), bedlam broke loose, a band played, there was applause, dancing, and hats hurled into the air.

"Why the celebration?" I asked the priest. "Why all this excitement?"

"I can explain," he replied. "The people have always been poor; the

H. BUDDIG, No. 389 vs. J. L. GRANT, et al. } Bill for Partition.

By virtue of the authority vested in me by a decree of the Chancery Court of Jackson county, Mississippi, rendered on the 18th day of February, 1891, in the above stated cause, I will, on at the front door of the Court-house in the town of Scranton, said county, within the hours prescribed by law for sheriffs' sales, at public auction sell to the highest bidder for cash, the following described lands in Jackson county, State of Mississippi, to-wit: That certain tract or parcel of land in Krebsville at East Pascagoula, in Jackson county, and embraced within the following boundaries, to-wit: Commencing at the western limits of the bunch of oaks situated on the beach, west of the late residence of John Grant, deceased, known as the ship-yard, thence running in a northeasterly direction so as to strike the eastern side of the edge of the marsh of Lake Yazoo, thence following the meanders of said Lake to the mouth of the small Bayou south of the present residence of W. F. Grant, thence running on a line parallel with Spring street to the line dividing Lot No. 3 from Lot No. 4, according to a plat of division made by J. E. Sarrazin and recorded in the office of the Record of Deeds of said county; thence following said line to the beach of Pascagoula Bay, thence following the meanderings of said beach to the place of beginning (there being reserved therefrom the street designated on said plat as Spring street, the same to remain open.) That certain other piece or parcel of land in said Krebsville, at East Pascagoula, known as Lot No. 1, in the back range of lots as shown by a plat of survey in the division of lands of Helaire Krebs, deceased, bounded on the south by Spring street; on the west by Lake Yazoo, and on the east by Lot No. 2, of said plat of division recorded in the Record of Deeds of said county.

That certain other tract or parcel of land in said Krebsville, know as Pointe au Sable, bounded on the north by Lake Yazoo; on the south by the beach or seashore; on the west by Lake Yazoo, and on the east by bunch of oaks on the beach known as the ship-yard, together with all that of marsh or low land lying west of the above described premises and bounded on the north by a small bayou running from Bayou Yazoo to Pascagoula River, and Pascagoula River; on the south by the mouth of Pascagoula River

R.K.

KREBS

Leo N. Krebs, 62, Pascagoula, died Saturday, Aug. 27, 1994 in Pascagoula. Born Feb. 9, 1932 in Pascagoula, Mr. Krebs was the son of Leo Francis and Marie Farragut Krebs. He retired from Ingalls Shipbuilding on April 1, 1994 after 32 years. He was a member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Loraine Richard Krebs, Pascagoula; two sons, Carey Francis Krebs and James Allen Krebs, both of Pascagoula; three sisters, Marie K. Hare, Leona K. McGinty, and Kathryn K. Griffin, all of Pascagoula; nieces; nephews; and other relatives.

Visitation will be Monday, Aug. 29, from 6-9 p.m. at O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home.

Funeral service will be Tuesday, Aug. 30, at 10 a.m. in the funeral home chapel.

Interment will be in Machpelah Cemetery in Pascagoula.

Arrangements by O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home, Pascagoula.

Miss Adele Krebs, Aged Resident, Dies Thursday

6-3-49

Miss Mary Adele Krebs, 87, native and lifelong resident of Pascagoula, died at the Jackson County hospital Thursday, June 2, at 12:01 a. m. following an illness with pneumonia.

Miss Krebs, who was a member of one of Pascagoula's oldest families, was the youngest of 12 children born to Helaire and Mary Louise Krebs, none of whom survive her.

From the time she was twelve years old she was the leader of the OLV choir until her advanced age forced her retirement. A member of Our Lady of Victories church she also took an active part in other church affairs.

For many years she taught music and was an expert seamstress. She made her home at 240 N. Magnolia where she lived with her niece, Mrs. Agnes Allen.

She is survived by 45 immediate nieces and nephews.

Funeral services will be held Friday, today, at 9 a. m. at Fails Funeral chapel with Requiem mass being conducted at the Our Lady of Victories church at 9:15 with the Rt. Rev. Msgr. P. J. Carey officiating. Interment will be in the Greenwood cemetery.

Pall bearers will be her great nephews, Melvin G. Larsen, Percy J. Larsen, Hubert F. Grant, Richard M. Grant, A. M. Pelham and Stephen W. Krebs.

Sylvester Krebs Dies At Hospital Early Wednesday

5-20-45

Sylvester Augusta Krebs, native of Pascagoula and member of an old family here, died at the Jackson County hospital where he had been under treatment since Saturday, Wednesday at 3:15 a. m. He was 52 years old and a retired employe of the U. S. Engineers. He resided at 450 Lake avenue.

Mr. Krebs was a member of the Knights of Columbus and of the American Legion, having been a veteran of World War I. He was the son of Jerome and Alice Clark Krebs, both natives of Pascagoula.

Details of the funeral had not been completed Thursday but services will be conducted either Friday or Saturday at the Fails Funeral Home chapel in Pascagoula and at Our Lady of Victories church.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Pearl Moody Krebs; a sister, Mrs. W. D. Eiland, Pascagoula; two brothers, Sidone Krebs, Pascagoula, and Leon Krebs, Trenton, N. J.

...neral will be held Wednesday morning at 9 o'clock from St. Catherine's Catholic church, Crichton.

MARY LOUISE NEW.

After a long illness Mary Louise New, widow of the late John New, died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Wooley at Mertz Station Monday afternoon at 4:55 o'clock. She is survived by five sons, Charles, John, Harry, Jesse, Earl New; five daughters, Mrs. N. E. Bellman, Mrs. J. M. Snow, Mrs. H. J. Krebs, Mrss. J. H. Wooley and Mrs. L. Lloyd; twenty-six grandchildren; eleven great grandchildren and other relatives.

The funeral will take place this afternoon at 4 o'clock from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. J. H. Wooley. Interment will be in Zion cemetery at Mertz.

MISS ANNIE E. WILSON.

The funeral of Miss Annie E. Wilson took place Monday morning at 9:30 from the funeral home of Dixon & McKay and from St. John's Episcopal church at 10 o'clock. Rev. Dr. Gardner C. Tucker conducted the services and interment was in Magnolia cemetery.

The pallbearers were: E. B. Walpole, John F. Walpole, George Walpole, Jr., J. O Wilson, C E. Wilson, and William Nagle.

AND THE WINNER IS — Lorena W. Cobb receives a copy of Photographs from the Past, the top prize in the National Historic Preservation Week Treasure Hunt, from Tom Wixon, chairman of the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission (middle) and Robert Krebs, president of the Jackson County Historical Society (right). The hunt, with clues appearing in each issue of the Mississippi Press this past week, was sponsored by the Jackson County Historical Society and the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission. To win, Mrs. Cobb identified the John B. Delmas Home on Front Street as the Treasure Hunt House.

Lorena W. Cobb has been named the winner of the National Historic Preservation Week Treasure Hunt, sponsored by the Jackson County Historical Society.

Mrs. Cobb correctly identified the structure in the hunt as the John B. Delmas home, located at 2916 Front St., Pascagoula. Clues to the identity of the treasure, provided by the society, appeared daily in the Mississippi Press.

The hunt was sponsored by the society in conjunction with preservation week activities organized by the Pascagoula Historic Preservation Commission, whose chair is Tom Wixon.

Entrants had to turn in their guesses to the Pascagoula Police Department by Friday to be eligible for prizes. Officers with the department dated and time-stamped entries so contest judges could determine who had entered the correct guess earliest.

As the first person to correctly identify the Delmas home, Mrs. Cobb was presented a copy of Photographs from the Past, edited by Wixon and containing hundreds of historic photos of local communities and families.

According to Liz Ford of the historical society, the Delmas home is a particularly apt choice as the object of the historic preservation week treasure hunt.

Built around 1823 by John B. Delmas, a ship chandler, the predominantly Classic Revival Period home has a large two-story addition, including upstairs and downstairs galleries, that was added about 1872.

All that remains today of the original home is a one-story kitchen, located at the rear of the house, which has hand-hewn sills, and a heart-pine floor. Square nails were used in the framing members.

There is a large hall downstairs, with two rooms on each side; one of these rooms, quite large, was apparently a ballroom.

The number of hurricanes this home has withstood in its 160 years on Front Street is testament to the quality of its construction. The home is presently divided into apartments, though its architectural integrity has been maintained.

To the south of the home stands the Charley Delmas home, which was built in the early 1900s. To the north was the Foster home, built by the son-in-law of John B. Delmas, and torn down by the city of Pascagoula in May of 1971.

The large white house is listed on the National Register of Historic Places, being a part of the Front Street Historic District. In late 1985, archaeologist Dale Greenwell conducted a dig on the property, locating many Indian artifacts.

The John B. Delmas home, which overlooks the Pascagoula River at the north end of Front Street, is owned by Mr. and Mrs. A.W. Penola, and is presently undergoing exterior renovations.

The builder of the home was the oldest son of Valentine Delmas and the former Marie Josephine Krebs. John B. Delmas married Mary Elizabeth Grant, daughter of Captain John Grant, and had eight children. Many descendants still live in the area.

Gentlemen;
I read your article on "The Old Spanish Fort" that appeared in "Mississippi Magic"---Summer of '76.

I am enclosing this newspaper article which might be of interest to you. As you see-- Jackson, Miss. is finally looking into it's early history to restore some of it in the form of LeFleur's Bluff-- and a park etc.

(Your) Hugo Ernestus Krebs ---- whose home was in the Fort; had a Son, named Hugo Daniel Krebs who married Louise LeFleur----who was a sister to Louie LeFleur, who founded LeFleur's Bluff--now Jackson.

Hugo D. Krebs and his wife Louise LeFleur lived in a fine mansion in Mobile, Ala. which was just torn down last year.

French Camp , Miss. has restored Louie, LeFleur's home--he moved there after he left Jackson. His son became the Famous Choctaw Indian--Greenwood LeFlore. Later a state senator. They have obtained his Coach.

I marked the paragraph where Jackson plans to direct visitors to other state sites as Columbus, Natchez, Vicksburg and Holly Springs. Since there is a family connection of this early pioneering family, I certainlly think they should include French Camp and Pascagoulea

I am writing the Committee in Jackson also. It would be a shame not to connect them;as something more is finally being planned to draw upon the past, educate and draw visitors and tourists.

If you want information on Krebs- LeFleur's it is possible that I can help, but I am sure my cousin in Kansas will be glad to--as she has spent 7 years on it and has it documented. Her address is:

Mrs. Jeannie Wilson
1816 Cherokee
Baxter Springs, Kansas 66713

(We are decendants of Hugo E. Krebs, his son, Hugo D. Krebs and Louise LeFleur)

Did you know there has been a new book on Marianne Chauvin (wife of Hugo E. Krebs) written and published this summer?

It is written by the wife of a Pro. Gary Mills from Miss. State--entitled --Cane River Creoles--by Elizabeth Shown Mills.

I am looking forward to visiting "The Old Spanish Fort" --as I have been through your town, but never visited it.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Earle Hale [redacted]

Johann and Anna Krebs had nine children: Susann 1703, Gertrude 1705, Johann Renard 1706, Johann Gerlach 1708, Catherina 1709, Anna Maria 1712, Hugo 1714, Maria Anna 1716, and Johann Peter 1721. It is said that their historical home is still standing in Neumagen.

Joseph Simon de La Pointe got a land concession Nov. 12, 1715. He built the Spanish Fort [in Pascagoula] in 1718. It was a two story home. He married Marie Foucault. They had two daughters, Marie Simon and Elizabeth, who married Jean Baptiste de La Parde and Jean Claude Dupont.

Hugo E. Krebs came to America in the 1730s. He married Marie Simon in 1741. They lived at the Spanish Fort. He was said to have lived like a feudal lord, owned slaves by the hundreds, raised cotton, indigo and rice. He was an inventor as well as a surgeon and farmer. Among the existing relics is proof that he invented a cotton gin 20 years before Eli Whitney. In 1772, Bernard Romans wrote that he saw a roller Cotton Gin on the farm of Mr. Krebs.

On Oct. 20, 1763, there is a declaration by Krebs, surgeon residing in Pascagoula, that he treated a Mr . Laporte who was brought to his residence very ill. Krebs treated him and he died Oct. 5, 1763.

The famous Cardinal-Scientist, Nicholas Krebs of Cusa, was born in 1400. His father Johann Krebs was a boat builder on the Mosel River and the Cardinal also had a brother Johann who may be an ancestor of Hugo Krebs.

Hugo and Marie had seven children: Joseph Simon 1742, Francois 1748, Pierre 1748, Marie Joseph 1745, Mathias 1747, Marguerite 1749, and Augustin 1750. Marie died July 11,1751, and is said to be buried in the Krebs Cemetery next to their home, but there is no marker. All the old graves were crumbling and overgrown with weeds.

Hugo married second Marie Ann Chauvin de Joyeuse. They had seven children: Daniel Hugo 1755, Antoine Raphel 1756, Marie Theresa 1759, Ann Charita 1762, Basil1764, Marie Rose 1766 and Cecile 1767. Marie Anne's parents were Phillip Chauvin dit Joyeuse (1707) and Marie Danys (1718).

Hugo is said to have moved to Louisiana in 1770. He wrote his will in 1776. It is believed that he died in Louisiana, but no death record has been found. His second wife made her will in July 30, 1799, in Louisiana.

The Krebs family occupied the Krebs Fort until 1930, the last being Mrs. Cecile Krebs Johnson.

Hugo and his descendants owned much of the land in Pascagoula, and some in Mobile. The old Krebs house at the northwest corner of Conti and Hamilton Street in Mobile belonged to descendants of Joseph Krebs, and they sold it in 1901. It was used as the Mobile Library.

In June 1972, all the Krebs descendants were invited to the unveiling and presentation of a portrait of Hugo Ernestus Krebs.

Hugo Krebs' descendants left their mark on the City of Pascagoula. Krebs Lake, Krebs Avenue, and Krebs Cemetery were named for them. (The History of Jackson County, Mississippi)

AT PASCAGOULA.

Mr. R. M. Hamill and wife went to New Orleans Thursday of last week and returned Sunday, bringing with them their friend, Mr. M. E. Stone, of Chicago, for a few days rest and recreation.

Mrs. Frances Wymer and niece [redacted] from New Orleans and returned on Monday, having to wait several hours [redacted] belated train.

The Catholic cemetery was crowded Sunday afternoon with people of Pascagoula, Scranton and vicinities to witness the impressive ceremony of unveiling the monument over the grave of Alfred E. Krebs by the Woodmen of the World, of which organization the deceased was a prominent member.

On the 17th inst., at 3 o'clock p. m., pursuant to a notice of the Mayor and Aldermen of Pascagoula, a mass meeting of citizens was held at the town hall to nominate a Mayor, a Treasurer, five Aldermen and a Marshal. H. F. Krebs presided and Mr. Chisholm acted as secretary. A spirited contest arose over the manner of making the nominations, whether by ballot or acclamation, and it was finally decided to select the nominees without opposition by acclamation, and by the ballot of registered voters only in case there were more than one name presented for the same office. Accordingly the following gentlemen were nominated by acclamation; For Mayor, Volney Brown; Treasurer, O. A. Greiner; Aldermen, Jas. McFaul, W. O. Clark, W. S. Dodson, A. D. Krebs and Peter Robillard, and by ballot, John E. Clark for Marshal, who received a majority of three votes over his opponent, J. A. Weinwright.

Death of Mr. W. E. Frederic de St. Ferol.

Saturday morning last at 6 o'clock, after a painful illness of two weeks, Mr. Washington Emile Frederic de St. Ferol died at his residence on Pascagoula river. He was afflicted with a cancer caused by a bite from a horse some fifteen years ago. Mr. Frederic was a native of this place and lived for many years in New Orleans, having been identified with the cotton brokerage and weighing business. He removed to Scranton and married Miss Sarah Williams, of Georgia, on August 10, 1892. He is survived by his wife and ten children and two sisters, Mrs. J. A. Donovan and Mrs. M. A. Krebs, all of this city. He was over 73 years of age at the time of his demise and was successful in his business career, having amassed a large estate. He was president of the Merchants and Marine Bank and a director of the Delmas Packing Company of Scranton.

"Mr. Frederic, as he was generally known, was a member of one of the oldest families of old and new France. His mother, Miss Emily Delmas, was the first white child born on Round or Turtle Island. She was born there in 1812 whenher parents were fleeing from the Indians, who made a descent upon Fort St. Louis de la Mobile. His father, L. A. Frederic de Saint Ferol, was of a noble family of Saint-Etienne, near Lyons, France."

The funeral was held from the Catholic church attended by a large concourse of relatives and friends, Rev. Father W. Van Brink performing the solemn rites of the church. The pall-bearers were: Messrs. Fritz D. Becht, Vincent Ros, A. G. Delmas, Isadore B. Dupont, George H. Huggins and T. P. Delmas. The interment was made in Krebs cemetery. Requiescat in pace.

In Memoriam.

In Krebs cemetery a pure Italian marble slab 8 feet 9 inches in length by 3 feet 5 inches wide, resting on a marble foundation, upon which sets a marble pillow, has been erected over the remains of the late Buenaventura J. Jane and wife by their descendants. The following inscriptions identify the last resting place of the highly respected and honored parents:

MARIE AIMEE JANE,
(nee Krebs).
Born Aug. 20, 1837; Died Dec. 4, 1884.

BUENAVENTURA JANE JANE,
Born Jan. 17, 1839; Died Aug. 2, 1903.

EUGENE JANE,
Born Nov. 17, 1878; Died Dec. 3, 1894.

RENE COX,
Born March 1, 1883; Died Nov. 3, 1901.

"Departed, but loved and remembered by all who knew them."

This beautiful tribute to their memory was executed by the well known firm of McDonald, March & Company, marble workers, Mobile, Ala.

Ladner, Cuevas among oldest Coast names

Ancestry gets new attention

By KEK FINK
THE SUN HERALD

Mattina, Creel, Mavar, Rosetti, Desporte, Swetman. All old Coast families, right?

Well, correct, but certainly not the oldest.

As the Tricentennial puts a focus on the Coast's history, some families can trace their roots and ancestries to the day discoverer Pierre LeMoyne, Sieur d'Iberville, set foot here.

A variety of family names represent the diversity of cultures that have shaped the Mississippi Gulf Coast.

But they all had to start somewhere.

Hancock County historian Charles Gray explains it this way in regard to one of the first true Coastians: "Christian Ladner had 12 children. One daughter married Ron Cuevas. From them, there are 63,000 descendants. Do not pick a fight with a Cuevas or a Ladner unless you can muster an army."

Some of the earliest residents came to the Coast aboard one of Iberville's three ships — Le Marin, La Badin and Francois — with names such as Corco, Ladner, LaFontaine and Saucier.

By 1800, there were only about 48 families, or 700 or 800 people living between the Pearl and Perdido rivers.

"They married each other, they married the Indians," Gray said. "They were all French or Spanish, and they were all Catholic. There were no schools, no churches, no law."

With illiteracy came name changes, many believe. Ladnier changed to Ladner, Sassier to Saucier, Favre to Farve, Morin to Moran. People began spelling their names the way they sounded.

Land was as abundant as seafood. But before the railroad and the rise of seafood exports, the Coast's population remained stable.

"Jacques Maturin Ladner was the first justice of the peace in Biloxi even though he couldn't read or write," said Nap Cassibry, historian. "He had two sisters. One married Jean Baptiste Fayard, and the other married a Corco. Between the two sisters and brother and their husbands, they owned all the land between Hopkins Avenue and Point Cadet."

Until 1721, people and supplies had to be unloaded at the barrier islands because the Mississippi Sound was too shallow.

When Iberville's brother Bienville began settling New Orleans, that became a more accessible port.

"From 1721 on, virtually all traffic to the Gulf Coast from Europe stopped," Gray said. "It went to New Orleans. The families that lived here became stagnant."

After the Louisiana Purchase, and just before Mississippi became a state in 1817, the land was opened to settlers. That brought a huge population of Anglo-Saxon Protestants from the middle eastern seaboard — with names such as Gray, Huggins, Cole, Evans and McCrae.

Many settled near Pascagoula, but some eventually made their way across the Coast, stopping at the Bay of St. Louis 100 years before it was bridged, then moving around the north of the bay.

What did perhaps the most for the Coast's population was the railroad in 1870.

The railroad did two things for population growth in Biloxi and Bay St. Louis.

First, it created a new way to get seafood to markets across the South and beyond, bringing in more French settlers, Yugoslavian immigrants and Italians.

Families with names such as Baricev, Sekul, Mavar, Covacevich, Mattina and Desporte settled during the 1800s, many making their living from the shrimping and seafood business.

On the other end of the Coast in Bay St. Louis, New Orleans businessmen were then able to take their families to Bay St.

Louis for the spring and summer, themselves commuting back and forth to New Orleans, making it to Canal Street in about an hour.

The Villeres, deMontluzins, Necaises and Toulmes eventually settled in the Bay.

In Ocean Springs, where the first settlement started, families entered the industries of seafood, oranges, charcoal and pecans.

Life was simple and pleasant, and families stayed.

Those who remain are descendants of that era — with names such as Krebs, Catchot, Beaugez, Graveline, Seymour and Bellman.

Mrs. J. E. Krebs
586 N. Willow Street
Pascagoula, Mississippi

Dear Mrs. Krebs,

Thank you for referring so many interesting cousins to me. Mrs. Leland King, of Atherton, California, is descended, as I am, from Agnes Krebs, daughter of Pierre Krebs. Mrs. Cecile Densoh of Birmingham is a descendant of Anna Charitas Krebs, daughter of Hugo Ernestus Krebs and Marie Chauvin de Joyeuse, a line for which I did not have any listed. I have also just learned that Mrs. Dugue J. Bendernagel of New Orleans is a descendent of Marguerite Marie Krebs, who married Juan de Gradenigo (her spelling) from Venice. I am intrigued by this, as their only son, Juan, ran off with Napoleon and died in Egypt, and I did not know they had a daughter, Aimee, who married Cornelius Voorhies. Mrs. Bende rnagel is descended from Aimee. Marguerite (above) was the youngest daughter of "the Baron" and his first wife, Marie Joseph Simon dit LaPointe.

Now for the Krebs Coat of Arms. The one which you sent me is listed in the "Almanach de Reichstap" for Krebs of Nuremberg. That city is some distance from Neumagen, and I have no proof it is the same family. However, it is similar in design, though with different tinctures (colors) to the one listed in The General Armory for Alsace (Bibliotheque National) for "Krebs de Sonne, Capitain dans le Melice" and of "Baron de Krebes, de la Ville d'Agenau". These two coats of arms had blue diapered with gold on each side where the drawing you sent me has red. I was unable to locate the arms for Krebs de Bach, or Krebsbach, which was the family awarded a Barony by Louis XIV to whom I alluded in "Music in Mourning". Therefore, I was at a loss to identify the arms he should have used, if he came from that line. Most of the Krebs arms, apart from the three mentioned above, have a red "ecrevisse" (crab) on a silver or gold field, as an obvious play on the Krebs name. The different Krebs families may have a different number of crabs, or a different arrangement of them, but they always seem to be red on either a silver or a gold field.

The "Lorraine Cross" which I used in my book was listed in the Armoral General for Alsace under "Guillaume Krebs, Gramois du village d'Echenbain". It was the only one of the Krebs arms for which I was able to find a drawing, and it appeared as I have drawn it below. I had wondered whether it actually was intended to be a Lorraine cross, or whether it could be a stylized verson of the red "crab"--however, all the heraldric crabs I have been able to find looked exactly like crawfish. Therefore, I had no good reason to doubt that it was actually intended for a cross, and I adopted it as such for my book only because it suited the purposes of my story. I have no more proof that it belonged to our "Baron" than I have for one of the red crabs, or the checkered pale you sent me.

That is about all the information I can offer at this time. If I hear anything from Trier or elsewhere I will let you know.

Sincerely, Regina Ryan

BARON FRANZ VON KREBS

Baron Franz von Krebs was born in Castle Cachem, whose towers rise above the gently flowing waters of the Mosel River in the Rhine province of Germany. What persuaded him to leave his ancestral home and become a pioneer in America is not disclosed, but in 1730 he took ship and arrived eventually in Mobile, which from that time on was his home or chief residence, though he lived in Pascagoula also, where he owned and operated the first cotton gin of which there is any local record.

The Baron dropped his title and the "von" into the ocean as he came over, and became known as Sieur Francis Krebs. He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada; he had a son, Hugo, and one daughter, Marie Josephine Krebs.

Francis Krebs married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guilorie de Isle a Guillory, his wife.

Pierre Krebs married Aline Peteet, of Pascagoula, and it is said that from that marriage are descended the Sandses and Rapiers of Mobile.

Hugo Krebs married Marie de Josieuse, of New Orleans.

Marie Josephine Krebs was married to Captain Antione Narbona, mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Ana (also spelled Anna) Narbona, became the wife of Sig. Don Enrique Grimarest, the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company; for in the Archives of the Indies at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez, the governor of Louisiana, proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile, and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

Hamilton's Colonial Mobile registers Grimarest's title as "Political and Military Governor of the Town of Mobile and its District." The town is sometimes called in the Spanish documents "Plaza de la Movila", says Hamilton. It appears that Grimarest began his governorship in 1783. It was in that year, on December 26, that he lost his wife Ana, and the burial took place in the public cemetery, possibly the one just west of Jackson Street.

A descendent of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Josieuse, but whether immediate or not is not stated, was Joseph Krebs, who, as related in the family records, married William Fisher's daughter, and it was Joseph Krebs' daughter, Corinne Krebs, who was married in great state, July 15, 1850, to Henry G. Humphries, in her father's house, Conti and Hamilton Streets.

Henry G. Humphries was a successful cotton man here before the war. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery, from Mobile County in 1861; provost marshal at Mobile, 1862-3; and enrolling officer, 1864-5. He had a long lineage, beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England, who was a member of the illustrious house of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Luch, daughter of Baron Clinton, eleventh Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy-governor of Massachusetts. A descendent, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son, Dr. W. N. Humphries, was a trustee for the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry G., settled in Mobile in 1819.

Mr. Humphries built the handsome house now standing at the southwest corner of St. Louis and Conception streets, and it was there his daughter, Marie, became the wife of the Hon. Marion Gaines, of Austin, Texas. It is now the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin, a daughter of the late O. J. Hood.

It may be mentioned tha t the old Krebs house, northwest Conti and Hamilton streets, lately removed, was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; in 1866, by Mrs. M. Krebs; in 1878, by L. D. Krebs, and in 1886 by Miss Florida B. Krebs, by whom, in 1901, it was sold to the Mobile Library Association.

A few stray ends may now be knotted and the work will be as complete as the material at command permits it to be. There is a note about Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose daughter Sieur Francis or Francois Krebs married. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJosieuse, whose names play some part in this narrative, and Dubas, Senac, Petat and Vivia, whose names do not. The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company, September 7, 1717, to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis of France and general of the marine in Louisiana (in 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

Death of Mrs. Charplaux.

Isabella, wife of Mr. Ernest Charplaux, died suddenly at her home in this place Sunday night at 10 o'clock. She had retired for the night, and only a few minutes afterwards she called her daughter, Mrs. Joe Johnson, to her bedside and said she was dying. In a few minutes she was dead, brought on, it is supposed, by heart affection.

She was 60 years, 6 months and 8 days years of age; born in Pensacola, Fla., and had been a resident of Scranton about 40 years. By her first husband, Sidwine Krebs, seven children were born to her, and one by her second marriage. Her remains were laid to rest Tuesday morning in the Krebs Cemetery, Rev. Father Oliver officiating. She was a devout member of the Catholic Church, universally esteemed, and leaves the community in sincere sorrow over her demise.

Dear Mrs. Wilson:

Answering your letter of April 5, let me state that my amateurish research has been confined to my own direct lines in every direction that I can find, and I find this such a collosal task that I have been forced to ignore collaterals. However, I think I can add a little to the information you give in your letter. I am also taking the liberty of sending copies of this letter to:
Miss Kernaghan, who sent me copy of her letter to you,
Mrs. J. E. Krebs, who has helped me so much,
Mrs. Forsyth, the competent Archivist at our cathedral, past president of our society registrar of our society, and wife of the first president of our society, also to
Miss Regina C. Rapier, 1157 University Dr.,N.E., Atlanta, 30306, my second cousin, whose lifelong research eclipses anything I can do for you.

THIS COPY FOR RITA

Through Mrs. Krebs and Miss Rapier I have learned, after publishing my family book, more facts than it contained. Do not be alarmed at the different way the name is spelled. Aren't C and K the same letter? How else would you get Caesar and Kaiser meaning the same thing? Our ancestor's name was HUGO ERNESTUS KREBS. He was born May 15, 1714, at Nieumagen, which is now in Germany, but has gone back and forth between France and Germany. Nieumagen is on the Moselle, in what they call the Diocese of Trier. But when this city is in France, it is called Trevès. However, when Hugo was born, my research says they were Polish subjects. The Queen of France was daughter of the King of Poland, who helped her husband defeat Germany, so France placed the Diocese of Trevès as a Polish protectorate for the balance of the Polish king's life. The parents of Hugo Ernestus Krebs were Johannes Krebs and Anna Charitas Fritz. (A recent letter from Germany spells the parents' names as Kriebs and Fritsch.)

I am at a loss to tell you why this man, well educated as a protegé of the Bishop of Trevès, came to our country; neither is it clear whether he came directly to Pascagoula, Mobile, Pensacola or the "lost German colony" supposed to have been in Florida. You should get a reprint of J. Hanno Deiler's The Settlement of the German Coast of Louisiana and The Creoles of German Descent, printed in 1909, but recently reprinted by the Genealogical Publishing Company, Baltimore. Professor Deiler was a native German, Professor at Tulane, and visited my father in 1907 and 1908 while writing his book, because Father was a descendant of Krebs, while Mother was of Ory, his wife Strassbach and Engelhardt, from the Palatinate not far from Nieumagen, settled in Maryland and came to Louisiana near Bâton Rouge (I think to escape the American Revolution. The English fought with hired Germans.)

(Every evening I sit with my wife in the same two rockers that Father and Prof. Deiler sat in - I was 9 or 10, and sat on the steps and listened.)
Professor Deiler had found Krebs' will in the Notarial Archives of the Parish of Orleans, but from his death until about six or eight years ago it was "lost"; until it was again found and a copy came to me by a circuitous route, I translated it, and it has been published in the New Orleans Genesis, Vol. X, No. 38, March 1971. I think they sell for 2.50 back issues and that there are a few left. Don't miss this. I made a few errors, but there were some gross errors in the will itself, that were cleared up by another descendant who came from his ~~second~~ first wife, as ~~you~~ do. I am from his first.
He had 12 children: 5 by Lapointe and 7 by Chauvin de Joyeuse.
I am preparing a paper for publication in our June issue which will bring in Marianne Chauvin de Joyeuse.
In his 1776 will (all in Spanish) he lists the eldest child of the second marriage as Hugo, and gives his age as 20. A chart prepared by Miss Regina Rapier gives this same son's name as Daniel Hugo, b. 1755, m. Louise LeFleau 1786, but there her record stops. You are securing Daniel Hugo's baptism from Mrs. Forsyth, why not also ask for his marriage? It is in St.L.C. Marriage register Vol. 2, p. 46, act 132, and reads Hugo Daniel Creps (sic) and Luisa Lefleau. Dated 21 Feb. 1786. The Spanish priests translated the given names to Spanish: e.g. Luisa.
I wouldn't just get a certificate, but order two things: (1) a xerox copy where you can see the original signatures, and (2) a typewritten translation, which Mrs. Forsyth does very well.
The officiating prelate was the very famous Fr. Antonio de Sedilla, who some historians say was sent here to firmly establish the Spanish Inquisition. He left, but some time later, after the Louisiana Purchase, he returned and became very popular. In fact, Père Antoine Alley, the 1-block long street that Mrs. Forsytn's office is in, is named in his memory and honor.

This is as far as I can help you, but from Hugo, Jr., down you seem to have it. I am very fond of Dr. Cain's work, have a copy and have even read every word of it. However, in my own line he seems to contradict the St.L.C. record, and I have accepted the latter. After the second Mrs. Krebs died, there was a good bit of litigation and at least one deposition contradicts the cathedral record. These legal documents are locked up on the Cabildo, but are now being microfilmed by the Church of Jesus Christ (Mormon) of Salt Lake City, thanks to the energy of Mr. Forsyth.

I hope this helps you.

Sincerely yours,

George Sénac Rapier

Man dies in accident

From Staff Reports

VANCLEAVE — A Vancleave man was killed in a one-vehicle accident Wednesday night at the intersection of the Wade-Vancleave Road and Mississippi 57.

Jackson County Sheriff's Deputy Doug McArthur said Ronnie Krebs, 54, 16509 Lake Drive East, the lone occupant of the vehicle, was pronounced dead at the scene around 11:30 p.m.

Jackson County Deputy Coroner Mike May said Krebs died from massive blunt trauma.

Apparently Krebs was headed westbound on Wade-Vancleave Road, also known as Miss. 614, and failed to stop at the intersection with Miss. 57, May said. Krebs' vehicle then went off the road and into an embankment, May said.

The sheriff's department is still investigating the accident.

KREBS

Ronnie N. Krebs, 54, of Pascagoula, Miss., died Wed., Sept. 1, 1999 in Vancleave, Miss. Mr. Krebs was born July 27, 1945 in Pascagoula and had been a lifelong resident. He was a member of First Baptist Church in Pascagoula.

Survivors include his mother, Eva Garner Krebs of Pascagoula; son, Michael J. Krebs of Vancleave; three brothers and one sister-in-law, Michael E. Krebs of Pascagoula, Steven Leo Krebs of Pascagoula, Robert L. and Karen Krebs of Vancleave.

Wrongly released man apprehended

■ Archie L. Williams arrested without incident

By TODD TWILLEY
Mississippi Press Staff

PASCAGOULA — The man mistakenly freed from Pascagoula jail earlier this week has been found and arrested.

Police said Archie L. Williams, 20, of 1105 Polk, was arrested on Jackson Avenue around 1 p.m. Wednesday by Detectives Vernon Smith and Jeff Pacey.

Williams was released early Sunday morning instead of Ladarius Simmons. When the jailer called for Simmons to be bonded out, Williams walked out instead, taking Simmons' possessions with him, police said.

The two, along with five others, had been arrested after what police called a "near riot" in the Waffle House parking lot around 2 a.m. Sunday.

The incident began after Waffle House security guard Edward Powers attempted to arrest Gregory Jackson, 23. The incident further angered the crowd, causing the entire Pascagoula patrol shift, criminal investigations units, four Jackson County Sheriff's deputies and three Moss Point units to respond.

Pascagoula Police Capt. Jamie Hunter said Williams was arrested without incident.

Bullied high school student commits suicide

FREEBURG, Ill. (AP) — A 14-year-old who was just four days into his freshman year in high school committed suicide after being tormented by bullies, his father said.

Andrew Rudy killed himself with a shotgun last week in the basement of his parents' home. His father, Earl Rudy, said his son had been tormented for "four days straight" by other students before the suicide.

"He was always a happy son, always friendly to people," Rudy interviewing Andrew's classmates Wednesday to determine who may have been involved in the harassment. Police said they've found evidence of verbal harassment, but no criminal acts.

"If we find that there was any criminal act committed, then we are certainly going to go for charges," said Chief of Police Steve Flater.

School officials said they are focusing on a small number of students.

PICHONS OF ST. TAMMANY

Submitted by: Nina Pichon Boudreaux

FRANCOIS PICHON, a native of Bordeaux, France, son of ANDRES PICHON and JEANNE DOULAY, arrived in Louisiana between 1805 and 1809 with his wife, JEANNE BONQUIE and two known children: JEAN (JUAN) born circa 1795 and who died June 9, 1809, and buried in St. Louis Cemetery #1, and EUGENIA born about 1805 in France. She married Jan. 21, 1822 (St. Louis Cathedral) ISADORE GALATAS, son of VICENTE GALATAS and MARIE DE LA PENA. EUGENIA died in Bonfouca, La. in 1867. FRANCOIS PICHON and JEANNE BONQUIE had one other known child born in New Orleans, La. and baptised at three months at St. Louis Cathedral the 29th of August (?), 1809. She was given the name EUGENIE ODILE. She married Nov. 3, 1834 (St. Louis Cathedral) ADOLPH PENA son of RAPHAEL PENA and LOUISE SIBILOT.

FRANCOIS PICHON married a second time on Sept. 14, 1813 (St. Louis Cathedral No. 395 Book of Marriages 3 pg. 131) GENOVEBA DUBUISON (DUBUISSON), native of Mobile born Aug. 6, 1783 daughter of FRANCOIS DUBUISSON and ANNA DE LA CARIDAD KREPS. She was baptised May 1, 1783. (St. Louis Cathedral) GENEVIEVE died Sept. 12, 1841 and is buried in the Old Dubuisson Cemetery near Slidell.

The known children of FRANCCIS PICHON and GENEVIEVE DUBUISSON are as follows:

1. JEAN HYPOLITO AVENEL PICHON born in New Orleans in 1815 married CLEMENTINE LAURENT born Nov. 28, 1820 and baptised Jan. 4, 1821 (St. Louis Cathedral), daughter of GUILLAUME LAURENT and DOROTEA MONICA GONZALES. (For this LAURENT family see Vol. 1 No. 1 of L'Heritage.)
2. MARIE CAMILLE PICHON born in New Orleans and baptised April 17, 1816 (St. Louis Cathedral). She married ANATOLE COUSIN, SR. MARIE CAMILLE died Apr. 20, 1893 and is buried in the Old Dubuisson Cemetery.
* 3. FRANCOIS SIDONE PICHON baptised Aug. 22, 1818 (St. Louis Cathedral), married under the name SIDONE PICHON Dec. 26, 1839 (St. Tammany Courthouse, No. 282. Marriage license and bond same date #482.) to MARIE ADELE CARRIERE daughter of FRANCOIS and MARIE CRYER. He died April 6, 1896 and is buried in the Old Dubuisson Cemetery. MARIE ADELE CARRIERE was born Nov. 10, 1822 and baptised Dec. 29, 1824 (St. Louis Cathedral). She died Nov. 6, 1876 and is buried in the Old Dubuisson Cemetery.

* Irdicates my line.

Pascagoula, Miss.

The Pascagoula Indians, a Choctaw tribe, gave their name to the area. In 1699 Iberville and Bienville landed near Ocean Springs and built Fort Maurepas. They later explored the Pascagoula area. The settlement of Pascagoula resulted from John Law's "Compagnie des Indes Occidentales" chartered in Paris in 1717 to exploit the mineral wealth of Mississippi. John Law's stockholders included Antoine de Chaumont and his wife Marie Catherine Barre--the "Dame de Namur" later known as "Duchesse de Chaumont." The first expedition in 1720 was led by Joseph Simon de la Pointe and included his daughter Marie Josephine. Later Admiral Dupont took command. The widowed daughter of the Duchesse, Madame de la Prade, came. About 1723 Hugo Ernestus Krebs (Baron, Doctor) came from Alsace via Canada. The "MISSISSIPPI BUBBLE" burst but the settlers remained.

coats of arms had blue diapered with gold on each side where the drawing you sent me has red. I was unable to locate the arms for Krebs de Bach, or Krebsbach, which was the family awarded a Barony by Louis XIV to whom I alluded in "Music in Mourning". Therefore, I was at a loss to identify the arms he should have used, if he came from that line. Most of the Krebs arms, apart from the three mentioned above, have a red "ecrevisse" (crab) on a silver or gold field, as an obvious play on the Krebs name. The different Krebs families may have a different number of crabs, or a different arrangement of them, but they always seem to be red on either a silver or a gold field.

The "Lorraine Cross" which I used in my book was listed in the Armoral General for Alsace under "Guillaume Krebs, Gramois du village d'Echenbain". It was the only one of the Krebs arms for which I was able to find a drawing, and it appeared as I have drawn it below. I had wondered whether it actually was intended to be a Lorraine cross, or whether it could be a stylized verson of the red "crab"--however, all the heraldric crabs I have been able to find looked exactly like crawfish. Therefore, I had no good reason to doubt that it was actually intended for a cross, and I adopted it as such for my book only because it suited the purposes of my story. I have no more proof that it belonged to our "Baron" than I have for one of the red crabs, or the checkered pale you sent me.

That is about all the information I can offer at this time. If I hear anything from Trier or elsewhere I will let you know.

Sincerely, Rennie Rivers

TORRICELLI-KREBS

The following announcement, taken from The Daily Herald, Wednesday, November 22, will be of much interest to relatives and friends here:

Miss Mary Grace Krebs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Krebs, was married to Joseph Paul Torricelli, son of Peter Torricelli, Sunday morning, 7:00 o'clock, at nuptial high mass, Father P. J. Carey officiating in the double ring ceremony.

They were attended by Miss Eunice Mae Krebs, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and Alexander P. Torricelli, brother of the groom, as best man.

The bride wore a newberry wine, colored suit with matching accessories and a shoulder corsage of pink chrysanthemums and red roses. The maid of honor wore a grey suit, corresponding accessories and a shoulder corsage made of a pillar of gold roses. Ava Maria was sung by Miss Rita Anna Irving of Moss Point.

Both the bride and groom were graduated from O. L. V. class of 1934. Following the ceremony the young couple left for a honeymoon through Texas. On their return they will make their home in Biloxi where Mr. Torricelli is manager of the Auto-Lec Store. Nov. 24, 1934

Krebs, Joseph Vincent
June 18, 1980

KREBS

Joseph Vincent Krebs Sr., 86, passed away Monday at 2:15 p.m. at Singing River Hospital.

Born March 19, 1894, Mr. Krebs was a lifelong resident of Pascagoula and resided at 4612 Lanier Ave. Mr. Krebs was an Army veteran of World War I and a retired bridge foreman for Jackson County. He was a life member of ~~the Knights of Columbus Council 1605~~ and American Legion Post 160.

Mr. Krebs was a member of Sacred Heart Catholic Church and the Elmer Joseph Grant Veterans of Foreign Wars Post 3373. A former District Three supervisor for the county, Krebs had been engaged in boat building in the area for many years.

Mr. Krebs is survived by four sons, Joseph V. Krebs Jr. of Moss Point, Bobby T. Krebs Sr., Billy Ray Krebs and Stephen F. Krebs, all of Pascagoula; three daughters, Mrs. C. W. (Mae) McGrath Sr. of Pascagoula, Mrs. Ruth Cooney of Sherman Oaks, Calif. and Mrs. Joyce Calhoun of Pascagoula; 25 grandchildren, 11 great grandchildren, nieces, nephews and other relatives.

Visitation will be tonight from 6 until 10 p.m. at the O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home in Pascagoula. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m.

Funeral services will begin at 10 a.m. Thursday at the funeral home followed by Mass at Sacred Heart Catholic Church at 10:30 a.m. with the Rev. Bernard Farrell, pastor, officiating. Interment will be in Greenwood Cemetery.

O'Bryant-O'Keefe Funeral Home in charge of all arrangements.

World War I veteran has many memories

By SHARON STALLWORTH

At the age of 86 years, life-long Pascagoula resident Joe V. Krebs has many memories of this area as it used to be. And though industry has proliferated and population increased several times over, a lot of things remain the same.

For example, many Pascagoulans, especially those around 10 or 11 years of age, have heard vaguely disquieting rumours of the 'haunts' of Longfellow House. These ghosts supposedly take the form of tortured slaves (or perhaps, damn yankees). Krebs recalls as a young boy, going soft-shell crabbing along the beach and "running like hell" past the Longfellow House, which was then known as the Buskin place. The haunts then took the same form as the haunts nowadays with the slaves reportedly being tortured with lead poured in their ears.

Krebs also recalled a fellow from New Orleans, name of Major Hesse, who used to come to Pascagoula and stay on the beach at a ballroom-cum-hotel. (The ballroom was closed down when shenanigans there threatened the staidness of other, more settled residents.) Major Hesse had a spyglass with which he examined the moon when it was full. He prophesied to the then-12-year-old Joe, "One day, someone's going to visit up there."

"We thought he was about half-cracked," says Krebs.

Krebs also remembers when hospital facilities in Pascagoula were not exactly up to the standards they now employ. "There was this old black woman named Chloe that used to be the midwife here," he said. "She would just go around to whoever needed her." Of Krebs' seven children, he says only the last two or so were born Singing River Hospital.

He saw the first plane to fly over Pascagoula, "round about 1906 or so. Scared the chickens." He fought in World War I against Kaiser Wilhelm in Germany with six or seven other volunteers from Pascagoula. There was no draft at the time.

Krebs held several different jobs in Pascagoula before his retirement. "I've been lucky," he said. "I always had a job, even during the Depression. I made $250 a month then as a supervisor and that was good money for the time."

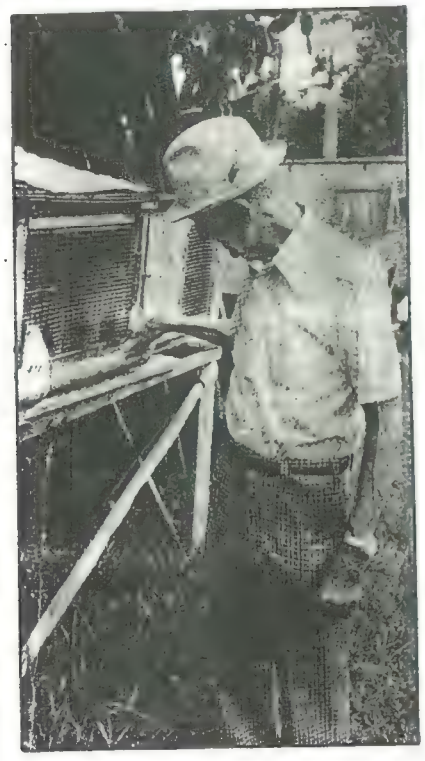
He built ships at Piago's, which built ships for the Italian government before it sold out to another builder and became known as Ingalls Shipbuilding. He was one of the first proponents of the Gulf Coast Research Lab and proudly displays a certificate of recognition from that establishment. Finally, he built bridges, some 40 of them in Jackson County, he estimates, until his retirement 16 years ago.

Today, Krebs still builds boats — small fishing skiffs. Length of time until completion varies, however. "I work until I get tired, then I quit."

He also raises chickens in the backyard of his Lanier Street home, which he and his wife built together, and he makes fishing nets — 144 of them in the past six and a half years.

Krebs knows of no reason for his longevity. "Smoking didn't kill me," he said, displaying his pipes. "But I've never inhaled a breath of smoke in my life. Maybe that had something to do with it."

Of the many Krebs in the Jackson County area, most are some progeny of Joe Krebs, being one of his seven children, 28 grandchildren or seven or eight great-grandchildren. From a busy and full retirement, he looks back on a busy life.



No spring chicken

Joe V. Krebs replenishes feed supplies for the chickens he raises in his backyard. An incubator is occupied by a baby chick raised by one of his great - grandchildren's class.

144th net

Joe Krebs helps fill his retirement years by making fishing nets by hand. In six and a half years he has finished 143 nets, and he now puts the last touches on number 144. (Staff Photos by Jon Mitchell)

Bold Robbery.

On last Saturday night a daring and bold robbery was committed upon the store of Mr. E. Blumer, at Mots Point, by some parties unknown. They effected an entrance by boring into the shutter of the front door and taking out the nut that held the screw, which enabled them to lift off the shutter. They then cut out a pane of glass, run their hands through, unbolted the door, and walked in.

Mr. Blumer informs us that they stole clothing, shoes, hats, soap, and other things of the finest quality, not even omitting the finest brands of liquors, to which they freely helped themselves. His loss will not fall short of $200, probably more. This is the second time within a year he has been raided upon by thieves. At the time of the robbery several of Mr. B.'s hands were asleep up stairs over the store, and the thieves must have been well posted or they would have surely been heard.

brighter than the sun, suddenly becomes ten thousand times darker than the darkest regions of chaos when death is its conqueror? If a soul is unprepared how can it be brighter than the sun?

He (Innocent) has a poor opinion of christianity when he states it is but a disguise for Julians—another name for apostacy.

"We are trying to gain the promised reward by working contrary to the teachings of the church; we are trying to rebuild the temple; you act contrary to the dictates of nature; but there is death that will make you regret it." Will death make "Innocent" regret nothing? and does he not act contrary to the dictates of nature that he ceases to use the pronoun we in the two last phrases of the above sentence? Is his protestant friend any worse than himself?

What consolation will "mea culpa" be when death stares his friend in the face, if that friend had sinned? I am inclined to think from "Innocent's" article that his friend is past redemption. Pity him (the protestant) oh, ye christians. Is death even despair is repentance, and God forgives at the eleventh hour those who are penitent.

How any one can live long and do good after receiving such an article from a friend I cannot see. If I had been the recipient I would conclude that my sins were so heinous that forgiveness was impossible. "Innocent," carry thy good works to a religious paper.

Newton County is Sound.

The following resolution was adopted by the Newton county democrats at their convention recently held:

"That we exhort every true patriot to beware of the dismemberment of the democratic party. (If any man has any peculiar doctrine or view let him fight for it within the party.) That we consider any man who, in the emergency, deserts the party, an enemy to our best interest, and, indeed, to the stability of the government, since the democratic party is the conservative element of the nation."

DeJUZAN-HOLLINGER-INNERARITY FAMILIES

AND

GENEALOGY AND HISTORY NOTES ON:

COLON, ROCHON, TROUILLET, DENOUY AND VON KREBS FAMILIES AND CONNECTIONS

The introduction of the name of Innerarity on the Gulf Coast at both Pensacola and Mobile was when the firm of Panton, Leslie & Co., opened for business. Panton divided with Mather the commerce of West Florida, and Pensacola became their head business before extending to Mobile, and after doing so, Mather & Strother disappear, and John Joyce (their successor) turned contractor. As merchants of Mobile, Panton, Leslie & Co. petitioned for a vacant lot on Royal Street running back from the river, bounded north by the land of Miguel Eslava, south by vacant land. As granted September 16, 1795, the lot had 60-foot front and according to Olivier, the Spanish governor of Mobile, was eligibly situated for commercial purposes. It was the northeast corner of Royal and Government Streets, extending eastwardly to the river.

Panton, Leslie & Co. had not been long in possession before they determined on a great improvement. At that time Royal Street as the front street, and Panton, Leslie & Co.'s lot was only one of a number of lots extending from the east side of Royal Street toward the river. Their motive was to improve the shallow lagoon that ran between a shell bank that ran the entire length of Royal Street near the shore and created in summer a stagnant and offensive odor. It also interfered with ready access to water of loading depth. The firm determined to fill the marsh out to the shell reef, and therefore filed a petition in due form. It was warmly endorsed by the Spanish governor Olivier, and on April 25, 1798, was granted by Gayoso.

The firm of Panton, Leslie & Co., which be an this reclamation, was destined under that and the later name of John Foster & Co., to attain to great importance at Mobile and Pensacola. It was composed at first of John Forbes, William Panton and John Leslie.

Panton was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and, moving to America, he aquired property in South Carolina and Georgia. The American Revolutionary War made him a refugee, and by 1785, if not before, he was in business in Pensacola. He made a specialty of the Indian trade, in which the firm was sided by the celebrated chief Alexander McGillivary, who if said to have been a silent partner. By 1709 Panton, Leslie & Co. are said to have carried at their chief store a stock of $50,000, for they had extensive skin-houses and employed clerks. Their fleet at one time consisted of fifteen schooners, and they had branch stores at St. John's, St. Mark's, St. Augustine, Mobile, and a trading establishment at Chickasaw Bluff (near modern Memphis, Tenn.) on the Mississippi. John Forbes was once in their house at New Providence, but in 1793, when he was twenty-four years old, he was in Mobile with a home and testifying he was a member of the firm. In this proceeding he is spoken of as an Englishman of Tensaw (ingles de Tinsa). In 1799 when Ellicott visited Mobile and the vicinity, found him residing in Mobile. The change of name of the firm was in 1804, on the death of Panton, who lived at Pensacola. John Forbes was the son of James Forbes and Sarah Gordon of Scotland, and at least two sisters outlived him in the old country. In the latter part of his life John Forbes was to live at Matanzas, Cuba. It is said he never married, but left two daughters.

On the withdrawal of the interests of Panton & Leslie, the brothers John and James Innerarity took their places. All were related by blood or marriage. John and James were the sons of John Innerarity and Henrietta Panton, the sister of William Panton of this Indian trade firm. John Innerarity was born at Aberdeen, Scotland, November 11, 1783. The date of James Innerarity's birth is not given.

The old Custon House in Mobile, St. Francis and Royal Streets, marks the site of the stores of Forbes & Co., whose property also included St. Francis Street, and even beyond to the north, for in Spanish times this was no thoroughfare, says Hamilton. The southern-most 90 feet was bought October 12, 1801, by Panton, Leslie & Co. from the widow Augustin Rochon. It extended back 213 feet to St. Charles Street (present St. Joseph Street). William Simpson, on behalf of the firm, paid $800 in drafts on the royal treasury. From here the main business of Panton & Forbes was done.

The American Historical Review (Vol. 2, pp. 701) gives the following on James Innerarity:

"James Innerarity, native of Scotland, came to the United States in 1796, and was leading clerk in the celebrated trading establishment of Panton, Leslie & Co., who had been engaged in a mammoth trade with the Southern Indians from the year of 1783. This firm had six houses besides its principal establishment at Pensacola. In 1803, James Innerarity became a partner. He resided in Mobile and took great interest in all public matters, and in 1817 was president of the commissioners of the town of Mobile. The members of this firm in all periods of existence were Scotsmen and all related. They were influential with the government under which they lived, and exercised unmeasured control over the Indian tribes with which they dealt."

The Rev. John Davidson in his "Inverarie and the Earldom of Garioch", published at Edinburg, Scotland, by David Douglas (and at Aberdeen by A. Brown & Co.) in 1878, gives extensive references to the Leslies and the Pantons, the connections of the Innerarity family.

Marquis James, the writer whose novel "Andrew Jackson and the"Border Raider" was published in the early 1830's, wrote to Mr. Lewis A. R. Innerarity (2 Recior Street, New York) the following of James Innerarity, the head of Forbes & Co. of Pensacola:

"Innerarity spent his time alternately between Pensacola and Mobile, in both of which places Forbes & Co. maintained a trading house.....There is very little in print on Innerarity. Paron & Bassett's biographies of Jackson mention him... It is possible that R. L. Campbell's "Historical Sketches of Florida" may have something to say about him, but in main my vague picture of this interesting man was put together from casual reference here and there, derived from the study of a vast number of manuscripts, and from my perusal of General Jackson's report to the Secretary of State of the Vidal Incident. This is printed in the American State Papers (Foreign Relations 4, and Misc. 2) and is voluminous. In full I would say that it runs as long as my entire book. Reference to Panton, Leslie & Co. and its successor Forbes & Co., and to Innerarity and various others I have found in copies of the Spanish archives in the Lawsch-McGhee Library in Knoxville; retired classified files, creek and Seminole, in the Indian Bureau at Washington, Etc....."

A letter of Mr. Lewis A. R. Innerarity (2 Rector Street, New York) gives the following later valuable Innerarity notes:

"My Grandmother Johnstone was the youngest daughter of Dr. James Brown Johnstone of Kircaldy, Scotland. He was, I am informed, a distinguished professor at the University of Edinburg. He married a Miss Green, the daughter of William Green, a banker of Dublin, Ireland. Dr. Johnstone had eight sons, one of whom (James T. O.) was knighted by Queen Victoria for distinguished services. He was a surgeon of the 33rd Foot Regiment, and, I am told, saw service in the Crimean War.

"My grandfather, John Forbes Innerarity, was educated at Oxford University, and took his medical degree at the University of Edinburg. I believe my father now (1934) has his diploma. My grandfather's bible contains the following entries:

1. James Francis Hamilton Wemyss Innerarity....28 September 1838 Kircaldy
2. John Williams Gillespie Innerarity....8 October 1839 - La Heloisa
3. Elizabeth Jane Marie Louise....31 May 1841 - La Heloisa, Mantazas (Cuba)

DIED

November 1, 1868: John Forbes Innerarity (about 56) - Corner of Ann Street and Old Shell Road, Mobile, Alabama

January 22, 1880: Fanny W. J. Innerarity (about 63) - Second Street, New Orleans

"My father tells me that his grandfather (James Innerarity) Married a Spanish countess, who owned very large coffee and sugar plantations in Cuba. He does not know her name. There are a number of court records involving litigation over land owned by the family. I am sorry I haven't the citations available here. One was decided by the U. S. Supreme Court (circa 1908) and is reported (I think) in 203 U. S. Reports. The title is Forbes et al vs. Dalcour. It gives a very long list of heirs. One million nine hundred odd thousand acres of land in Florida were involved. My father was one of the defendants. Another suit in the Alabama courts was decided sometime between 1910 and 1913, involving the land comprising substantially all of the business district of the City of Mobile. There are two other Supreme Court cases in which the Innerarity's figure. One is reported (I think) in 11 Wall.

"I understand that there is a Fred Innerarity (the Rector in charge of the Iscopal Cathodral of Toronto, Ontario) who has a full family history; but I have ver communicated with him.

"Douglas' Baronage, printed in about 1760, shows seven Barons of Innerarity... a straight line originating in about 1260, the original ancestor being the an- stor of the present Duke of Argyll (or Airlie) family. This publication contains tensive references to the Innercarority (or Inverquharity) family, and shows a imber of family trees in which John and James Inverquharity appear. I procured copy of this work (in two volumes) from London for about $12.50. Douglas' aronage is out of print, but I procured Photostats of the pages (Four) for $2.50 om the New York Public Library....."

"My cousin Mrs. Joseph Alfred Blythe (586 Walnut Street, New Orleans) can doubt- ess give.....a great deal more information about the family than I. In fact I have ever made any effort to compile any data; and the information I have, outside the ible record, resulted from my inquiry of the Librarian of the New York Public Library after I had read of the exploits of the "Knight of Inverquharity" in Sir Walter cott's "Quentin Durward".) As you doubtless know, the letters "nn" and "NV" are sed interchangeably in Scottish names. The letters "quh" are pronounced as "wh" n "where".

"Mrs. Blythe is the daughter of my aunt Mrs. Leslie DuCros (nee Helena Victoria Innerarity) of New Orleans..now deceased.

"My father (L. M. Innerarity of Laurel, Maryland) advises me that Messrs. Hamilton, Kinnear & Beaton, Q. C., of Edinburg were trustees under my Grandfather's will, and should be able to give all desired information." "James Innerarity married beautiful Louise Trouillet, and in his own or her name (says Hamilton) acquired land."

The government of the Mobile district was, of course, military at first..with a general in charge....During the Creek war the territorial legislature of Mississippi (on January 21, 1814 - after the battle of the Holy Ground) passed an act for the incorporation of the Mobile citizens. Under it, on March 11, 1814, a meeting of the inhabitants was held at the house of M. McKinsey with Josiah Blakely in the chair, and it was resolved to hold the election at the dwelling house of Wilson Carmon. These residences cannot be identified, but were no doubt like the few Spanish one-story buildings (or story and a half with dormer windows) still re- maining in Mobile. Lewis Judson, James Innerarity and B. Dubroca were appointed commissioners (inspectors we would now call them), and Innerarity and Samuel Acre (the Lawyer) formed a committee to prepare a few translations of the Act into French, to be posted up conspicuously in public places. These peaceful affairs were con- temporaneous with General Jackson's march to Horse Shoe Bend. The polls were ac- cordingly opened at Carmon's on Monday, March 14, from ten to four o'clock. Lewis Judson, James Innerarity, B. Dubroca, P. H. Hobart, T. Powell, A. Robesbow, and S. H. Garrow were duly elected Commissioners of the town of Mobile: Miguel Eslava treasurer, Michael McKinsey collector, and Dominique Salles assessor....a mixture (says Hamilton) of the old and the new stocks. How many property owners were there to vote we do not know, but three years later at a similar election, only seventeen voters were mentioned, although we have the names of over a hundred male residents.

The next day the Commissioners were sworn in to office by Josiah Blakeley, as one of the justices of the quorum of Mobile County. James Innerarity was elected President, and McKinsey clerk. On March 16th, a business meeting was held, its first acts being the appointment of a committee on rules on motion of S. H. Garrow, and then a resolution establishing the boundaries of the town and of the three wards, and also one fixing the tax rate at twelve and a half cents on the hundred dollars. The town limits began at Choctaw Point, then ran due west to where a perpendicular line due north would strike Murrell's Ford over Bayou Chatoauguay (Three Mile Creek), thence down that creek to the east side of the river, thence south to the beginning. These are substantially what the boundaries have now long been; but an act of the legislature of December 1, 1814, made them triangular, running from Choctaw Point to a place 200 yards above the Portage on Bayou Chateauguay, thence down the bayou to its mouth, thence down the river and bay to the place of beginning.

The above information shows with the beginning of Mobile as a town at the beginning of American times and places James Innerarity as a prominent and res- ponsible asset by his election to the first City Commissionnas "first commissioner executive. He was often referred to by his previous business connections as the managing man for Forbes & Co., and Zadek's old corner (SW Dauphin and Royal Streets) was owned by that progressive firm. It can be noted that the progressiveness of James Innerarity was a "go further" spirit, and that from the gabled Church of the Immaculate Conception at NW Conti and Royal Streets to Dauphin Street and thus in- cluding Van Antwerpt's corner, was later the property of James Innerarity, who seems to have acquired it from John Joyce.

James Innerarity was elected president of the new or second board of Commissioners of Mobile (1815), although Lewis Judson was also a member. During Innerarity's in- cumbency on the board, the construction of Water Street took place from Government to the market place at Dauphin Street. This great improvement, giving Mobile its first street east of Royal Street, was accomplished during this and the next year (1815-1816), largely by the cooperation of John Forbes & Co. and Lewis Judson, who moved their fences voluntarily and contributed to payment of expense in consideration of a grant claim to lands between the projected street and their fence to the west.

Appearing in the Mobile Daily Commercial Register and Patriot (July 11, 1838) is the following notice published in both Spanish and English, and among the oldest of the later records of American Mobile, with which James Innerarity had a part:

A LITERAL TRANSLATION OF THIS NOTICE INTO ENGLISH:

"This Society was organized the 16th of June last, by a very large meeting of Spanish subjects and citizens of Mobile, held at the dwelling place of Don Miguel de Salava (#92 Royal Street). The object of the meeting was stated by the Vice-Consul of Spain, and the following officers were unanimously elected:

President: Don Miguel de Eslava
Vice-President: Don Jayme (James) Innerarity
Secretary: Don Bartolome Lopez
Treasurer: Don Eugene Latady

Directors: Rev. John Bazin, Don Claro Fernandes, Dr. Don Fernando Moreno, and Don Ramon Sota

The Rt. Reverend Bishop M. Portier was elected an Honorary Director, with the privilege of a vote and of the Chair.

The object of this Society is to promote the prosperity of the Spanish citizens residing in Mobile; to extend the hand of beneficence to their fellow-countrymen who may immigrate hither, and to relieve generally the necessities of the unfortunate, the orphan and the widow."

Note: The Don Miguel de Eslava (correctly Don Miguel de Siderio de Eslava - or, as he always signed himself: M. D. Eslava) was the eldest son of the Great Don Miguel de Eslava, who figured as Spanish Commissary of Mobile, and who died before 1824.

The French dramatist Marc Antoine Jacques Rochon de Chabannes, who was born in Paris January 25, 1730, and died there on May 15, 1800, was a connection of the Mobile Rachon family. Rochon de Chabannes wrote a great number of successful comedies, published under the titles: "Theatre" (1786). Also "Slowful Nobility" (1756) and "Philosophic and Moral Discourse" (1768). A rare copy of his "Le Jeleux" (comedy in five acts in free verse) sold for a high price at the American Art Association - Anderson Galleries, Inc., New York City, on Tuesday November 27, 1934.

The above shows that as both d'Iberville and de Bienville were both titles added to the sur-name of LeMoyne (e.g. "Sieur d'Iberville", "Sieur de Bienville", "Sieur de Chateaugue", "Sieur de Ste. Helene", and the other titles on the brothers Lemoyne); so "de Chabanes" was added to the name of Rochon. The Coat-of-Arms of Rochon de Chabannes, if located through records in Paris, could be added and incorporated into the Coat-of-Arms of the families of Preau, Colin (or Colon), Troillet (originally de Trouillet), DeMouy (or DeMuye) and the later in-marriages of de Juzan and Hollinger, etc., and even the Irish family or clan of Powers. These families all had coats-of-arms, some retaining and some dropping their inheritance and marks of rank.

HISTORICAL FAMILIES OF ROCHON, COLON AND TROUILLET

The family of Rochon went early with the first settlers to Canada in the 1600's from France; and, on the colonization of the vast Province of Louisiana by Iberville and Bienville, Charles Rochon (a native of Montreal) came with the first settlers to Fort Louis de la Mobile at Twenty-seven Mile Bluff, and then later at the second site (or present Mobile). He married Henriette Colon, who died at Mobile on March 1, 1733. Their son Pierre Rocnon became the master contractor of Mobile. Family tradition says that Charles Rochon was a tall and stately man with a friendly personality and disposition.

Of the children of Charles Rochon and his wife Henriette, we trace in the Mobile Catholic Church records:

(1) Therese Rochon - who married Pierre Brossard (a habitant of Mobile), and whose first son (Pierre) was born June 18, 1706 at the first Mobile. A second son (Francois) was baptized on February 19, 1710.

(2) Marie Therese Rochon - who married Jean Crespeau, and had a daughter(Marie Josephe) born March 20, 1719.

(3) Charles Rochon - born at present site of Mobile January 5, 1716, and baptized January 6, 1716.

(4) Pierre Rochon I - (the master contractor of Mobile) born October 14, 1717, at Mobile, and died in the late summer of 1771 (perhaps of yellow fever). He married at the age of 21 the beautiful Catherine de la Rochelle (the daughter of Andre Pierre de la Rochelle and his wife Jeanne de l'Isla de Cevan). Their son Pierre Rochon II succeeded to his father's contracting business at the latter's death in 1771.

(5) Henriette Rochon - born February 17, 1720
(6) Marie Josephe Rochon - born March 17, 1722...baptized April 6, 1722.
(7) Louis Augustin Rochon - baptized May 14, 1724
(8) Constance Rochon - (perhaps) married Jacques de la Soussaye.
(9) Marguerite Rochon - born April 23, 1731
(10) Olivier Rochon - born February 1733...baptized March 2, 1733.

Pierre Rochon II, son of Pierre Rochon I and Catherine de la Rochelle, married Catherine Pauz (or Panx or Pons). Their children were: (1) Pierre Rochon III - baptized October 9, 1739; (2) Charles Rochon - baptized July 9, 1741, his godfather being his uncle Charles Rochon.

The Colon family is mentioned many times in the Catholic colonial records of Mobile. There are Louis Colon, Anne Renee Colon, Marianne Reuvielle Colon, and Margauerite Colon (who first married Francois Slenaon, and then Joseph Barbeau - the master tailor of Mobile). These may be sisters and brothers in immediate line to Henriette Colon (the wife of Charles Rochon), but at any rate they are of very close kinship. The old Catholic records are somewhegre in giving us definite proof. There is also Jean Colon - born November 5, 1707; and a daughter (unnamed) - baptized September 19, 1709; also a son (unnamed) - baptized September 19, 1709 (these two latter may have been twins). There was also another son (Antoine Colon) - born December 20, 1712....and another daughter (Marie Therese Colon) - born & baptized on January 11, 1715.... and also another unnamed daughter - born and baptized on July 10, 1722. All these lattar children named here (from Jean Colon on) were the children of Jean Colon, who married Marguerite Prot (or Preau).

We find next in this line that the Rochon blood passed into the Trouillet block by the marriage of Marguerite Rochon (born April 23, 1731) - the daughter and ninth child of Charles Rochon I and his wife Henriette - to Charles Trouillet. The ceremony was performed in the little church of La Notre Dame de la Mobile, near or about the present intersection of Monroe and St. Emanuel Streets, outside the southwest bastion of Fort Conde de la Mobile. Family tradition says this was a unique and lovely wedding: the slaves all dressed in livery and brass buttons and plumed hats followed the family and wedding procession of friends to the little church, and later served the many guests, many from both New Orleans and Biloxi, at the long improvised tables in the flower garden of the Rochon home.

Reference to the judicial records of Mobile gives much valuable information on property ownership and belongings, and Hamilton tells us the Spanish Commandant had some duties much pleasanter to read of, and it is hoped pleasanter to perform, than taking possession of other peoples' property. An instance is found in the matter of contract for marriage between Monsieur Pierre Trouillet and Demoiselle Isabelle Norbonne on May 18, 1786.

Hamilton further states it recites the groom's father and mother, Charles Trouillet & Marguerita Rochon - and the Bride's, Antoine Narbonne and Marie Josephe Krebs. Friends participated in the arrangement, such as Jean Chastant and Narcisse Brortin, Valentine Dubroca and Louis Dubroca - besides the bride's parents (she being a minor). The instrument provides for a Catholic marriage to occur as soon as either requests it; that neither is liable for the ante-nuptial debts of the other, but that they shall hold in common all property (movable and immovable) according to the custome of Spain...all other custome being renounced. The estate of the bride consisted of a ten-year old negress named Julie (worth 300 hard dollars); while Trouillet brought into the community 8,000 piastres in money, slaves, etc., of which he gave a dower of 750 piastres (hard money). In case of death of either without children, the survivor should receive the whole property. All was executed before Commandant Favrot.

From the Mobile judicial records as well as the Church records, we find Monsieur Pierre Trouillet (son of Marguerite Rochon and Charles Trouillet) marries Demoiselle Narbonne (Narbona in the Spanish records) on May 18, 1786, the daughter of Antoine Narbonne and Marie Joseph Krebs - which brings the Krebs family and connections into the Trouillet family and blood. Another son Jean Trouillet marries Isabelle Chastang, while another daughter Louise Trouillet married James Innerarity. The former was the parents of Marguerite Trouillet - born in Mobile on the 6th of November, 1785, and baptized July 7, 1786. Some of the Trouillet family members went back to Canada or to reside in New Orleans, when the British took over Mobile. However, it is found that these today spell the name in two forms: the old and also "Troullier" or "Trouillier" (pronounced the same as the old and original name.

The Krebs' blood comes into the connections of this family history by the marriage, as we have seen, of Demoiselle Isabelle de Narbonne (Narbona) to Pierre Trouillet. The following family history of Baron Franz von Krebs and his connections bring into light many notable people:

Baron Franz von Krebs (born in Castle Cashem), whose towers rise above the flowing waters of the Mosel River into the Rhine province of Germany). He married a daughter of Joseph Simon de la Pointe and Jeanne Puluot of Canada (his wife). From this union were three sons:

(1) Francois Krebs - who married Marie Louise de Belle Isle, daughter of Moreau Augustine de Belle Isle and Marie Louise de Guillorie de l'Isle a Guillory (his wife).

(2) Pierre Krebs - who married Nina Peteet (Petite ?) of Pascagoula. It is said that from this marriage are descended the Sanduses, Frys, Demouys and Raplers and descendants of Mobile.

(3) Hugo Krebs - who married Marie de Josleuse, of New Orleans. Marie was the cousin of Madame Jan Dlard (nee Francoise de Nau), plantation owner and army officer in Haiti. M. Dlard & Mme. Dlard were the parents of Francois Dlard, who came to New Orleans at the turn of the 18th century and married Eugenie Kapicault, the daughter of Therese Billeron (the cousin of Bienville) and her husband Renee Kapicault, of Ste. Geneviave and New Orleans. M. & Mme Renee Kapicault were also grand-parents of Joseph Krebs Dlard (of New Orleans and later of Mobile), who married Adeline Jourdan. The latter couple were the parents of Charles Dlard - who married Sarah Antonia Parker (of Mobile), the daughter of Louise Adelaide DeLage (of Mobile) and Robert Monell (a native of Albany, N.Y.).

(4) Maria Josephine Krebs - who married Captain Antoine Narbonne (or Narbona)... mentioned as belonging to the French Navy. Their daughter Anna Norbona (she spells her name the Spanish way) became the wife of Don Enrique Grimarest.. the most distinguished figure in the whole ghostly company. For, in the archives of the Indes at Seville is a copy of a letter signed by Don Bernardo de Galvez (the governor of Louisiana) proposing to the King of Spain that Don Enrique, Captain in the Regiment of Navarre, be made governor of Mobile. The date of this document is May 26, 1781. There are in the same archives two other papers relating to Grimarest. One announces his promotion to be lieutenant-colonel for "distinguished merits contracted at the capture of Mobile" (in 1780); and the other is the royal license granted Grimarest to marry Dona Ana Narbona.

A descendant of Hugo Krebs and Marie de Joyleuse (but whether immediate or not is not stated) was Joseph Krebs. As related in family records, he married the daughter of William Fisher..the owner of the Fisher Tract and other property in Mobile. His (J. Krebs') sister Josephine Krebs became the progenitress of the Delmas Family of Pascagoula and Mobile, and another sister, Emeranto Krebs, married Eugene Lafady.

Corinne Krebs was married in great state (July 19, 1860) to Henry C. Humphries, in her father's house at NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets in Mobile. She had for her bride's maid her stately sister Miss Florida Krebs, long an early socialite of Mobile.

Henry C. Humphries was a notable man of Mobile (said to be very handsome), and was a successful cotton man before the War Between the States. He was a member of the secession convention in Montgomery (from Mobile County) in 1861; provost-marshall at Mobile, 1862-63; and enrolling officer, 1864-65. He had a long lineage beginning with Sir John Humphries, a native of Dorsetshire, England..who was a member of the illustrious House of Bohun. Sir John's wife was Lady Lucy, daughter of Baron Clinton, 11th Earl of Lincoln. Sir John was deputy governor of Massachusetts. A descendant, John J. Humphries, moved to Columbus, Mississippi, and there engaged largely in cotton planting. His son Dr. W. H. Humphries was a trustee of the Mississippi College for Women, and his son, Henry C. Humphries, settled in Mobile in 1819.

One of the handsomest edifices and residences was the house that stood on the southwest corner of St. Louis & Conception Streets in Mobile (until torn down and built over by the first Greyhound Bus station). And it was there his daughter Marie Humphries became the wife of Hon. Marion Baines of Austin, Texas. This beautiful old Humphries home for many years before demolition became the home of Mrs. Nina Hood Boykin (daughter of the late G. J. Hood).

RE the old Krebs home, NW corner of Conti and Hamilton Streets: It was occupied in 1865 by Louis D. Krebs; by Mrs. M. Krebs in 1866; in 1878 by L. D. Krebs; and in 1886 by Miss Florida Krebs, by whom (in 1901) it was sold to the Mobile Library Association, and became the site of the first Mobile Public Library. When the Library was moved in 1926, the old home became the property of J. Howard Wilson...and later by H. Hoffman.

There is a note about the Chevalier de Belle Isle, whose lovely daughter married Sieur Francois Krebs. The chevalier arrived in these parts June 4, 1721, on the good ship Portefaix from France, along with DeGuillorie and DeJoyleuse (whose names play some part in this family history and narrative) and Dubas, Senac, Petat (Peteet ? or Petite ?) and Vivia (whose names do not). The archives in Paris record a grant under the charter of the Western Company (September 7, 1717) to Count M. A. de Belle Isle, chevalier at the court of Louis 14 of France; and general of the marines in Louisiana (In 1730). Belle Isle appears to have come over to occupy his grant and grow up with the country.

Going further back into the judicial records of Spanish times in Mobile, we find for the first few years transactions are in French (or in both French and Spanish). But as the hold of Spain grew stronger, hers became the sole official language. The Trouillat division of 1786, before Commandant Favrot, was in French, but others were altogether in Spanish.

On March 15, 1786, we find Pierre Trouillet petitioning for the dissolution of the partnership with his brother Jean Trouillet, and for division of the property... Pierre wishing to leave for New Orleans. Jean Trouillet was the husband of Elizabeth Chastang, and they were parents of Marguerite Trouillet, born in Mobile on November 6, 1785, and baptized July 7, 1786.

The neighborhood of old Fort Louis de la Mobile (the first Mobile settlement at 27-Mile Bluff on Mobile River) was not deserted, for in 1792 the Widow Rochon obtained the very site, named "The Bluff", described as "land 12 arpens front by 40 deep, being a piece of land called "The Old Fort", distant about nine miles from this place, situated on Mobile River". A short distance below this James Innerarity established a cotton plantation on which to work the negroes of his wife, Eloise Isabelle Trouillet, as she owned a number accustomed to agriculture. He applied for a tract "40 arpens on the river by 30 deep, situated on both sides of a small spring (bottom commonly known by the name of Fond de Lourse) (otherwise the Old Fort Spring)". It was situated between the plantation belonging to Dubroca and St. Philip and that of Rochon's at the Old Fort on the river. B. Dubroca and Peter Chastang testify that the tract is vacant, and Perez grants it April 6, 1809, the Intendancy being closed. Two years later we find a grant to Isabelle Narbonne bounded on the north by (James) Innerarity's habitation and on the south by that of St. Philip.

A map of Township #2 North Range East Land District Southern Part of Alabama, Surveyor _____ and examined and approved January 26, 1849 (and signed by James H. Weakley, the Public Lands in Alabama)....shows us 240 acres with a full frontage on the Township marked "4" owned by Augustin Rochon (next south of the land of James Caller..#3 _____ property was several miles above the meeting of the Tombigbee and the Alabama (to _____ Mobile River).
